Only One MGM Session

MGM, dropping the idea of an eastern division meeting at Cleveland, will have only one session, in Chicago, June 21, 22 and 23. In attendance will be exchange managers, salesmen and home office executives, with Felix Feist, general sales manager, presiding.

Monogram held its third and final regional meeting at the Park Central Hotel in New York last weekend, with W. Ray Johnston, president, and Edward Golden, general sales manager, in charge. Present were sales representatives from New York, Boston, Albany Philadelphia, New Haven, Washington and Pittsburgh.

At the Universal meeting, Mr. Laemmle, declaring he was aware of the current agitation against unfit pictures, said: "I believe the situation is being painted blacker than it really is. I think the average motion picture is clean and wholesome. There are some exceptions, I am sorry to say, but the exceptions are few, indeed, when you consider the great number of good pictures being turned out."

He expressed pride in Universal's record, declared the company has made progress in the past year and expressed definite optimism for the future. "I begin to see daylight ahead," he said. Addresses at the final session were made by John LeRoy Johnston, studio publicity director; E. T. Gomersall, Frank McCarthy and Robert Harris. Mr. Grainger, Mr. Gomersall, Sidney Singerman and Eddie Bonns left for Chicago and a Midwestern session at the Drake Hotel for salesmen and bookers in that territory on Monday of this week.

Among the Paramount executives who left the home office in New York this week for the Coast convention were: N. F. Agnew, M. B. Comerford, A. Deane, S. Dembow, Jr., Max Fleischer, R. M. Gillham, J. Hicks, G. J. Schaefer, Ulrik Smith, J. J. Unger, President Adolph Zukor, E. J. Zukor. En route, additional executives were picked up in Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, while others will travel directly from their individual headquarters to Los Angeles.

Paramount Executives Enroute

Showmanship will be the keynote of the coming season's product, declared Adolph Zukor, Paramount executive, prior to his departure from New York for the convention. "The production organization is geared, as never before in its history, to handle any type and size of film product," he declared. He pointed to Paramount's total of 69 players, 29 directors and 51 writers under contract.

Warner's regional convention in Chicago will be presided over by Gradwell Sears, in charge of western and southern distribution. From the home office, with Mr. Sears, have gone H. M. Warner, Major Albert Warner, A. W. Smith, Jr., S. Charles Einfeld, Norman H. Moray, Joseph Bernhard, Harold S. Bareford, Carl Leserman and Sam Sax, Vitaphone production head.

The final meeting of the Warner series will be held at the San Francisco Hotel in San Francisco, June 18 and 19.

Radio Meeting June 18

It is anticipated that about 250 of the Radio sales personnel will be in attendance at the Chicago meeting June 18, according to Jules Levy, vice-president and general sales manager. Branch managers, salesmen and executives from home office, studio and foreign offices will be present.

Merian C. Cooper, who resigned as executive in charge of Radio production, plans a trip to Pompeii, Italy, for the purpose of obtaining accurate background material for the first of his two spectacle pictures, "Last Days of Pompeii," part of the 1934-35 Radio program.

The Biograph Studio, in the Bronx, New York, will resume activity June 19, when Select Productions puts into work the first of a scheduled 12 features. "Frankie and Johnnie," made by Chester Erskin, was the last production at the rejuvenated Eastern plant. All of the 12 will be the work of well known authors, declared William Saal, president of Select. Burt Kelly, Mr. Saal's associate, will be executive producer. The formation of Select by Mr. Kelly and Mr. Saal is their initial venture since K. B. S., controlled by them in association with Sam Bischoff.

"Woman in the Dark," by Dashiell Hammett, will be the first into production. The script was prepared by the author, Mr. Saal and Mr. Kelly.

Monte Brice, formerly associated in Rowland-Brice, has organized Monte Brice Productions, Inc., which has been chartered at Albany. Details of production plans have not been completed by Mr. Brice as yet.

Loew Canadian Dividend

Marcus Loew Theatres, Ltd., has declared an accumulation dividend of $1.75 per share, payable in Canadian funds June 30 to stockholders of record June 15, with non-residents subject to a five per cent tax. Arrears will total $43.75 per share after this payment.

Cleveland Group Seeking Dual Ban

M. B. Horwitz, Cleveland exhibitor leader and head of the Washington Circuit there, is in New York this week, following approval by 92 exhibitors of an agreement providing for the elimination of double features in Greater Cleveland. Final disposition of the problem in Cleveland now rests with Warner and Loew, Mr. Horwitz declared, and he is seeking signatures of these two circuits to the agreement. He is acting as official representative of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association.

"The circuits have been complaining about the evils of double features," he declared. "I'm here now with every Cleveland exhibitor's name. Doubles are out when these two circuits sign."

No decision had been reached following early negotiations with circuit representatives. The agreement would become effective on July 8 to continue through the 1934-35 season. Banning doubles, it does not eliminate vaudeville and defines a feature as a film of more than 4,000 feet. A legal opinion obtained by the parties to the agreement declares the arrangement does not violate either federal or Ohio anti-trust laws.

In Cleveland Warner is using the double feature at three houses, and Loew is operating under a similar policy at one house regularly and at two the last half of each week.

Cullman Reappointed Receiver for the Roxy

Howard S. Cullman, receiver for the Roxy theatre in New York, was reappointed to that post last week by federal judge Francis G. Caffey for an additional term of six months, beginning June 18. The court also approved the six-months' report of the receiver.

This week Mr. Cullman was named trustee for the theatre under the new bankruptcy law. Carlos Israels, representing 65 per cent of the first mortgage bondholders, declared there is no deal under way to provide for the closing of the house at this time. He said three deals for the theatre are being considered.

Roxy Cuts Scale

The Roxy theatre in New York has instituted a new admission scale for all seats, ranging from 25 cents to 2 P. M., 35 cents to 7 P. M., and 55 cents to closing. The children's price, 15 cents all times, remains in effect. These prices are to maintain throughout the week.

Scott Assumes Post

Harry Scott has taken over his duties as United Artists' St. Louis manager. He had previously been connected with the NRA at Washington and prior to that held executive sales posts with Pathe.

Joins Advertising Firm

Walter I. M. Fleishman, formerly handling motion picture tieups for Norman D. Waters and Associates, has joined the Blackstone Company, New York, advertising firm, where he will handle similar work.

HOLLYWOOD FAST WAKING UP TO EXHIBITOR OPINION, SAYS SCHALLERT

Drama and Film Editor of Los Angeles Times Says Studios No Longer "Know It All," or at Least Conceal It

By EDWIN SCHALLERT
Drama and Motion Picture Editor, The Los Angeles Times

For once in many long years the producers of Hollywood pictures and the exhibitors throughout the country are near a common understanding. In production, at least, there is more openmindedness. The film-makers are willing to hearken to the wants of the trade. Hollywood no longer "knows it all," or, if it does, is concealing the fact more diplomatically.

Efforts are even being made to sound out the theatre man's opinion, to obtain the real lowdown. I know, for instance, of one studio (which, unfortunately, must be nameless) which, in an elaborate way, recently asked for confidential information through its distributors as to what types of star and picture were doing the best business at the box-office. I know of a director who plans a country-side search via airplane to determine just what the men think about the pictures he delivers, as well as others. I know of a star who was very much agitated recently over the information coming from theatre men to the effect that she might be a short-lived sensation.

A New Mental Attitude

This all represents a new mental attitude, an attitude that was more forecfully reflected, also, than ever before in connection with the recent official gathering of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and subsequent meetings. Hollywood is willing to learn from such conclaves, as well as any other possible sources, the standpoint of the theatre man; is willing to take his judgment into account, and act upon it in the providing of entertainment.

Breaking up of that close cold technical relation which obtained between producer and theatre manager under the system of company ownership, now not so widely prevailing, has aided rather than retarded the spirit of cooperation. The exhibitor is beginning to be recognized as the man on the firing line in his perception of changes in public taste, especially since the morals drive is on, the force of which was more quickly recognized by the seller of pictures, than by their creators. Hollywood knows it is up against a real problem this time, and is disposed to turn to the theatre man as the one most capable of assisting in its solution, and solicit his aid in building up a demand for a better class of entertainment.

I have sounded out a variety of opinions on what Hollywood thinks of the exhibitor, and a majority of them taken together are confusing. As usual, in higher circles there is the customary reserve about any genuine expression for purposes of publication. Statements have run the gamut from "the men who really know" and "the front-line soldiers" of the picture business to the "biggest deterrent to the motion picture's progress" and the "least sincere" of its members.

Edwin Schallert, writer of the accompanying article on "What Hollywood Thinks of Exhibitors" has made it his business to keep an ear close to the ground of public reactions to motion pictures almost since they became an article of commerce, and to focus an eye upon Hollywood. Of Mr. Schallert, drama and motion picture editor of the Los Angeles Times, The Motion Picture Almanac makes these observations:

Born in Los Angeles April 16, 1890; parents, John J. Schallert and Mary J. Lindsay Schallert; graduated from St. Vincent's College, Los Angeles, with master of arts degree; married and has three children. Was assistant editor of West Coast Magazine, 1910-11; financial editor of the Los Angeles Times, 1912-14; drama and music editor, 1915-17.

One producer avowed to me that the theatre men's talk about clean pictures was all a lot of hooey. "If we sent them five 'clean pictures' in a row—that is, five pictures without any sex punch or sophistication—they'd be yelling their heads off," he said. "I know those fellows from away back. They don't mean a word of all that talk."

Producers are perhaps more willing to be friendly in ostensible ways than exhibitors. At the MPTOA convention several of the prominent theatre men declined to be photographed with the studio executives. They contended that it would look as if they were "trading with the enemy." Producers are more liberal about these purely personal matters. They'll fete an exhibitor any time he comes to town, and be a camera subject with him, too, and it will need very little urging. In this respect the producer is much more city-ideaed and broad-minded.

Seek Good Impression on Exhibitor

There is nothing that the film-makers are so eager about as that movies should make a good impression on an exhibitor who is visiting. Even distant relatives and friends of the theatre man are greeted with open arms when they want to give the studio the once-over. Hollywood is gentle with all prominent strangers, but it is doubly gentle with those having anything to do with picture revenue.

Stars, except the older and smarter ones, don't give a whoop about exhibitors. The New York stage luminary, in particular, has little notion of what national distribution of pictures is all about.

However, Adolph Zukor, for one, feels that the Broadwayite is becoming somewhat acclimated to pictures, and that he now understands better their requirements. "Unquestionably the fact that many of these people, writers, directors and stars alike, did not understand the picture public is responsible for many of the difficulties that we have encountered in the past few years," he said.

"Nor am I concerned with the present censorship drive; we have been through these periods before, and the sole answer is good pictures, and the pictures that are in good taste."

Interesting is the opinion of Clarence Brown, the director. He is the one who plans a personal survey of the theatre zones of the country. "It has always been a dream of mine to go by airplane to all sections of America, sounding out exhibitor opinion," he said. "I believe that this idea, generally adopted, would be of great benefit. It can be carried out now, whereas it would not have been possible before airplane transportation was so highly developed.

"I don't think it is possible to obtain a real exhibitor reaction except through personal contact, and through meeting the man right at home. Conventions are all right and you can get opinions from exhibitors thus congregated, but they are not as clear nor as unbiased as when you have a conversation right across the table in the exhibitor's own office. That's the sort of contact I feel would be of inestimable benefit to myself, and I hope to carry it out in the near future." Which may mean that all manner of executives, directors, and possibly even stars, will be aviating around the country soon to find out just exactly what the marketers of their movies think.

Mae West thinks a lot of the exhibitors. "Those boys are my best friends," she said.

"Many a one wrote me a letter saying I had saved the mortgage on the old home when I made 'She Done Him Wrong' and 'I'm No Angel.' They were all very nice in expressing their thanks, and I am certainly appreciative of the way they stand by me. They're the one crowd I always want to be friendly with. I don't care whether Hollywood likes my pictures or not, but if the exhibitors and the society folk don't go for them why then I'm disappointed. I'm not going to crowd the boys with pictures, because I don't think that's such a good thing. I'll be making two a year for a while, and probably one a year after that. And they're going to be good, too, if I have my way about it."

Once get a few stars and directors interested in the theatre end of the movie game in Hollywood, and it won't be very long until the others follow suit. They're all concerned over the New York and London and Chicago (occasionally) openings now, but if they keep waking up as fast as they're doing lately, they'll be equally observant of what's happening in Keokuk, Orwigsburg, and Baton Rouge.

Decentralizing Theatres Found Aid to Cooperation Between Production and Exhibition; Distant Relatives Welcomed

OKLAHOMA CITY

In contrast with the belief in other communities that patronage is turning toward the neighborhood, business in Oklahoma City is turning toward the downtown section. Figures show that in 1933 only 64 per cent of the city's business went to first run downtown houses, whereas to date in 1934, downtown theatres are getting an average of 70 per cent of the total business. This increase in downtown patronage is generally conceded to be because all downtown first runs have been consolidated under one management. Figures are as follows:

Total business downtown and neighborhoods combined	100%	100%
Downtowns' total business day and night combined	70%	64%

PORTLAND, ORE.

Numerous changes in product, theatre operation and patrons were made between April, 1933, and April, 1934. While "stimulants" still were permitted, such as the various types of "nights," the suburbans did good business, but when the code went into operation and these were forbidden, the neighborhoods were hard hit. Practically all of them turned to double features as a panacea. The results are shown as follows:

Total business downtown and neighborhoods combined	$59,100	$53,000
Downtowns' total business day and night combined	31,100	23,800

SALT LAKE CITY

While the neighborhood theatres in Salt Lake City have not noted as much improvement in their business over a year ago as have the neighborhoods in some other cities, figures show that the suburban theatres are increasingly receiving greater patronage than in 1933. For example, while the neighborhoods' total business increased only 5 per cent for the week in April, 1934, as against the same week in 1933, their total business prior to 6 P. M. jumped 15 per cent. The downtown theatres also show improvement.

Total business downtown and neighborhoods combined	100%	85%
Downtowns' total business day and night combined	100%	85%

SAN ANTONIO

The trend of motion picture patronage is not to the neighborhoods in San Antonio. There are not enough community houses in this city to detract from the larger theatres. While many cities the size of San Antonio, population 250,000, have from 20 to 30 neighborhood houses, the Texas city has but three, the combined receipts of which, it has been estimated, seldom, if ever, reach $1,000 weekly.

Investigation reveals a distinct increase in patronage and admission rates for 1934 over a comparative week in 1933, but there has been no noticeable tendency to turn patronage to neighborhood theatres instead of downtown.

Seattle downtowns are offering far better entertainment this year at approximately the same price level as before. Stage shows, vaudeville and special attractions have been offered by the first runs, while the neighborhoods have been forced to abandon "two-for-ones," "country stores" and similar practices, and in some instances also have had to increase their prices. This obviously has been in the favor of the downtown theatre.

In the Seattle field there are but three or four neighborhood houses operating matinees, and these are on Saturdays and Sundays only. Present indications in the Seattle area are that the downtown houses are entering a period of upward business trend, and the neighborhoods will remain about "as is," or may even show a decline. Figures follow:

Total business downtown and neighborhoods combined	$38,500	$36,000
Downtowns' total business day and night combined	27,000	25,500
Neighborhoods' total business day and night combined	11,500	10,500
Downtown and neighborhoods' business to 6 P.M. combined	11,000	10,000
Downtowns' business to 6 P.M.	10,250	9,250
Neighborhoods' business to 6 P.M.	750	750
Downtown and neighborhoods' business combined after 6 P.M.	26,500	25,500
Downtowns' business after 6 P.M.	16,750	16,250
Neighborhoods' business after 6 P.M.	10,750	9,750

TAMPA

Total business of Tampa downtown and neighborhood houses was 20 per cent higher for a week in April, 1934, than for the same week in 1933, with the neighborhoods' business showing an increase of 17 per cent. Neighborhoods' business prior to 6 P. M. increased 38 per cent, while their business after 6 P. M. increased 6 per cent.

Downtown theatres likewise showed marked improvement over April of 1933, noting gains of 21 per cent for total business; 12 per cent on business done prior to 6 P. M. and 28 per cent on business after 6 P. M.

The average Tampa admission price for 1933 was 27 cents, with prices ranging from 10 cents to 40-cent tops in the downtown theatres. Admission scales in the Florida city are said not to have changed in the past two years.

The average admission for both neighborhoods and downtown houses prior to 6 P. M., combined, is 26 cents, the downtown average being 29 cents and the neighborhood 19. Downtowns and neighborhoods combined after 6 P. M. average an admission price of 26 cents, the downtowns' average being 35 cents and the neighborhoods' 19 cents.

SEASON 1934-35

STAR POWER GREATEST IN FOX HISTORY SAYS S. R. KENT IN KEYNOTE MESSAGE!

HAVING put its own financial house in order, Fox Film Corporation faces the coming season with every ounce of manpower and all its resources free to devote themselves to the sole task of producing outstanding motion pictures.

We have recognized that one of the grave problems in present day exhibition is the scarcity of box office personalities. To solve this problem, the production department of this company during the last year has literally scoured the world for talent. From the legitimate stage, from Europe and from the ranks of the most promising of the younger players, we have recruited a large and growing company of talented artists. Already some of these newcomers have registered heavily with the public. Others, in whose talent and personalities we have equal confidence, will be introduced on the screens of the world during the coming season.

The development of new personalities is not alone a problem of Fox Film Corporation. It is a problem of every producing company and every exhibitor. The exhibitor has just as big a stake in the discovery and nurturing of talent as the producer, and he should advertise and exploit these new people for his own benefit and the benefit of the industry at large.

In our Annual Announcement Book, which is now in the hands of the world's leading exhibitors, we have displayed the pictures of Fox personalities and also have outlined some of the productions which we will release next season. We have purposely refrained from advertising all of our productions, preferring to set forth in this book only those pictures that are definitely formulated and which it is our intention to make. Thus, exhibitors can place more reliance on the productions we have announced, while at the same time, our studio will not have its hands tied but will have ample opportunity to enlarge its plans as the season progresses. In addition to the pictures that we do list in the book, we have several other very important ones which we shall announce later.

In the following pages we show you some of the company of Fox players and the pictures which we will release in August, September and October. These pictures are either already completed or are actually in production.

Our production department, under the direction of Mr. Winfield Sheehan, is functioning better than it ever has in the history of this company. Around him Mr. Sheehan has gathered a notable staff of writers, and also has assembled a group of directors whose records prove their ability to make pictures that will suit the public taste.

With this program and with these producing resources at hand we are extremely confident that Fox Film Corporation, during the coming year, will deliver to the screens of the world a product that will bring prestige and profit to every exhibitor playing it.

HAROLD LLOYD

in THE CAT'S-PAW

STORY READ BY MILLIONS BOUGHT BY HAROLD LLOYD

As the first of his new comedies to be released by Fox Films, Harold Lloyd has produced the widely read "The Cat's Paw," a story by Clarence Budington Kelland which gained an enormous vogue when published in the Saturday Evening Post and as a novel. It is because of the story's tremendous popularity and possibilities that the star purchased it, departing from his past procedure of making his pictures from original scenarios only.

Still well-remembered and beloved are the comedies which established Lloyd as one of the biggest box-office attractions in the motion picture industry. Among his consistent successes were "Grandma's Boy," "The Freshman," "Safety Last," "Girl Shy," "The Kid Brother" and "Speedy." More recently the comedian made "Welcome Danger," "Feet First" and "Movie Crazy."

The last-named comedy was filmed in 1932, and since then Lloyd has been inactive, thereby depleting the annual grosses of the nation's theatres. His return to production therefore is regarded as a harbinger of new prosperity to exhibitors everywhere.

The supporting cast assembled by Harold Lloyd for "The Cat's Paw" includes Una Merkel, Allan Dinehart, Grant Mitchell, Warren Hymer, Nat Pendleton and George Barbier. Sam Taylor, responsible for many of the comedian's past successes, directed.

A Statement of Fact—

Harold Lloyd's decision to release his next production through Fox is interesting news to both Exhibitors and Fans everywhere. It is fitting that the leading exponent of clean wholesome screen comedy should be allied with the world's foremost distributing organization.

Harold Lloyd has gone steadily forward from success to success. There has never been such a tremendous hunt of story value and cast support in a Lloyd production as the world will find in his new picture, "The Cat's Paw." You owe it to your patrons to play "The Cat's Paw" at your theatre, and to obtain for it the distinction and prestige this great comedian will bring.

● For the first time, Harold Llayd appears in a story which was nat written expressly as a vehicle far him. But Clarence Budingtan Kelland must have had him in mind when he wrate this madly entertaining tale. Twa millian readers guffawed far weeks at the Saturday Evening Past serial... many thausands mare at the navelized best seller.

● Imagine America's tap-natch camedian as a youth... bred an Chinese maxims in rematest China... balting inta the midst af a big-city mayaralty race... bewildered at his election... beset by graft-greedy politicians and racketeers... with anly a sweet little cigaret girl an the level with him.

WARNER OLAND RETURNS TO FIRST LOVE AS "CHARLIE CHAN"

Insists on playing sleuth he made immortal on screen

Movie fans will be delighted to learn that Warner Oland again will appear in two pictures this year as Charlie Chan, Earl Derr Biggers' detective character. The pictures are "Charlie Chan in London" and "Charlie Chan in Paris."

Despite his success in other roles, such as he portrayed in "Shanghai Express," "As Husbands Go" and "A Passport to Hell," Oland feels most at home as "Chan." The screen original, he portrayed the fiction sleuth in "Charlie Chan Carries On," "The Black Camel," "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case," and, recently, "Charlie Chan's Courage."

His continued association with the role, plus a physical appearance identical with the mythical detective have caused millions to regard Warner Oland as Charlie Chan, himself.

FOX EXHIBITORS COME FROM ALL WALKS OF LIFE

Doctors, lawyers, political chiefs, as well as men from divers other professions, may be found among the picture showmen of the nation, according to the reports sent in by the various Fox Film exchanges throughout the country.

EARL CARROLL PLANS USE OF FILM IN A REJUVENATION OF THE STAGE

Producer Is Working in East on Method of Amplifying Stage Plays Through Rear Projection of Appropriate Film Scenes

Principals Would Do Certain Scenes via the Film Camera; Sees Unlimited Possibility in Musical Plays and Revues

Earl Carroll, exploiteer extraordinary of feminine pulchritude, theatrical entrepreneur and 100 per cent showman, who "gives 'em what they want," is about to launch a drive to revivify the legitimate theatre, with motion picture method supplying the oxygen.

Perched high in his penthouse atop the New York Essex House's 40th floor, Mr. Carroll leaned against his terrace railing and looked out and away, across Central Park and over to the Hudson where the "fleet's in." Finally:

"There is no doubt in my mind, nor in the minds of many of the younger producers, that the stage is pretty nearly dead. A few of the old die-hards won't admit it, but figures have more than spoken for themselves during the past few seasons, and that's that."

The whole difficulty, as Mr. Carroll sees it, is that legitimate producers, managers and directors are so wrapped in hidebound theatrical tradition that they cannot realize that a comparatively new medium—the motion picture—is forcing the public mind to a point where it demands something more exciting than merely a pretty picture which must, because it always has been, be bounded tightly by four walls.

And that's where Mr. Carroll's plan of resuscitation for the stage comes in. He plans to demonstrate, virtually by making the motion picture serve the best interests of the legitimate drama, that the play can be lifted beyond its four walls and transported into any given locale as called for in the script, and still, in its majority essence, remain on the stage.

Scenes Via Film Camera

"It may sound complex to the average layman," Mr. Carroll said, "but it's really quite simple. Through the medium of rear projection and, in some cases, projection from the front of the house, it is entirely practicable to transport the characters in the play to any specific scene called for, as in a motion picture script, which in any way might enhance both the beauty of the play and the continuity and general action."

In order to accomplish this, he explained, it will be necessary for the principals in the play to make certain scenes via the motion picture camera which would further elaborate upon the action of the play. For example, if a scene—or, in terms of the motion picture, sequence,—calls for two characters to make an exit through a door, with dialogue which might intimate that they were about to embark for Europe, there would be a blackout on their exit and a gauze "tab dropped in one," on which is projected a picture of the couple entering a taxicab and riding to the docks. In the meantime, the next scene, presumably a stateroom aboard ship, is being set on the stage behind the gauze. As the couple, on the film, leave the taxi and mount the gangplank the film fades out, the lights come up on the stage set, and the audience sees the couple, now in the flesh, entering the stateroom.

"Thus the complete illusion of continuity is kept," said Mr. Carroll. "Of course, such a scene is used merely as an illustration, and would be employed only if the action were sufficiently important."

Films Would Impart "Kick"

In regard to utilization of rear projection on the stage in exactly the same manner as process shots are used as backgrounds in the studio, Mr. Carroll believes it is high time that the standard, set method of the handling of off-stage effects and happenings be abandoned.

"As an example of what can be done with this medium, let us consider a stage scene which might call for spectators to view a horserace from a grandstand," he said. "As it is done now, the audience sees a group of actors in the stand, set so that what lies upstage or offstage cannot possibly be seen. Someone off yells, 'They're off!', the people in the stand yell, 'They're off!' and for the next minute or so all the audience sees is a bunch of persons peering through binoculars at nothing and wheezing encouragement to their favorite horses which are not really there at all."

With rear projection the audience would see the race and get the same "kick" out of it that the actors on the stage are supposed to be getting.

Conducting Experiments in East

Mr. Carroll is conducting exhaustive experimentation at the Eastern Service Studios on Long Island and is convinced that rear projection is a practicable medium on the stage with an acetated or translucent screen having a 36-foot depth.

All projection used during the course of action of the play, whether front or rear, would be in natural color, thus adding to the illusion.

Mr. Carroll sees unlimited possibilities also for the use of the new stage technique in the presentation of musical plays and revues, in which he has specialized the greater part of his life.

"Think of being able to engage Bing Crosby for a comparatively nominal sum of money and have him on the stage singing to the girls while he's really 3,000 miles away!" the producer exclaimed. "It would cause nothing short of a sensation. This also would be done via the rear projection method. Crosby makes what looks like a perfectly ordinary entrance from up center or any other part of the stage, he talks with the girls, they talk back to him and then he sings and exits. A little later, he comes on again, and sings another song."

Mr. Carroll pointed out that having a star like Bing Crosby make a short reel, with possibly a little dialogue and a song or two, would be considerably less expensive than having Crosby in the show paying his salary for 40 weeks. Under such circumstances a flat sum probably would be paid the artist.

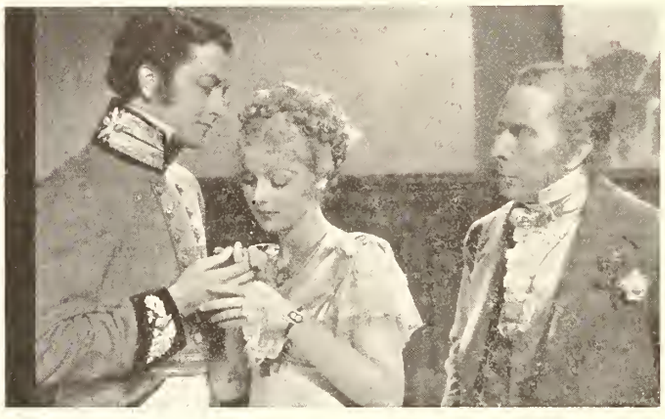
The producer of the "Vanities," which are noted for their comedy sketches as well as for the "most beautiful girls in the world," proceeded to enumerate a few of the possibilities of rear projection as applied to the revue sketch.

"For example," he said, "we have a hotel bedroom. The two comedians look across the area and watch a beautiful girl—or whatever the gag is—undressing. With rear projection, the window appears to expand and the audience goes right into the girl's room. . . .

Needed to Liven Theatre

"Seriously, though, I honestly believe that this sort of thing is just what is needed to liven up the theatre. For more than four years the theatre in New York has been functioning at less than 50 per cent of normal. People are not interested in it in its present state. The medium is altogether too restricted. Our managers, our directors and our talent have all gone into pictures.

"It is past time that we take from pictures that which they have taken from the stage. Authors and directors should combine and elaborate upon their present activities. Especially will playwrights benefit by the new medium, because, for the first time, they will be allowed really to write, to let their imaginations have full scope, to wander as they will. Whether it be pageant or street scene, the playwright will be able to move his characters about on paper in a manner to which he has heretofore been completely unaccustomed.



"The only solution to the present day condition of the legitimate theatre is to make it more interesting. I sincerely believe that this technique, for which I am now working for absolute perfection, is the way to make this theatre of ours more interesting."

Mr. Carroll said his new technique will be expensive, but, as he puts it, "it is time theatrical producers got back to the idea of spending money." During recent years, he explained, instead of trying to keep the theatre alive by maintaining its pre-depression level of quality, the vast majority of managers have been "trying to see how cheaply they could put on a show."

Financing plans for the project, in which several wellknown producers are said to be individually interested in addition to Mr. Carroll, are now being worked out, and the final financial program insofar as Mr. Carroll is concerned will probably be announced next week.

THE BOX OFFICE CHAMPIONS FOR MAY

● Box offices of the nation's key theatres name seven productions as Champions for the month of May. Each of those achieving the first three places holds its position alone, while two are tied for fourth place, and two for fifth. Only one in the May roster has been a Champion previously, this one being "The House of Rothschild," which also was listed for April. Except for two musicals, the May list ranges from straight drama to comedy-drama.

PARAMOUNT APPEALS TRI-ERGON DECISION

U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals Holds William Fox's Company Has Valid Patent on the Sound-on-Film Process

Paramount Publix has made an appeal from a U. S. circuit court of appeals ruling made in New York last week which held that American Tri-Ergon has a valid patent on a sound-on-film process and that the patent had been infringed by Paramount. The case will be taken to the United States supreme court next fall, Paramount attorneys said this week.

The patent held to have been infringed involves a process for printing the sound record on one strip of film simultaneously with the pictorial recording on another strip, after which the two strips are printed on one master film.

According to engineers and equipment authorities in New York, there is no mechanical device involved in the process, which, so far as they have been able to ascertain, would generally be considered sufficient grounds for patent protection. Nor, they say, does Tri-Ergon hold any patents on any recording or photographing device involved in the making of the three films.

Appeals Court Defines Stand

The court of appeals' decision, however, in holding that the Tri-Ergon patent is valid and had been infringed by Paramount, stated that "while it might be said that superficially the positives"—which Tri-Ergon attempted to establish were produced by its processes—"are similar to positives produced by single film processes, still the function and effect is different and in the practical art that difference has been demonstrated. Combining steps of the double film system and steps of the single film system, the inventors have made a combination and a process for achieving a new result which has been effective and enduring and has become the standard practice in the industry."

The decision also pointed out that the Tri-Ergon process is distinguished by its uniformity of quality photographic records and quality sound records, each made on a separate negative, but transferred in the product to a single positive. Other processes, the decision said, result either in distorted photography or distorted sound when made on and reproduced from a single film.

Fox Seeks Permanent Injunction

"There is no material difference between the purpose for which the appellee (Paramount) uses the process and that described in the patent," the decision stated. "In any case, the appellee uses the process of the patent and achieves the results intended by the patentees. The patent is valid and infringed."

According to reports, William Fox paid in the neighborhood of $40,000 for the Tri-Ergon process, and is alleged to have said he expected to collect nearly $500,000 from various companies he claims have infringed the patent.

Mr. Fox is president of American Tri-Ergon and seeks a permanent injunction restraining Paramount from using the processes and for damages in an amount "equal to whatever profits have been made by Paramount through use of the process and whatever loss American Tri-Ergon has sustained."

The circuit court's ruling holding the patents valid, handed down in New York last week, came as a result of a decision by U. S. District Court Judge M. B. Campbell, of the eastern district, Brooklyn. The higher court's decision was not unanimous. Written by Judge Martin Manton, it was concurred in by Judge Harrie Chase, with Judge Thomas Swan dissenting. This two-to-one decision, it was believed, assures the case of a review by the supreme court when the petition is filed after the court's summer recess.

Film Society of India Hears Report for Year

The Motion Picture Society of India held its annual meeting in Bombay recently, and heard the report of the work of the society during the year 1933-34. A new executive committee for the current year was elected, as follows: A. Fazulbhoy, Baburao Pai, M. Bhavanani, Vishram Motwane, C. E. Noble, J. Pandya, Jaswantrai Mehta, Jamnadas Subedar, K. S. Hirlekar and K. H. Vakil.

The report indicated that the financial condition of the society was in need of strengthening, and noted that efforts are being made to obtain educational films from other countries without charge. It noted that a delegation of the society had requested the government of India to abolish the import duty on raw film for a period of 15 years.

More Production In Great Britain Seen by Selznick

American motion picture production in Great Britain on more expansive scale than ever before attempted was envisioned this week by David O. Selznick, vice-president and associate Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, on his return to this country from the British Isles. Mr. Selznick, who has been photographing "atmosphere" for MGM's forthcoming production of Charles Dickens' immortal "David Copperfield," was accompanied by George Cukor, who will direct the production, Howard Estabrook, scenarist, and Hugh Walpole, famed British novelist who is vice-president of the Dickens Fellowship and who has been engaged by MGM to "keep the film so British that even the most ardent 'Buy Britisher' will not protest."

Mr. Selznick, in support of his statement that within the next few years American producers will expand considerably their British production activities, said that, aside from quota regulations which compel British production handled directly or through financing extended to local companies, the American industry will find it good business to extend studio activity to England.

"The grosses possible there and in this country, as well, from pictures as good as 'The Private Life of Henry VIII,' are the principal factors," he said. "It demonstrates what can be done on both sides of the ocean.

"Lovers of Dickens," Mr. Selznick said, "are the greatest sticklers in the world for accuracy. Mr. Walpole is vice-president of the Dickens Fellowship and an expert on Dickensiana. We spent about a month over there, going to all the places mentioned in the book, taking transparency shots which will be used for actual backgrounds, and making thousands of still photographs to be used in constructing sets. Never have such pains been taken on a single picture."

Mr. Cukor said that the only thing which worried him about production of "David Copperfield" was the necessity for a number of English children in the cast.

Also with the party was Peter Trent, 19-year-old student of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, who never has had any professional experience, but who so impressed Mr. Selznick that he tentatively scheduled him for the part of "David." Antoinette Cellier, daughter of Frank Cellier, well-known British actor, also was given a contract.

Mr. Walpole expressed considerable delight over the prospect of his visit to Hollywood and declared that his work in connection with the film "would be a most interesting thing to do."

"We are having something of a time with 'David Copperfield,'" the novelist said, "for it's an immensely long book and the scenario is sticking very closely to it, but while I'm at my comparatively minor work, I hope to learn something about the screen."

200 DISTRIBUTORS AND EXHIBITORS JOIN IN FILM DAILY GOLF TOURNEY

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Two hundred officials of distribution and exhibition combined good fellowship with more or less good golfing when they gathered with their guests on a Long Island hilltop at Glen Oaks Country Club overlooking Great Neck, for last Thursday's 22nd Eastern Film Golf Tournament, sponsored by Film Daily.

It was a sad foursome wearing the emblem of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers that dug itself out of a sandpit at the 18th hole, having gone down to defeat in a closely contested match with four of the best players of the New York Motion Picture Club. Nor was the AMPA quartet made any happier when at the dinner they were compelled literally to give up their shirts to the victors.

Each of the Club winners received a gold medal, presented by Jules Brulatour, distributor of Eastman raw stock. The Club itself won a leg on the E. F. Albee sterling silver trophy.

Eddie McEvoy the Best Golfer

The teams: Motion Picture Club, managed by Louis Nizer; captained by Ted Curtis, and including Harry Warner, Herbert J. Yates and Mitchell May, Jr. Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, managed by William R. Ferguson; captained by Tom Gerety, and including Herbert Fecke, Arthur Dickenson and Jerry Keyser.

Mr. Warner modestly admitted that the victory, for which he and Mr. Yates were principally responsible, was a revelation to him. He immediately challenged Mr. Fecke, his immediate adversary, and also both the "pros" of Glen Oaks and of Mr. Fecke's home golf club at Rye.

Eddie McEvoy of Radio's home office sales staff was the day's champion, taking a leg on the Film Daily Cup and winning his own company's gift to the tournament, a silver cup. His son, too, won top honors in one of the best contested putting contests of these tourneys, taking the Consolidated Film Industries Trophy, George Blair of Eastman and George Brown of Columbia ended in second and third places, winning respectively, an RCA Radio and an Eastman Kodak.

William Frankel was low net runner-up, winning the Pathe Exchange trophy, while the Quigley Publications trophy went to Ted Curtis for low gross score.

The worst golfer among the 200 entrants—and here was the most keen competition—was A-Mike Vogel, editor of the Managers' Round Table of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Mr. Vogel was called to the dais during the prize presentation at the dinner and was kindly requested by the committee to confine his activities in the future to publishing, after having taken 14 strokes to sink the ball on a par three hole. He received the Variety "Mugg," a box of parlor tricks, and then the committee publicly destroyed his clubs to discourage him from any thought of a career on the links. However, Ray Gallagher, also of the Herald staff, narrowly missed the same fate, having taken 13 strokes to get to the same cup. Mr. Vogel's net score for 18 holes was 148—and then he blew up.

Other Winners of the Day

Tom Gerety, of Metro, won the Gaumont-British trophy presented by Arthur Lee, for being the runner-up for low gross score.

Leopold Friedman, of Loew's, was awarded the DuPont Film trophy for the low net score of the morning round. Mitchell May, Jr., was runner-up, receiving a radio clock donated by Chesterfield Pictures.

Gradwell Sears, Warner sales executive, won a leg on the Al Lichtman plaque for making the lowest net score of any Motion Picture Club member.

Carl Wolf was the best exhibitor golfer, winning the United Artists trophy.

Al J. Levy, also an exhibitor, won a set of Grosset and Dunlap books for shooting the most "birdies."

The Erpi trophy was awarded to Ed Hyman for turning in the lowest gross score for an exhibitor.

The spirited driving contest was won by Arthur Seidman, who received the William Massce trophy. Runner-up was Harry Goetz, who got the Sam Sax prize, a radio.

I. J. Hoffman was presented with a pair of Budd pajamas for making an eagle.

Howard Dietz embarrassedly accepted a flaming dress as a special prize for something or other.

Gabe Hess was given a Nat Lewis robe, the committee deciding he was the "best dressed golfer," because he was the only one who wore a hat.

Many on Hand for the Dinner

Besides the 200 golfers during the day, about 45, led by Paul Benjamin, treasurer of the AMPA, journeyed from New York for the dinner.

Jack Alicoate, chairman of the golf committee, was assisted by William Ferguson, Don Mersereau, Al Lichtman, Louis Nizer, Lee Ochs and William Brandt.

NATIONAL ACTION FOR CLEAN FILMS FORMING

Religious Leaders Gathering at Washington with Demand for Federal Censorship; Congressman Demands Action

By FRANCIS L. BURT
Washington Correspondent

A movement to "turn the heat" on indecent pictures now getting under way throughout the country bids fair to hold the limelight during the coming summer and may be the opening wedge for a demand for federal censorship which the next Congress will be unable to withstand.

The weight of important Protestant groups has been thrown behind the Catholic movement to boycott theatres showing objectionable pictures, and a national program is expected to be worked out at a conference of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish religious leaders who will meet in Washington late this week.

The Conference, to be held at the Mayflower hotel starting Thursday, will be under the auspices of the National Committee for Church and Welfare Recovery. Leaders of all the larger denominations will be present. While the primary intent of the meeting is not specifically a discussion of motion pictures, the matter is considered certain to come up because of the current campaigning.

Support has been given the movement by Representative Cannon (Dem.) of Wisconsin in a bill which would prohibit interstate transportation of films in the cast of which any person convicted of moral turpitude appears. Although the bill has no chance of enactment during the session now coming to an end, the support of the Wisconsin Congressman will be used in the campaign against indecency on the screen.

"Ninety per cent of the pictures now being shown are unfit for children," Representative Cannon declared. "Parents blush with shame whenever they attend theatres in company with their children. The whole atmosphere of Hollywood seeps with immorality, and the lives of actors and actresses become hardened to immoral and suggestive conduct."

The measure would not only ban pictures using persons guilty of moral turpitude but would prohibit "suggestive and morally objectionable" films, either offense being punishable by five years imprisonment or $5,000 fine, or both.

Observers in Washington declare that the campaign against the screen now threatening is the most serious which the industry has ever faced and that, unless the leaders in the industry take immediate steps to clean house, there will be a demand for censorship next winter which Congress will not be able to ignore.

Kahane Warns Hollywood

"The importance of agitation for screen censorship cannot be overestimated," declared B. B. Kahane, president of Radio, in an interview with Elizabeth Yeaman, published in the Hollywood Citizen-News recently. Mr. Kahane was quoted further: "The time has come for Hollywood to heed the protest of the public against unclean pictures. For if Hollywood does not heed it, there may be a federal censorship that would become an insufferable burden."

St. Louis Rabbi Backs Legion of Decency Stand

Rabbi Julius Gordon, outstanding Jewish clergyman of St. Louis, has approved the stand taken by the Catholic legion of decency against immoral pictures, in a statement titled "The Movie Menace in America." He declared that although a famous writer once said there are nine basic themes in literature, Hollywood knows only three, crime, drunkenness and sexuality.

"There is no doubt that such pictures do exert a vicious influence upon the morals of our youth," he declared. Numerous other prominent Protestant and Jewish church leaders of St. Louis have endorsed the movement and promised cooperation.

RESPONSIBILITY NOT FOR PUBLIC ALONE

The New York Times, in its editorial page department entitled "Topics of the Times" of the issue of June 12, observes:

Doctors as a rule do not argue that if legitimate practice fails to come their way they are justified in going in for malpractice. Lawyers do not say that if honest clients refuse to appear a lawyer has a right to join forces with the underworld. College professors do not maintain that if they cannot get a teaching job they are privileged to go in for blackmail or forgery. But at Hollywood they seem to think that the entire moral responsibility rests with the public.

Hollywood, said our special dispatch yesterday, is worried by mounting criticism of cheap, nasty and demoralizing pictures. Hollywood admits that it turns out too much gangster, underworld, night life, pep and "red-hot mamma" stuff. Hollywood's standing defense is that the American people can have any kind of picture they want if they will only show what they like by supporting it.

Here enters the queer implication that if the American people fail to support decent pictures Hollywood is justified in peddling indecency. This does not follow at all. There is nothing in the United States Constitution that compels people to go into the movie-production business.

Archbishop Meets St. Louis Showmen

The basis for a better understanding between the Catholic Church and the motion picture industry in working mutually toward the elimination of immoral films and the production of more pictures designed for Family Night showings was reached at an audience granted in St. Louis last week by Archbishop John J. Glennon to a delegation of motion picture exhibitors headed by Frederick H. Wehrenberg, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Others in the delegation were Louis Ansell of the Ritz theatre, St. Louis, and Harold W. Evens of the Loew State theatre.

They assured the archbishop that the exhibitors of the St. Louis territory are in sympathy with the movement to improve the quality of motion pictures and to eliminate objectionable sex and crime productions. The archbishop was informed the exhibitors, in cooperation with the Better Film Council of St. Louis, had gone to Prosecuting Attorney Rosecan to prevent the recent showing of "Elysia" at the Grand Central theatre, and said that the same action would be taken when an attempt is made to exhibit similarly objectionable pictures.

At the outset of the conference the archbishop expressed the belief that reviewing organizations such as the Better Films Council and the Catholic Picture Guild had failed to accomplish any real good, and said that the Hays code had been violated thousands of times since it was adopted. He was also inclined to the belief that if a theatre exhibited any film that was off color the people should stay away from that house entirely.

Philadelphia Catholics Urged to Boycott Films

Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia has appealed to all Catholics of the Philadelphia archdiocese to "register their united protest against immoral and indecent films by remaining away entirely from all motion picture theatres." In a letter to rectors the Cardinal said: "Since a very large proportion of the present plays are dangerous to faith and morals, they are a proximate occasion of sin, and as such must be avoided at all costs. To stay away from them, therefore, is not merely a counsel but a positive command, bringing all in conscience under pain of sin."

The Cardinal this week received the commendation of the Methodist ministers of Philadelphia for his order.

Spokane Churches Rally To Decency Legion Call

In Spokane, Wash., and vicinity, 94 churches of the Catholic faith, under Bishop Charles D. White, have launched a drive against unfit films by asking for pledges for the Legion of Decency.

Plan Fight on "Immoral" Films

A committee of club women of Milwaukee has charged the city censor board with failure to prevent the showing of "crude, unwholesome and morally objectionable" films.

ECKMAN APPEALS TO MAXWELL TO HELP SOLVE BRITISH OVERSEATING

Exhibitors' Association, at Blackpool Conference, Learns Amendment to Reduce Entertainment Tax Meets Defeat

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Representative

News that the House of Commons by a vote of 64 to 221 had just turned down the Webb Amendment, which would have brought a reduction of the Entertainment Tax, lent added significance to the demand for solution of the overseating problem voiced by Sam Eckman, managing director of MGM in England, at Wednesday's session of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain and Ireland, at Blackpool.

Mr. Eckman concluded his address with an outspoken appeal to John Maxwell, president of the Kinematograph Renters Society, and chairman of British International, Wardour and A. B. C. Erant, who was also to address the convention, urging that Mr. Maxwell "use his great influence in exhibition and renting circles to assist in some curbing influence," such as the plan of the CEA to set up a committee to act upon all applications for new cinemas.

Such a regulatory action, Mr. Eckman said, would provide a safeguard against over-expansion by three types of individuals: exhibitors "with more ambition than judgment," investors from other fields misinformed regarding possibilities in the motion picture industry, and speculators building for sale to trade competitors. He declared the plan had failed before "because of what I consider a mistaken belief of the renters that they would be relinquishing their privilege to transact business with whomsoever they please."

Protests against socalled "Quota Quickies" were made at the Tuesday session. Complaint was made from the floor that exhibitors were required to comply with both the spirit and letter of the Quota requirements whereas certain distributors met only the letter of the law, and that exhibitors were required to take the "quickies" in order to book some of the better American product. The matter was referred to a committee.

The annual meeting, at the well known seaside resort on the Lancashire coast, opened Monday with 800 conventioners registered at the Imperial, the Metropole and other hotels.

Rentals, the Entertainment Tax, and overbuilding were among the chief subjects before the Summer Conference. The Renters Society had rejected overtures for a joint session on the proposed sliding scale on rentals.

On Monday night a mayor's reception was held, also a dance at the Winter Garden, followed by a special showing of "20th Century."

The annual Trade Exhibition, which has built up into a useful feature of these annual gatherings, proved to be a representative national display of apparatus, furniture and accessories.

The Lord's Day Observance Society, most militant of the organizations opposing the extension of Sunday opening, gloats over the success of its obstructionist efforts in its annual report just published.

Under a recent Act of Parliament, Sunday opening is conditional on the result of polls in the various licensing districts and the Society finds some cause for satisfaction in the fact that, in 88 of such polls so far conducted, the Sabbatarians have triumphed in 53 cases, Sunday Opening being obtained in only 35.

600 Areas Still to Vote

The L. D. O. S. finds cause for censure in the fact that kinema interests "invade constituencies with armies of paid canvassers and fleets of hired cars." It sees no inconsistency in boasting that it has itself formed Sunday Defence Committees, interviewed clergy, convened public demonstrations and prayer meetings and isued leaflets and posters broadcast. (1,110,500 leaflets and 20,000 posters in the period covered by the report.)

More than 600 areas have still to vote on this issue and each will be a battleground with the Society.

Denman Street Trust Report

At the annual meeting of the Denman Street Trust, Isidore Ostrer presiding, accounts presented showed a total income of £32,359 ($161,795) against 1933 figures of £31,379 ($158,895). The net profit is £15,804 ($79,020) against £19,109 ($95,545), £16,668 is carried forward against £20,029 brought in.

The auditors' report stated that the book value of the company's investment is in excess of the market value at the date of the balance sheet. The depreciation amounted at December 31 last, said the auditors, to 25 per cent, but recent market movements have reduced this figure to about 21 per cent.

A dividend of 3 per cent was declared.

Lighting Regulations Tightened

The British Home Office has issued instructions to licensing authorities throughout the country which are likely to affect the aplication of existing safety lighting rules in the direction of greater stringency.

The regulations state that an independent source of lighting must be installed in every theatre so that, in the event of the main current failing, current is available to keep the hall lighted.

Several popular forms of alternative lighting, dependent on batteries, seem threatened by the new instruction.

Although the British Kinematograph Society has made an official pronouncement in favor of the German D. I. N. standard for 16 mm. production, as against the S.M.P.E. American standard, both systems are now opposed by a leading member of the B.K.S. itself.

W. Vinten, constructional expert, inventor of the Vinten camera, and chairman of the B.K.S. Standards Committee, charges the following serious faults in both standards, which differ only in the fact that one carries the sound track on the left and the other on the right of the picture: one hole perforation; track on the short side of the picture; reproduction of sound from 35 mm. involves distortion; recording is limited to low frequences; picture reduction from 35 mm. is indirect and expensive; projection is damaged by failure of a single perforation; film damage is caused by the method necessary to maintain contact in printers and projectors; three teeth sprocket engagement demands extra fitting for efficiency; single row perforations imply distortion.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, shows the business done in each of three eastern key cities during the eight-weeks period from April 14 to June 2, 1934. In each city, the gross for the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent.

Hope to Stabilize Kansas City Scale

In an effort to effect stabilization of price schedules in Kansas City, Loew's has expressed a willingness to join Publix, RKO and Fox in raising first-run scales from 25 cents to a minimum of 40 cents at night, provided the independent suburbans agree to raise prices. The Tower, independent downtown first run, plans to increase its price from 25 cents to 35 cents if the city-wide agreement goes through.

Double bills, now the policy at two downtown first runs and virtually all suburbans, will be banned under the agreement, which calls for maintenance of normal admission scales, with a suburban minimum of 15 cents. The proposed agreement provides that each house have a set price. At several Fox Midwest houses, the normal price is 25 cents but they cut to 15 cents often.

Suburbans charging 25 cents have been forced to cut and double feature in self defense. The price war which has gripped local houses for two years has intensified competition between three price and policy classifications: first runs, which have slashed to 25 cents; suburbans which cut to as low as 10 cents, and suburbans which have sought to maintain their scales near normal and as high as 25 cents.

Kansas City distributors are prepared to cancel product purchases estimated at $35,000 in rentals if suburban houses agree to ban double bills. If approved, the agreement will become effective August 3. The independent theatre owners and others are engaged in a series of meetings looking to complete agreement. The ban on duals is one of the conditions set by New York circuit heads in a proposed agreement, in return for which the Kansas City first runs are pledged to raise price scales. Previous resistance of the suburbans to a dual ban because of purchases is answered by the distributor offer to cancel overbought product. Independents also are asking 25 per cent cancellations in next season films.

Herron Explains Quota Background

Commenting upon an article in the New York Sun headed "Fight Over United States Films Grows Warm in France," Frederick L. Herron, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, wrote the Sun the following letter which appeared in Monday's editions:

"You will be interested in knowing that while a certain small group of the French industry, made up of French producers and distributors and a very few exhibitors, probably not more than 5 per cent of the latter, are petitioning the Government to bar the importation of American films for a number of months, and even after that to make the cost of importation so high hat it would be practically prohibitive, The same group is lobbying for a subsidy of 5,000,000 francs (some $330,000) from the French Government to push the sale of French motion pictures in the United States.

"Charles Delac, who is head of the Chambre Syndicale, which body is responsible for both these movements, is interested in French production and distribution. From 90 per cent to 95 per cent of the French industry—in other words, the theatres of France—are not members of Mr. Delac's group. In short, a very small minority are trying to rule the whole industry in France, and to gain their ends are perfectly willing to put out of business a great number of French motion picture theatres that are absolutely dependent upon American films to keep their doors open.

"The well-known French newspaper La Dépêche de Toulouse says that this plan for subsidizing French pictures in the United States was not to be communicated to the press of the country. In other words, Mr. Delac hopes to get his prohibition against American pictures through the Government offices and at the same time push his interest in French production by using the Government's subsidy for advertising French films in the United States.

"In another French paper, Marianne, Henri Jeanson satirizes the project as follows: 'One cannot sufficiently praise Delac, who, while using every influence to end the popularizing of American films in France, is trying to organize a plan for popularizing French films in the United States.'

"A large group of French theatre owners in opposition to Mr. Delac's plan have petitioned the Government for an allowance of more American pictures to come into France rather than fewer. At present original versions of American pictures are only allowed to be shown in fifteen theatres in France. The theatre owners have petitioned to increase this number to one hundred.

"According to the French theatre owners, out of 174 French films available in 1933 only twenty were considered as first class from a commercial standpoint and only 65 of ordinary quality. It is hard to believe that any Government in the world would be so unfair to a foreign commodity as to pass anything as drastic as the proposal by Mr. Delac and the Chambre Syndicale.

"The American motion picture distributors still hope that their product will not be barred from French distribution."

AGENCY CODE COMMITTEE IN ACTION
FILM COMPANIES LOOKING TO STAGE
MGM HAS FIFTEEN FILMS IN WORK EIGHT PICTURES START, FIVE FINISHED

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

AFFAIRS of the Code Authority etched themselves with more clarity this week after the Agency Committee, composed of five producers and five representatives from the other branches, had held two meetings.

At the first gathering, last week, with Trem Carr in the chair, the committee discussed the rough draft of their Code of Fair Practice, covering the triangular relations of agent, producer and artist.

Major Donovan, Coast Code Secretary, appointed through the Code Authority by John Flinn to the administrative and secretarial post of the Agency Committee, sat in the meeting, but in unofficial capacity only.

Under the impression that they were to select their own secretary, the Agency Committee wired John Flinn for enlightenment regarding the secretariat and adjourned.

Thursday, under chairmanship of Emanuel Cohen, the Agency Committee distributed first drafts of their Code of Fair Practice and discussed highlights. Members were requested to read it carefully and bring it before the particular group they represent prior to the next meeting.

Would Have to Pay Him

As to the secretaryship, John Flinn's wire indicated that they could select their own secretary but his salary and expenses of his office would have to be borne by the Committee itself. Major Donovan's salary and expenses are defrayed by the regularly constituted Code Authority with no charge to the Agency Committee.

Again the Committee wired East saying they had no money for salary and expenses, could not assess members, and again requested enlightenment as to a candidate who could devote his entire time to the Agency Committee.

The next meeting, in two weeks, will be chairmaned by George Frank, agent, in keeping with an alphabetical rotation plan.

The Agency Committee, one of four Code committees in Hollywood, is not an executive committee or active operating power. It is a committee dealing with activities of agents in their relation to other factors in production.

On the Agency Committee are:

Trem Carr; Emanuel Cohen; George Frank, agent; B. B. Kahane; Frank Lloyd, director; Adolphe Menjou, actor; J. Nicholaus, technician; Wells Root, writer; Winfield Sheehan; Jack L. Warner.

Three other committees soon to start functioning are the Actors' Committee, composed of five producers and five actors; the Directors' Committee, and the Writers' Committee, also on the five-five basis.

Film Companies Look to Stage

With MGM planning a legitimate stage stock company, composed of contract players to play locally, and Will Rogers' limited engagement in "Ah, Wilderness" extended because of capacity business, together with the presentation of "Bitter Harvest," a drama of episodes in the life of Lord Byron, the theatre seems to be showing signs of rejuvenation in Hollywood.

Never rated a top-hole show-town, the encouragement given Rogers may inspire film companies to enter the stage field to try out talent, see how vehicles play before putting them in production, and mayhap give directors a change of scene between pictures.

That plenty of real talent resides in Hollywood is evident from the presentation of "Bitter Harvest," scheduled for a New York opening in the Fall, with Leslie Howard a possible choice for Byron.

Mel Brown, former director for Radio Films, produced the play. Leslie Fenton, husband of Ann Dvorak and himself a Warner player, plays Byron. Dickson Morgan, who directed "The Fool," "Desire Under the Elms" and other plays, is piloting the players. Lola Luxford, of the films, plays Lady Oxford.

Playwright Catherine Turney, in her first effort, evidences rare craftsmanship.

Lillian Bond, of the screen, plays Byron's half-sister with tenderness. Her stage work seems to have enhanced her confidence and beauty.

Eight Start, Five Completed

Eight new pictures went before the cameras in the past week and five left the stages. MGM, Fox and Monogram each started two. Columbia and Paramount each started one. The five finished pictures are credited to Warner, Monogram, Willis Kent Productions, Columbia and Majestic.

MGM's starting pair are "Murder in the Private Car," an adaptation of a stage play, popular about a dozen years ago, in which Wesley Ruggles, Una Merkel, Mary Carlisle and Sterling Holloway head the cast, and "All Good Americans," another stage play adaptation, in which appear Robert Young, Una Merkel, Madge Evans and Otto Kruger.

The two for Fox are "Servants' Entrance," teaming Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres and featuring Louise Dresser, and a farce comedy, "Fun on the Air," featuring Joe Cook, stage and vaudeville star,

RENO CAN TAKE IT IF FOREIGN STATE CAN'T

At a private projection room preview, of a picture with a foreign villain, the cutter informed the producer that the film never would get by in that country because it resented having its citizens pictured as "villains."

Too costly to reshoot the picture, the film when finally previewed revealed that just before the "villain's" entrance, a dissolve title was inserted to read "Reno, Nevada."

CALLS CODES UNFAIR

ARTICLE ON RADIO PREMIUMS TIMELY

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your article in current publication regarding air programs' free premiums is certainly timely and gives one a general picture of the unfairness of the codes.

Incidentally, the Kellogg Co. broadcast throughout this territory recently that any child presenting two Kellogg Corn Flake tops would be admitted to the Indianapolis 500-mile race free. As far as the writer knows, this is the first time in the history of the Speedway it ever made a tieup of this nature.—Carl Niesse, Central City Amusement Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

ASKS DATA ON TRIO IN AD SALES VENTURE

To the Editor of the Herald:

We are notifying you of a racket by which we were hooked here and are afraid that others may be hooked in the future. There are three men who came in to our theatre with the following proposition: They would go out and get advertising from the different merchants in town. We were to run these ads, for which we were to receive a pony free, to give out at one of our matinees.

Our merchants paid them for the advertising and the men skipped town, leaving us all holding the bag.

If any information comes your way as to the whereabouts of these men, kindly get in touch with the Plaza Theatre, Corning, New York.—W. Gabriel, New Plaza Theatre, Corning, N. Y.

DEFENDS DOUBLE FEATURING POLICY

To the Editor of the Herald:

As I seem to be the only exhibitor here against compulsory single bills, I would like to state my reasons in your publication if possible.

The cry is heard on all sides of greater profits made when only one feature was shown. I can remember back when big profits were made with only two-reel and three-reel pictures many years ago.

Times change and I for one do not think we can go back to single bills successfully any more than the single biller could have gone back to the two-reeler shows. Everything is different now, what with less money to spend and other economic changes. Besides, it was tried last year and found not the answer to the problem.—D. B. Irvine, Florence and Florencita Theatres, Los Angeles, Cal.

JUST WHAT TO PAY FOR FILM

To the Editor of the Herald:

Much has been written about film rentals in the Herald and of the activities of the exhibitors in their fight against distributors on increased rentals, but nowhere do we find a reasonable workable plan whereby exhibitors can know just what to pay for film.

To us it is of little importance whether film rental goes up or down, just so it is in keeping with our receipts and expenses, and allowing us a reasonable margin of profit. During the past several years our film has been up and our receipts have been down.

In your issue of April 7, page 44, a Mr. Barr cites an example of the receipts of a percentage picture played by him and the film rental against it. We can give plenty of comparative figures on that, not only on special or percentage pictures, but on regular program pictures, on which film rental eats us up. Along with Mr. Barr is an example of one Albert Cooper who bought "The Bowery" last run for $40.00 while a prior run got it for $25.00.

Mr. Editor, we ask you, what shall an exhibitor pay for pictures?—Harry L. Simerman, Shawnee Theatre,, Louisville, Ky.

Both the new Monogram productions are romantic dramas. David Manners and Phyllis Barry will be starred in "Moon Stone." "Tomorrow's Youth" will have Martha Sleeper, John Miljan, Dickie Moore and Franklin Pangborn as principals.

Columbia's entry, "By Persons Unknown," a drama, will feature Ralph Bellamy, Shirley Grey, Arthur Hohl and J. Carroll Naish.

In the new Paramount feature, "You Belong to Me," Lee Tracy and Helen Mack will be the principals.

Diversity is the keynote of the completed productions. Warner's "Kansas City Princess," a comedy, stars Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert and Robert Armstrong.

Romance is the atmosphere of "Happy Landings," Monogram contribution, which features Ray Walker, Jacqueline Wells and Noah Beery.

Kent Productions completed "Guns for Hire," a western, with Lane Chandler and Sally Darling.

"Blind Date," dramatic romance, was completed at Columbia with Ann Sothern, Paul Kelly and Mickey Rooney featured.

An American literary classic, Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," was completed by Majestic. Colleen Moore, Hardie Albright, Henry B. Walthall and Alan Hale are the principal players.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Return of Bulldog Drummond

(British International)

Melodrama

British International Pictures, Ltd., offers to the American market a stirring melodrama under the familiar "Bulldog Drummond" title, which is based on the Sappers' novel, "The Black Gang." The production is adequate but in comparison with current standards it suffers somewhat through unevenness and lack of polish. But despite certain technical lapses it comprises that very desirable thing of being a good show. Suspense in a high degree has been carefully carried throughout the production and it is competently performed.

This Sappers' story is concerned with the efforts of "The Black Gang," a heroic organization headed by the wily and resourceful Drummond, which seeks to curtail in England the machinations of a lawless coterie of international schemers who seek directly to foster a war fever for the indirect purpose of selling armament. The theme is timely and it affords excellent opportunities for thrilling encounters and hair-raising escapes. Drummond is played by Ralph Richardson, a smooth and competent performer who, while not particularly impressive in his earliest scenes, has the faculty of growing in effectiveness as the picture progresses. He has a naturalness of manner which lends credulity to the almost incredulous exploits which Drummond performs.

It is a production of wide audience appeal, involving those elements which are of universal interest in entertainment. It is an English story, produced in England and performed by English players. We see no reason why the exhibitor should not meet the issue squarely. It should be presented for exactly what it is. The public is interested in the entertainment capabilities of pictures and not in their origins. It is a wholesome and moving melodrama which may be confidently offered as a show of a type that usually affords much satisfaction to audiences. Claud Allister, well-known to American audiences, has a principal part in which he plays his usual character of an affected Englishman, supplying the leading vein of comedy.

Comedy

This picture is good clean comedy. As a novel situation is utilized, the motivating element is given an unique romantic twist. The cast is adequate, even if it boasts no natural magnetic names. It might be a good idea to remind patrons of pictures in which the leads recently have appeared. Thus Stuart Erwin recently appeared in "Viva Villa" and "Most Precious Thing in Life;" Rochelle Hudson in "Such Women Are Dangerous;" Pert Kelton in "The Bowery" and Berton Churchill in "Half a Sinner."

However, as there is all-family entertainment in the story, the production should be exploited to the utmost, and a little study is all that's necessary to uncover any number of interest exciting possibilities. In idea, it's a farcical treatment of a legitimate but odd business—the business of providing husbands and wives for lonely and bashful folk. That some one assumes it to have racket atmosphere, adds vividly to the comedy setup, giving the picture continuous suspense.

Fired from his job as clerk in the Marriage License Bureau, Wilbur, inspired by Linda, organizes Romance, Incorporated, and the institution is soon a major industry. Van Dusen muscling in as Big Barney, political tycoon, also tries to grab some of the gravy, Wilbur is sincerely trying to promote a marriage for Linda and a wealthy oil man, Belden. The situation is complicated as Allie, Van Dusen's ex-wife, tries to chisel in. The business getting too much for Wilbur, he sells it to Barney, just as it turns out that Belden, a district attorney investigator, has uncovered a conspiracy-extortion plot. But Barney is the owner as Wilbur finally realizes that Linda is the girl for him and the new owner of Romance, Inc., is left with the wreckage.

Laughter is the element to concentrate upon in selling this picture. The title, plus the "Romance, Incorporated," idea, can be made the basis of a number of unusual exploitation gags. Similarly, the classified ad. angle, that results in thousands of replies to a small ad, suggests tieups with newspapers. The show can be sold as an all-family attraction with fun for the youngsters as well as grownups.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

(MGM-Cosmopolitan)

Dramatic Romance

From both an entertainment and showmanship viewpoint, this show has the elements necessary in story, cast, production and author values. It's not an out and out war picture. While there is martial color, justifying topical exploitation on that line, the show is more a dramatic romance with features for all classes. There is the excitement of danger and adventure to interest the men, and heart interest for feminine attention. At the same time, there is musical quality, in which Miss Davies and the Four Mills Brothers actively participate and which is accentuated by the score, that should be exploited.

Essentially a dramatic historical romance, the love story of "Operator 13" is told against the panorama of the Civil War. In the role of a Federal spy, Gail Loveless is thrown into hateful conflict and tender love with a young Confederate officer, Captain Lawless. Disguised as an octoroon maid, Gail, at a colorful military ball, learns and relays secrets to the Union forces, devastating to the Confederate cause. A thrilling spy hunt on, Gailliard is ordered to capture or kill the octoroon Gail, with whom, as Anne, he is in love. However, her identity established, Gailliard, torn between love and duty, takes up the chase. Finally capturing her, he himself is in danger of both capture and death as Federal forces approach the lover's hiding place, only to have Gail save him. They part, to wait until peace comes to restore their romance.

So many diversified ticket selling angles are available in exploitating this show that picking the most effective seems a difficult task. The story on which the picture is based was written by Robert W. Chambers, one of the most popular of current authors. The cast, headed by a star whose box office power is well established, is composed entirely of well-known names. The title, in relation to the function of the star and the story theme, has an intriguing tone. The appeal of love interest is counterbalanced by menacing danger as well as exciting action. Touches of natural, easing comedy crop up continually and the introduction of the Mills Brothers provides for novel variety in the musical features.

Chambers. Songs by Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn. Synchronization by Dr. William Axt. Recording Director, Douglas Shearer. Art Director, Cedric Gibbons. Associates, Arnold Gillespie and Edwin B. Baby Take a Bow

(Fox - John Stone)

Comedy Drama

Here is a show that, because of its little star, Shirley Temple, its story, comedy, drama, romance and human interest, has a powerful heart appeal. There are mechanical defects, to be sure, but overriding those imperfections is an understandable heart-thrilling human quality aimed at often, but seldom attained.

There is nothing startling or pretentious about it other than the little girl. With another child other than the star of "Baby Burlesks," "Stand Up And Cheer" and "Little Miss Marker," it probably would be just ordinary juvenile entertainment. But because of her almost unbelievable artistry and ability, "Baby Take A Bow" becomes universally appealing, worthy of the patronage and support of regular and irregular theatre-goer alike.

The plot is simple and powerful. It gives audiences an ex-convict, Jimmy Dunn, trying to go straight, and his wife, Claire Trevor, two characters with whom they can sincerely sympathize. It colors and amplifies that element by having the couple help another ex-con, Ray Walker, and his sweetheart, Dorothy Libaire, to live honestly and right. It gives them the little daughter of the first pair to love. Thinking she is playing a game of hide and seek, she brings her father within the shadow of the penitentiary again and her mother to the doorstep of hopeless tragedy. There's a ruthless, iron-hearted villain, Alan Dinehart, guised as an insurance company investigator, to hate. There's the menace of a desperate thief, who, to save his own hide, would tear down everything that years of love, hope and sacrifice have built, to thrill and chill them.

In production there is the gay colorful humanness of plain folk's happiness; the triumph as innocence prevails and the satisfaction of seeing dastardly plots go awry. The audience may anticipate and know all that is going to happen, yet that is an actual advantage that consolidates attention.

For straight-away commercial purposes, Shirley Temple is the most salable asset. She is the value that good business sense dictates should be capitalized to the limit. Those who see it at its opening performances may be expected to carry a more convincing influence to others than all that cold type extravagant claims could possibly convey.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Kiss and Make Up

(Paramount-Schulberg)

Comedy

This picture actually is farce comedy. Carrying a standby romantic motivation, novel entertainment as well as commercial value is found in the striking manner in which it liberally satirizes the modern feminine tendency to keep young and charming via beauty shop, face lifting, diet and prescribed exercising. Primarily a different kind of woman's picture, it is also an exploitation feature that opens the door to many new and effective business creating contacts.

Well mounted and dressed, modern settings and innovations making it a good looking picture, the salable value of the title is accentuated by the inclusion of the Baby Stars of 1934 as a unit, the fact that it has Cary Grant, the presence of Helen Mack, Genevieve Tobin, Edward Everett Horton, Lucien Littlefield and Mona Maris in the principal supporting roles.

The locales are Paris and Continental spas. Dr. Lamar's modernistic beauty salon, operated with all the fanfare of high pressure business technique, is the haven of ladies, old and young, who want to be made beautiful. Loved by his plain little secretary, Anne, the Doctor creates a beautiful Frankenstein of Eve, Marcel Caron's ex-wife, who would have loved her forever the way she was. Colored by atmospheric and glamorous situations, marriage is no bed of roses for Lamar, as Eve's new beauty is the incentive to further amorous conquests, which convince the Doctor that he married a lot of cosmetics. Only when Anne threatens to elope with Caron does Lamar wake up to the real love that has been right at his elbow all along. Then comes a hectic chase, a thrill burlesque which loosens Caron's toupe.

With commercial and publicity contacts worked to the limit, the campaign should smartly kid the idea of the picture. Plenty of attention should be given the women folk. If a pro and con controversy can be started, getting recognized doctors and beauty culturists to indorse or condemn the artificial beauty making idea, it should be productive.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Here Comes The Groom

(Paramount-Rogers)

Comedy

As farce comedy, moving along with zip and verve and having for its sole objective the creation of giggles, grins and guffaws, this show has that entertainment quality appreciated by practically all types of theatre-goers. Naturally it's constructed of standby theatrical elements, yet there's comedy in the romantic, dramatic, mistaken identity and thrill situations. The producers have turned back many chapters in the book of picture-making technique and revived the old crooks-in-the-house-of-the-wealthy-hidden-stolen-jewels gag for a fundamental motivating idea. To color it up and make it modernly entertaining, they've surrounded it with half a dozen hilarity-inspiring situations and specialties. And the whole thing is topped off with a racing chase finale gayly reminiscent of the days when motion pictures were young.

With wholesome comedy, the picture brings Jack Haley to the fore as a promising funster. Known to fans for his appearance in "Sitting Pretty," where he had Jack Oakie for a running mate, he's on his own this time and as he represents the value of a comparatively new screen name, he is a showmanship asset.

Aired by Angy, his wife, Mike, who wants to be a piccolo player rather than a first-class crook in a family of crooks, comically fails in an attempted holdup. Fleeing the frying pan of police ire, he lands in the fire of being forced to accept the role of husband of Patricia, whose crooning husband, Marvin, ran out on the honeymoon. In the Randolph household the situation becomes hilariously complicated. Wife Angy is there as a maid intent on loot. Pa Randolph and Jim, who really loves Pat, are openly suspicious of the unwilling bridegroom, and the snooping detective, still looking for the escaped Mike, is a continual menace. Mrs. Widden (the aunt) wants to hear the crooner sing, which Mike does by mimicking his voice and music as it comes in over the radio. To get rid of the radio Mike loads it on a truck. Then the pearls are reported missing and Angy tells Mike she hid them in the lost radio. Then comes a wild chase preceding a fadeout that has Mike playing a two-note piccolo solo as the finale of a symphony concert.

Nonsensical fun is the thing to sell in this picture. In locales where it's necessary to sell the show, a caricature word picture campaign should do the trick.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Love Captive

(Universal)

Melodrama

Highly melodramatic material of the hypnotic eye variety, this production leans rather heavily in the direction of the feminine element of the patronage, in that it is considerably lacking in action and is the type of film in which women are much more apt to be interested.

What exploitation possibilities lie in the film necessarily will revolve about the hypnotic phase of the story, with the opportunity for street and store window display on that order worth exhibitor consideration. The romance of the young couple, almost completely ruined by the presence of the young doctor with his power to bring young women under his spell, and the adjunctive second complication, whereby the hypnotist comes close to wrecking a happy marriage, indicate how thoroughly the film tends toward feminine appeal.

There are several familiar names, the best of them being Nils Asther, Gloria Stuart, Alan Dinehart. Paul Kelly, though not particularly well known, handles his role effectively. The title itself, if too heavily emphasized, is apt to result in a rather complete lack of interest by the masculine portion of the patronage, while it may serve to stimulate the interest of the opposite sex in the showing.

Asther, young physician who practices hypnotism and little else, meets Miss Stuart, who is engaged to an eminent young doctor, Kelly, and she falls under his spell, becomes his nurse and virtually breaks her engagement with Kelly. The latter, seriously disturbed, prepares to fight what he considers an insidious and cheap influence in the life of the girl he loves. Asther, meanwhile, meets a newspaper reporter who becomes his press agent, and builds him and his practice to the point where he is a highly publicized and well known practitioner.

Kelly, driven to desperation, accidentally meets a former nurse of Asther, and with her testimony, plans to bring Asther before the medical board, asking his ouster as a charlatan. When the girl refuses to further amplify her testimony, Kelly plans to kill Asther himself, to break his influence over Miss Stuart. Dinehart, brother-in-law of Kelly, tries to dissuade him, and suddenly realizes himself that Asther has managed to exert a similar influence over his own wife, Renee Gadd. Asther, attempting to defend himself before a crowded medical board meeting, offers as evidence a pistol demonstration, whereby the victim is unable to fire

The Secret of the Loch

(A.B.F.D. British)

Drama, Comedy, Thrills

The extent to which the American public has been interested by newspaper stories of the mysterious "monster" of Loch Ness will determine the appeal of this picture. It is not a serious attempt to explain the occurrences way up in Scotland, but it ingeniously exploits the public curiosity about the Monster (which has still to be identified), to give suspense value to a story in which comedy values otherwise predominate.

Said Monster, as the film presents him, is not either very terrifying or very convincing. We are told he is something ending in "-aurus," a late hatching of a prehistoric egg, but he looks more like Lizard on a large scale. Nevertheless, there is well maintained interest.

Professor Heggie, a scientist living near Loch Ness, believes in the reality of the Monster and tries to convert a meeting of London zoologists to his theory that the egg of a prehistoric creature has been preserved in a cavern beneath the waters and hatched by an exceptionally warm summer. He is ridiculed and the meeting ends in a free fight. Jimmy Anderson, a reporter, impressed by the professor's sincerity, gets permission to go to Scotland for investigations on the spot. There he finds a crowd of other newspaper men, but gets ahead of them by making love to the professor's granddaughter and swearing friendship with his bodyservant.

The Professor employs a diver to search the cavern, but his life-line is bitten through by the Monster. The Professor is censured at the inquest and the press publicity turns him violently against Jimmy. Then Jimmy makes a descent in a diving suit and is attacked by the Monster, which follows him to the surface and is "shot" by the press cameras, before sinking again. The professor, overjoyed to have his theory substantiated, bestows his granddaughter on Jimmy.

A realistic picture of the choleric man of science, by Seymour Hicks, a humorously clever study of a hairy highlander from Gibson Gowland and plenty of laughs in the scenes showing Jimmy's investigation at the loch, are among the entertainment assets. The picture can be sold where the Loch Ness news has created interest, as a speculative solution of the mystery and from that angle lends itself to exploitation on "Lost World" lines.—ALLAN, London.

Cockeyed Cavaliers

(Radio - Lou Brock)

Comedy

Gag and situation comedy is the entertainment and showmanship turn of this picture. The fun crops out in dialogue, action and reactions. Following the familiar Wheeler-Woolsey technique, interpolated specialties add to the comical color. In two or three spots dialogue gags are subject to dual interpretations, but all is in a spirit of fun. The picture has plenty of the quality demanded by the Wheeler-Woolsey fans. Additionally, it offers something a little different in the line of comedy entertainment. One feature that should not be overlooked in any publicity campaign is Noah Beery's singing. That, in itself, is both a surprise and a treat. When talkers first came in a lot of stress was placed on hearing this and that one talk and sing. Dormant for some years, the times—necessating something new—and the quality of Beery's soloing justify readaptation of this line of appeal.

Located in rural England, timed to the medieval ages, the comedy duo are introduced as a pair of 15th century hobos riding the rods of a stage-coach. An incurable kleptomaniac, Bert steals everything in sight, even the coach and horses. Locked in the stocks, objects of a barrage of overripe vegetables, they are rescued by Mary Ann. As the girl is mistaken for a boy, the show settles down in an old manor, where the comedians pose as the King's physicians. Many laughs follow. The climax is a wild boar chase in which Bert and Bob capture the tusked terror of the countryside, to be rewarded with 5,000 sovereigns, enough to ransom the girl from an unhappy marriage and insure a hectic happy ending.

The show is audience entertaining, measuring up tho the Wheeler-Woolsey standard, and offers salable elements.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Such Women Are Dangerous

(Fox)

Drama

The exhibitor, in the merchandising of this picture, should concentrate all his selling energy on the feminine portion of his patronage, with the added impetus of Warner Baxter as the star. The film is, first to last, a woman's picture, even though the introduction of murder suspicion throws the setting into court with its attendant murder trial action.

A man among women, three women, each in her own peculiar way deeply in love with him, Baxter finds his way through the fog to a happy ending with the right woman. En route to that ending he finds complications, not of his own making, which very nearly bring him to the electric chair. It is the type of film which the women in the audience live through, every moment of it.

With Baxter are Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson, Mona Barrie, as the three women in his life. Henrietta Crosman supplies a touch of comedy in her usual capable fashion, and Herbert Mundin contributes the remainder of the relieving humor. The film in a sense points a lesson against permitting the heart touch of the moment to run completely away with the head. In that way the film may well be right for exhibition to younger girls, but otherwise it is an adult attraction.

Baxter is a highly successful author of the lighter and less significant kind of fiction, bought in endless quantities by women of all types. Miss Ames is his highly efficient secretary. Disturbed by the singing of a neighbor, he storms over to quiet the noise, and finds himself instead falling into an infatuation with Miss Barrie, the singer. To New York to seek assistance with her "literary" endeavors comes Miss Hudson, young orphan girl who had heard Baxter speak some time before at a woman's club lecture in the Midwest. Baxter does not even remember her name, but the girl manages to wrangle an appointment to see him.

He tries to let her down gently, with Miss Ames' help, indicating that she never can write, and that she had better return to her home. But she is persistent, and in her young girl manner falls completely in love with the much older Baxter. His efforts to rid himself of her increasingly annoying attentions, at the same time trying not to be unkind, avail him little. Eventually comes a showdown. He sends her away with a check to cover her railroad fare home, but she, instead, believing Miss Barrie has come between them, goes to a tiny country house they once had seen together by accident, and disappears. Miss Barrie's husband, returning, ends that incident. Miss Hudson's body is discovered, circumstantial evidence seriously incriminates Baxter, and only the late discovery of a letter of Miss Hudson saves him. Now he discovers that Miss Ames is much more attractive than he ever realized.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Al Rockett, producer. Directed by James Flood. From the story, "Odd Thursday," by Vera Caspary. Screen play by Jane Storm and Oscar M. Sheridan. Additional dialogue by Lenore Coffee. Release date, May 4, 1934. Running time, 81 minutes.

Fog Over Frisco

(Warner)

Melodrama

Highly melodramatic material, with fast moving action running almost completely through it, this film has good selling points. There are a touch of crime and gangsterism for thrill and pep, active and not too conspicuous romance, and numerous well-spotted laughs.

There is a possibility of interest-stimulation in the title, which should be well publicized. As a further means of arousing patron interest and attention, the exhibitor may indicate that a murder mystery has its place in the film, which involves a thrill-hunting wealthy girl, her undercover criminal activity, and the romance of a newspaper man, hot on the trail of a big story, and the equally wealthy half-sister of the girl of criminal bent.

The fact that Bette Davis plays the role of the crooked thrill-hunter offers a possibility for the selling of her name, indicating that here she plays a somewhat different sort of role. With her are Margaret Lindsay, as her sister; Lyle Talbot, Donald Woods, as the reporter, and Hugh Herbert, for comedy.

Selling should be based on the action and mystery elements of the story, tying in that angle with the intriguing title, and indicating this as no modern problem play, but a frankly melodramatic yarn with an ample portion of action and suspense, and considerable entertainment.

Miss Davis is established early as a thrill-chasing girl of wealth, who has entangled herself in the handling of stolen securities, which she disposes of for Irving Pichel, gang leader, through the helpless Talbot, working in her father's brokerage office and hopelessly in love with Miss Davis. Miss Lindsay, her half-sister, knows nothing of her escapades and has faith in her, defending the girl against the tirades of her resentful father. Miss Lindsay is angry with the innocent Woods, young reporter, in love with her, for the appearance in the news of Miss Davis' appearance at a night club run by Pichel.

Herbert is the newspaper photographer who trails Woods everywhere and supplies the amusement en route. The securities thefts come to the attention of officials of the firm, and Talbot is in disgrace, though Miss Davis is known by the stepfather to be the source of the trouble. When Miss Davis attempts to get out of the racket, and is further involved romantically with a member of the firm, she is murdered, and her body stuffed into the rumble seat of her car, which Miss Lindsay unwittingly drives in her search for the suddenly missing Miss Davis. Talbot also is found murdered, the engagement ring which Miss Davis had returned to him, clutched in his hand.

The gang, wanting valuable papers in Miss Lindsay's possession, given to her by Miss Davis, kidnaps the sister. Only after a race to the river, a fight on a fog-shrouded dock, and a carefully set trap, is the girl returned to complete her romance and the mysteries cleared finally.—AARONSON, New York.

The World in Revolt

Pictorial Record

Dipping into the files of the newsreels, judiciously cutting and editing, adding a musical score of appropriate forcefulness and an accompanying verbal explanation, Mentone has produced a pictorial record of a populace dissatisfied, disturbed and aggressively active in opposition to the status quo, in many a country the world over.

That the picture is entertainment in the commonly accepted meaning of that term as applied to the motion picture, cannot be said. But it is a careful effort, active and impressive in its fashion, authentic in its picturization, and definitely significant of a trend which has characterized nationalistic peoples of the world virtually since the conclusion of the World War.

In past, more or less recent and current news headlines all over the world blaring forth tidings of general strikes, flaring unrest, rioting, disorder and armed clashes between police, troops and citizens in very nearly every capital in the world lies the exhibitor's cue to selling this film. The subject matter is strong, it is in a very real sense a provocative type of presentation, and tells in active picture what newspapers have long been telling in cold, unemotional type. Also perhaps as a selling point is the fact that Graham McNamee renders the accompanying descriptive matter in his usual excitable fashion.

By way of contrast, the film opens on the peaceful vistas of Potsdam and the German royal palace, and the equally calm atmosphere of Munich. Then rapidly the film moves to the war and Russia. The Czar Nicholas reviews his troops, 1917 dawns, and hordes of soldiers and civilians storm through the streets of the regal Petrograd. Follow in quick succession as the millions of Russia work out their destiny, Kerensky, Lenin, Trotsky, the author Gorky and finally Stalin and the Five-Year Plan.

In Austria develops active opposition to the government of the small Dollfuss, terminating, for the moment at least, in the bloody strife which reduced to shell-torn wreckage the great state apartment houses of Vienna, used by the Socialists. In the excitable hot-bed which is Cuba the Machado regime of stringent and relentless authority crashes, as the people answer terrorism with terrorism, as presidents come and go in rapid succession.

Italy's powerfully dominant Il Duce, Benito Mussolini, storms into the country, and rules with a display of consistent strength which rarely has been equaled, as the Italians follow his beacon of Fascism. In Ireland Cosgrave and De Valera battle to turn Ireland into a united country. In India swarming masses, under the leadership of a former London lawyer, Gandhi, dignified by his followers as Mahatma, are alternately passive and restless as they battle for rights they have never known. Follow France and the Stavisky scandals, giving rise to unrest; China and its internal strife; Germany and its succession of President Ebert, President Hindenburg and finally the demogogue Hitler.

The United States and its lively New Deal concludes the film, which as a record of trends in nationalism the world over has a definite amount of interest and significance.—AARONSON, New York.

A Mentone Production. Narrative written by Emil Lengyel. Narration by Graham McNamee. Release date to be announced. Running time, 69 minutes.

Wings over Everest

(Gaumont British)

Classic Flight Filmed

The conquest of Mount Everest from the air was accomplished at a time when the attempt to reach the summit by the ordinary (or rather extraordinary) methods of mountain climbing failed by a very narrow margin. Both were great achievements, the failure perhaps even greater than the success, but there can be no doubt that the aerial expedition lent itself better to film reproduction.

This screen record is, in fact, worthy of the great feat of skillful planning, perfect technique and courageous execution to which it pays tribute. It is striking and interesting. It pictures the inception and organization as well as the execution of the flight, which was financed by Lady Houston on an appeal from Lord Clydesdale, one of the ultimately successful pilots.

Of the actual flight over the summit of Everest, every incident has been recorded by the G-B cameras, from the preliminary journey over the Kanchenjunga desert right up into the clouds until the highest peak in the world is seen "birdseye view" in an amazing panorama.

An accident provides a strikingly dramatic incident almost at the moment of success. The aviators can breath only by means of their oxygen masks. S. R. Bonnett, chief of the G-B cameramen, found that his tube was leaking and is seen binding it with his handkerchief while gasping for breath—and continuing to "shoot."

This is an unusual picture with strong appeal to the more intelligent community. Exploitation methods should be based on a realization that a subject with real historical and educational values is being presented. There is a chance to go for local cultural leaders and for the schools. The general public can be offered the official record of the "first over Everest" flight.—ALLAN, London.

Produced and distributed by Gaumont-British. Directed by Geoffrey Barkas and Ivor Montagu. Chief cameraman, S. R. Bonnett.

Those Were Wonderful Days

(Vitaphone)

Fair

A fair number of the Merrie Melodies cartoon series, which is introduced by the inevitable masculine and mustached quartette of the Nineties. This tells the old melodramatic story, in pen and ink, of the girl and her hero at the country fair. Along comes the snarling villain, who escapes with her in a balloon. Up goes the hero to do battle in defense of his love, the whole being a fair cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

City of the Golden Gate

(Fox)

Interesting

Characterized, as are all of the Magic Carpet of Movietone series, by excellent and highly selective photography, this subject presents, in kaleidoscopic effect, the city of San Francisco and the beauty of its Golden Gate. The camera pictures the small cable cars, necessary in the steep streets, delves into the completely native Chinatown and in general gives a complete picture of the Pacific Coast metropolis. Dialogue is sparse, background music is appropriate, two distinct additions to the effectiveness of the subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Betty in Blunderland

(Paramount)

Entertaining

There is much that is clever and entertaining in this subject of the Betty Boop cartoon series, in which Betty, falling asleep over her jig-saw puzzle, dreams of walking through the looking glass and finding all the odd characters which Alice found in the similar trip she took. The subject should be especially entertaining and amusing for the youngsters.—Running time, 7 minutes.

There Ain't No Justice

Fair

Noisy and bombastic, this comedy featuring Herbert Corthell and Paul Hurst, as irate husband and annoying brother-in-law, respectively, has but little of particularly entertaining comedy about it. Corthell's wife walks out, planning a divorce. An unknown woman comes in, and Corthell learns Hurst has been using his name in his connection with the woman. Corthell's wife sees her husband and the woman together, and at the trial a woman judge sees to it that Corthell has not a chance.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Mild Cargo

(Radio)

Amusing

There is considerable amusement in this animated subject, in which Cubby the Bear is the insignificant counterpart of Frank Buck of "Wild Cargo" notability. In this burlesque on the feature, cleverly handled, Cubby traps them and captures them in various ways, using excavators to dig traps, and spreading dinners to entice tigers. Quite entertaining.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Underneath the Broadway Moon

(Paramount)

Entertaining

Isham Jones, solemn-faced popular orchestra leader, conducts his band in a number of popular modern compositions, with occasional flashes to appropriate pictorial sequences, and the rendition of a song by the Four Eton Boys, rather well known on the air. It is entertaining material, with the Isham Jones name perhaps making possible extra billing of the subject.—Running time, 10 minues.

NRA DECLARES AGAINST PRICE FIXING IN CODES

Way Opened for Modification in Existing Codes; Second Darrow Report Issued with No Mention of Film Industry

The National Recovery Administration last week turned its back on price-fixing in outlining a new policy which is designed to obtain some uniformity in future codes, and, wherever industries currently operating under approved codes may so desire, to effectuate the necessary changes. The new policy does not maintain, however, that industries already under codification "must" or "will have to" conform to the new policy as set forth for the unification of future codes.

Under the new NRA plan the force of the anti-trust laws against covert, price-maintaining combinations was made unquestioned. All code restrictions on prices are reduced to the simplest terms on a base that would make arrangements to keep prices up difficult, if not impossible, if the industries in question so agree. Only in definite emergencies would even a minimum price be fixed for any industry or any item. NRA officials in Washington declared Friday that they believed the new policy represented the first agreement of either the government or any business agency on what constituted desirable price competition.

Publish Second Darrow Report

Fiery in its denunciation of General Hugh S. Johnson, the second Darrow Recovery Review Board report to President Roosevelt on the operations of the NRA was made public Monday, specifically charging that "sinister changes" were made in the retail code before reaching the President.

No further denunciations or recommendations were made in this second report with respect to the motion picture industry's code, but an attack on the film code and the personalities involved in its negotiation and administration is anticipated in the third and final report of the Board, to be submitted to the President later this month. The second report covered 13 industries, and it was expected a special analysis of the film code might be attached, although up to press time this had neither been announced nor made public.

Formal announcement, however, was made concerning the dissolution of the Darrow Board, the date being set at July 1.

The report on salary conditions in the motion picture industry, already set back several times, may never "see the light of day," it was intimated this week at NRA headquarters in Washington.

No Premium Restrictions

It was pointed out that the salary-study provision was inserted in the code largely to stave off any demand for an investigation which might have been made at the capitol as a result of the disclosures at the time the motion picture operations of the Chase National Bank and other New York banking firms came to light.

Of interest to exhibitors will be the ruling made last week by the NRA that in new codes yet to be promulgated the use of premiums of any and every sort will not be restricted, and, in the codes already approved, will be open to modification of inconsistent provisions if such modification is sought by the affected industry or is deemed necessary to correct hardships or abuses.

The NRA this week gave notice that pursuant to a provision in the film code, the Administrator has reached a preliminary determination that a set of fair practices should be adopted for the industry governing the relations between producers and writers and producers and actors. Such preliminary determination will become absolute on June 16 unless good cause to the contrary is shown prior to that date and a subsequent order to that effect is passed by the Administrator.

Dorothy Dell Is Killed in Crash

Dorothy Dell, whose sudden rise in the world of the screen had brought her, within a few months, within striking distance of stardom, was killed last week in an automobile accident in Pasadena, Cal. Her companion, Dr. Carl Wagner, prominent Pasadena dentist, was fatally injured in the crash that followed when his car plunged off the road and into a ditch.

Miss Dell, whose full name was Dorothy Dell Goff, was the daughter of a retired New Orleans lumberman. She began winning beauty contests at the tender age of 13 months, when she was selected as the "most beautiful baby" in a contest in Hattiesburg, Miss., where the body has been returned for burial. At the age of 13 she won a radio performing contest, which was followed by successive designations of beauty terminating in a "Miss Universe" and her selection by Florenz Ziegfeld for his "Follies" in 1931. She made a hit in the "Follies" particularly with one song, which was entertainingly titled "Was I Drunk? Was He Handsome? Did My Ma Give Me Hell?"

Her most recent screen appearance was in the feminine lead of Paramount's "Wharf Angel." At the time of her death she was engaged in the same company's production, "Shoot the Works," opposite Jack Oakie, who was one of the few Hollywood players at the Coast funeral service last weekend. So rapid was her recent rise, that few Hollywood notables were numbered among her acquaintances.

Educational Signs Keaton

Buster Keaton has been signed to a new contract by Educational and will make four comedies for the 1934-35 season, following completion of two on the current program.

Sten Option Is Renewed

Samuel Goldwyn has renewed an option on Anna Sten for an additional two years.

Legal Censorship Is First Defense, Declares Esmond

"Legal censorship is a first line of defense against pictures that may tend to corrupt morals or incite to crime," declared Irwin Esmond, chief of the New York censor board, speaking in defense of censorship before the Syracuse Herald Cinema Critics Club in Syracuse this week.

Indicating that censorship may not accomplish all that may seem desirable, and pointing to the value of the cooperation of churches and welfare organizations, Mr. Esmond said: "No one expects that all pictures will be made for children or that the production of legitimate drama will be hampered unreasonably through the exercise of legislative regulation. We all want clean pictures."

The censor official "conceded" that the screen has been "a most helpful agency" during the depression. "The screen entertainment has had the effect many times of furnishing relief, temporarily at least, for minds and bodies overstrained with care and worry. Anyone who has had occasion to study audiences . . . during the past three or four years . . . I think will agree with me that moving pictures have had a great influence in preserving the sanity and poise of our people during these difficult years."

The film, he declared, has immense possibilities for good, but also capacity for evil. "I believe it to be the duty of all of us . . . to encourage, reasonably and sanely, the development of the good and discourage and prevent, so far as possible, the evil," he concluded.

U. S. Aid Asked In Polish Banning

Intercession of the State Department at Washington in an effort to have the Polish government set aside its order banning Warner's "The Life of Jimmy Dolan" has been asked by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America after direct efforts of the organization to secure removal of the ban were unsuccessful. As a result of the barring of the picture, it was said, the Polish government later extended the exclusion order to all Warner-First National-Vitaphone product.

Although the Polish government explained its order was the result of placing the name of a distinguished Polish patriot upon a character in the story, the MPPDA alleges this was merely "an example of the flimsy excuses used by some foreign interests to destroy the foreign trade of the American motion picture industry for the purpose of establishing heavily subsidized European producing centers which would replace American films not only in Europe but would be dumped on the American market as well."

In taking its plea to the State Department, the organization asserted that following the issuance of the prohibition, expensive changes were made in the picture.

MURDER IN THE PRIVATE CAR

MGM

This picture story is adapted from a stage play which under the title "The Rear Car" was highly popular about a dozen years ago. About ten years ago, it was made as a silent under the title "Red Lights." Essentially a murder mystery thriller, the stage play from which it was adapted was written by Edward E. Rose. The screen play is by Ralph Spence, Edgar Allan Woolf and Al Boasberg, whose previous accomplishments are indicative of their flair for comedy. Adaptation is by Harver Thew, who did "Bed Side," "She Done Him Wrong," and "Operator 13." Direction is by Harry Beaumont, who recently handled "When Ladies Meet" and "Should Lades Behave."

Despite the dramatic thrill mystery premise, comedy is the outstanding showmanship factor. To assure the full development of that element, the cast is composed almost exclusively of established comedians. Leading roles are occupied by Charles Ruggles, Una Merkel, Mary Carlisle and Russell Hardie, whose work requires no detailing. Supporting this group are Willard Robertson, Sterling Holloway, "Snowflake," Berton Churchill and Wilfred Lucas.

The story is one of those things that makes one laugh while he cringes in terror. The locale is the rear sleeping car of a transcontinental train. Full of that quality which marked the cycle of such plays as "The Bat," "The Gorilla," "Cat and the Canary," "Nine Forty Five" and "The Unknown Purple," the yarn majors in mystifying suspense that is contracted by hokum farcical comedy. Dead bodies are found, only to disappear, as the "crime deflector" pursues his amazing experiences aboard the flying train; innocents are suspected and there is always something unfathomable that, preserved until the climax, reveals itself as something inhuman.

Essentially melodramatic, the story has been so modernized that romance has not been ignored. Nevertheless, the comedy aspect is the element justifying a brand of intriguing showmanship that convinces that this show is entirely brand new.

GRAND CANARY

Fox-Lasky

This dramatic romance builds to an entertainment quality that had its counterpart in "Arrowsmith." The book on which it is based, authored by A. J. Cronin, was a good seller. It stars the two leads of "Stand Up And Cheer," Warner Baxter and Madge Evans. Screen play is by Ernest Pascal. Irving Cummings, who directed Baxter in "In Old Arizona" and "The Cisco Kid" and recently did "The Mad Game" and "I Believed In You," is directing the Jesse Lasky production.

The supporting cast is wellknown because of appearances in recent pictures. The most important are Marjorie Rambeau, recently in "A Man's Castle," and "A Modern Hero;" Zita Johann, who first came into screen promise in "Tiger Shark," to be followed by "The Mummy" and "The Man Who Dared;" Roger Imhoff, currently in "David Harum," "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Handy Andy;" the veteran H. B. Warner, now in "Sorrel and Son;" Barry Norton and Juliette Compton.

Principal locale is the Canary Islands, the reason for the title and a fact that will necessitate detailed explanation lest the impression be created that the picture is a musical. It is an adventure in love and danger. Baxter, a discredited London physician, flees from the scene where his serums have innocently killed rather than cured. En route to nowhere, he meets Miss Evans and love. At the Canary Islands a fever is raging. Thoughtless and caring little for his own safety, he first saves Miss Evans and then, plunging into the jungle interior, stamps out the scourge to return to England a hero and wait for the woman he loves to free herself of the unhappy marital ties that will make her his.

As the story combines gripping drama and fine romance, it appears to have that appealing quality to enthuse adults and at the same time provide new showmanship angles.

BLIND DATE

Columbia

Modern poor boy, poor girl, rich boy romance, tinged with comedy domestic drama, is the entertainment essence of this story. The original yarn is by Vida Hurst, the screen play by Ethel Hill, who did "Ship of Wanted Men" and "Scarlet Brand." The director, William Neill, is previously credited with "Circus Queen Murder," "As the Devil Commands" and "Above the Clouds."

Ann Sothern, recently in "Melody In Spring" with Lannie Ross; Paul Kelly, who made his screen comeback in "Broadway Thru A Keyhole" and Neil Hamilton, currently in "Here Comes the Groom," have the principal roles. Suporting players include Jane Darwell, Spencer Charters, Joan Gale, Mickey Rooney, Genever Mitchell, Henry Kolker and Theodore Newton.

Colored by natural topical comedy, this modern story deals with two young folk. In love, but not able to marry because Kelly's wages as a garage mechanic are inadequate and because Miss Sothern is the only support of an irresponsible family, the stage is set for the entrance of the rich boy Hamilton and the inevitable conflict that causes all to become angry at one other and Kitty to be discharged from her model's job in Hamilton's father's store. To keep the family going, she enters an endurance dance contest, but has to quit. Kelly has found a job for her father and the two again hope for marriage, when Hamilton returns and Kelly, realizing that she loves his rival, graciously steps aside.

As there is definite name value to back up the familiar entertainment punch, showmanship that intrigues the interest of the entire family appears to be the cue.

THE DEFENSE RESTS

Columbia

Contrary to title tone, this is more of an inside story than a straightaway criminal court drama. The story and screen play are by Jo Swerling, who has similarly functioned on several Columbia features including "East of Fifth Avenue," "Man's Castle" and "Once to Every Woman." Direction is by Lambert Hillyer, recently credited with "Master of Men," "One Was Guilty," "Once to Every Woman," and "The Man Trailer."

Jack Holt, as a famous criminal attorney, has the leading role. Supporting him will be seen Jean Arthur, Nat Pendleton, Arthur Hohl, Raymond Walburn, Harold Huber, Sarah Padden, Shirley Grey, Donald Meek, Raymond Hatton, J. Carrol Naish and several other lesser lights.

The story is modern and because of current and familiar beliefs in political intrigue, favoritism, unscrupulous ethics and public disinterest suggests a brand of topical showmanship, which based upon peculiarly local incidents should be instrumental in creating unusual interest.

It's a yarn of a brilliant lawyer who, by his knowledge of scores of tricks and ability to play upon the emotions of juries, succeeds in turning courts of justice into courts of loophole law. Arrogant, proud, confident in his ability to handle any case, he is led almost to his downfall by his demure secretary, who, outsmarting him, forces him to go into court and withdraw as attorney for the defense of a guilty kidnapper. Romance and retribution comes simultaneously as the lawyer recognizes love and duty as an officer of the courts at the same time.

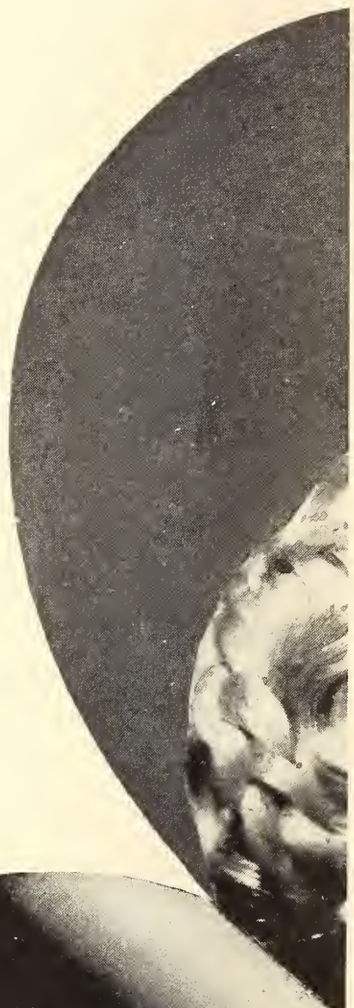
The topical atmosphere of the story, in which gangsterism and crime are merely symbols, suggests that natural line of showmanship to follow.

BORN TO BE KISSED

MGM

In title, story and potential entertainment punch, this is the kind of vehicle in which Jean Harlow should appear to best advantage. It promises all that is expected of that effervescent personality and in addition entails unlooked for angles that should be surprising. It's a vivid portrayal of a modern maiden, her life, loves and experiences. It's the story of a girl who wanted to be good, but whose almost impossible way of attaining that end convinces everyone else that she's a woman of bad morals.

The original story and screen play are by Anita Loos ("Gentlemen Prefer Blondes") and John Emerson, who collaborated on a previous Harlow picture, "Hold Your Man." The director is Jack Conway, maker of "Viva Villa," "Solitaire Man" and "The Nuisance." In the story, the color of which is reminiscent of "Red Dust," "Red Headed Woman" and "Hold Your Man," Miss Harlow is supported by an unusual name value cast. Franchot Tone, recently with Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee," is the leading man. Supporting this pair are Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Clara Blandick, Henry Kolker, Hale Hamilton and Noel Madison in the principal roles.



Marked by youthful zest, the story, aimed at modern persons who appreciate what modern life is like, is dramatic, romantic, comic, exciting, and though it entails a definite trend of sex, the script indicates that that quality should prove an asset. It deals with a young lady of the chorus who loved to love, but no matter what the inducement, limited her practical vocabulary to the word "No." Naturally, it's dramatic. At the same time, it bubbles over with modern romance; has more than its share of comedy and carries a moralistic lesson for this day and age. While concentrating on that quality, it also runs a course of human interest.

Audio Film for Ford Is Showing at World's Fair

Audio Productions, Inc., has produced a two-reel industrial subject, for the Ford Motor Company, which is being shown at the Ford exhibit in the Chicago World's Fair. Titled "Rhapsody in Steel," the film, employing to excellent advantage the most modern of camera technique, pictorially reviews the manufacture of the motor car from molten steel to the finished product leaving the assembly line.

F. Lyle Goldman was the director, Leo Lipp the photographer, and Edwin Ludig the composer of the musical score. Mr. Ludig spent several weeks in the Ford plant, later translating the sounds of the factory into terms of symphonic musical composition, used as the highly effective accompanying background score of the subject. MILLIKEN FORESEES TRADE DUTY LIFTED ON ALL TEACHING FILMS

MPPDA Secretary, Back from European Tour, Reports Rome ConferenceAgreementAllows Freedom for Education Films

The ultimate lifting of all trade barriers between countries as they affect educational or teaching motion pictures was forecast this week by Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., upon his return from a two and one-half months tour of the Continent and the United Kingdom.

As the result of the Rome Conference of the International Congress on the Instructional and Educational Usefulness of Motion Pictures, held April 19-25, 26 countries, including the United States, signed an agreement whereby such educational films will be permitted free circulation in those countries signing the pact.

42 Countries at Conference

The Conference, sponsored by the International Cinematographic Institute, Mr. Milliken said, was firm in its contention that motion pictures are not a commodity but vehicles of ideas and, therefore, should circulate freely between countries. Forty-two countries were represented at the conference, and the remainder of those not signing the pact are expected to do so in the near future.

"While the Institute's activities at present embrace only the socalled classroom picture, their thesis is obviously of interest to American producers of films of all types," Mr. Milliken said. "There were two main purposes of the conference, the chief one being the encouragement of free circulation of instructional films, and the second, the promotion of the use of pictures in schools and in other educative uses, such as adult education in night schools and the like."

The Congress was not called to impose any restrictive measures upon any country, the MPPDA executive said, but despite this there were many censorship proposals made.

American Films Most Popular

"I did not attend this conference as an official of the American motion picture industry," he said, "but as one of six representatives of the United States government, and, therefor, cannot report on this convention as an industry representative.

"From my own observations, however, almost everywhere I went in Europe, the chief thing which struck me was the fact that American films are more popular than ever and, furthermore, people want them in the original language."

Returning for a moment to the work of the congress, Mr. Milliken observed that its chief result was the opportunity for acquaintance among the various 600-odd representatives of countries.

"It gave educators a chance to see and understand the problems of educators in other lands," he said.

From Italy, Mr. Milliken went to Switzerland and France and then to England where he spent three weeks.

Most of his time in England, he said, was devoted to a study of the recently created British Film Institute, the outgrowth of a report published two years ago after a three-years study to consider the motion picture as it operates in various types of communities.

The Film Institute is comparable to the previewing organizations active throughout the United States, he explained, the chief difference being that it is fundamentally a government enterprise in that it is financed by the British government.

"The British Film Institute is proceeding along the same lines as are the previewing groups here," Mr. Milliken said. "They realize fully that censorship is not the answer to the many complex problems presented by the motion picture and the various committees are making a thorough study."

British Institute Powerful

Regarding government financing of the Institute, Mr. Milliken explained that one method was the tax on Sunday showings, which are allowed under local option. The Institute receives an appreciable portion of this tax, he said, and then declared that the board of the Institute is extremely powerful with some of the most important men and women in Britain's public and private life as members. The Duke of Sutherland, K.C.B., is chairman, and among the other notables on the board is John Buchan, Lord High Commissioner of Scotland.

"The Institute has a complete monopoly over the situation and no other groups will get very far if they try to organize," he said.

Asked whether or not the elimination of block booking in Great Britain had made any difference in the quality of motion pictures, Mr. Milliken said that, so far as he had been able to ascertain, it had not.

"After all," he declared, "there is not the same reason for block booking in England that there is here. Everything over there is near London, the center of things."

Diversified Types Satisfied

"As a private observer," Mr. Milliken concluded, "I should like to state that I was amazed from my observations all over those countries which I visited on my tour at the capacity of American producers to consistently make pictures which capture the interests of so many different types and mentalities all over the world. There can be little doubt that however strong official agitation against American films may be—and these usually are the direct result of governmental restrictions and general patriotism, in addition to certain elements of American pictures which may be objectionable—the man in the street prefers them infinitely to the product turned out by his domestic producers.

"Because there are still more American pictures shown everywhere in the world, what objectionable elements there may be receive more unfavorable attention."

Browne Elected IATSE Head; Code Is Approved

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada approved the code at the final session late last week of the 32nd biennial convention in Louisville, Ky.

Only four candidates for office in the organization had opposition. George E. Browne, Chicago, was elected president without opposition for the two-year term. Others elected without opponents were: first vice-president, John P. Nick, St. Louis; second vice-president, William P. Covert, Toronto, Canada; fifth vice-president, F. M. Billingsley, San Francisco; seventh vice-president, Roger M. Kennedy, Detroit. All but Mr. Kennedy were incumbents.

Fred J. Dempsey, New York, general secretary and treasurer, was re-elected over James Lemke, Troy, N. Y.; Richard Walsh was elected fourth vice-president; Harland Holmden, Cleveland, third vice-president, and James Brennan, New York, sixth vice-president.

The board of trustees was named without opposition, as were delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention and the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The board of trustees consists of George Brayfield, Detroit; R. E. Morris, Mobile, and William Scanlan, Lynn, Mass. Delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention are Thomas E. Maloy, Chicago, and Thomas V. Green, Newark, N. J. The delegate to the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress is Norman Code, Winnipeg, Canada.

Matthew Woll, third vice-president of the American Federation of Labor made a brief address in which he pleaded for harmony within the alliance. He also expressed himself in favor of unemployment insurance.

Louis Kraus, assistant president, credited the NRA with having accomplished tremendous good for members of the Alliance. More than 200 unions reported to the officials that the code had been definitely beneficial while 39 were noncommittal or of the opinion that it had failed to help.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

No. 43—FREE VAUDE SHOWS RUN BY MERCHANTS

QUESTION—The merchants are planning on free vaudeville shows in the open. We are the only theatre here. Can this be done under the code?—OHIO.

ANSWER—There is nothing in the motion picture code which would control free vaudeville shows staged outdoors. It is suggested that an inquiry be addressed to Sol A. Rosenblatt, NRA Division Administrator in charge of amusement codes to ascertain whether such free vaudeville shows in the outdoors would come under any outdoor amusement code.

No. 44—DISPUTE OVER CANCELLATION PRIVILEGES

QUESTION—A dispute has arisen with an exchange and ourselves. All other exchanges have agreed to a 10 per cent cancellation clause in the NRA code, and this exchange flatly refused us this consideration.

We have under contract with that exchange more than 10 pictures of a certain group which the exchange distributes. It is our understanding in the first place that the cancellation clause applies to all of that company's pictures as a whole, but even so would at least apply to the group of 10 pictures. What is the correct status of this situation?—MINNESOTA.

ANSWER—The clause of the motion picture code which provides for cancellation privileges (Part 6, Article V-F) specifically says that if in any contractual agreement the exhibitor has contracted to exhibit all of the motion pictures offered at one time by the distributor to that exhibitor, and the rentals of all such pictures offered average not more than $250 per picture, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from such group not more than 10 per cent of the total; provided, however, the exhibitor is not in default under that contract.

This clause means, then, that if the distributor offered to the exhibitor at the one time only the 10 features of that certain group and the exhibitor purchased this group, then he is entitled to cancel 10 per cent of those of the group that are played after December 7, provided the contract is in good standing.

But, if the distributor offered to the exhibitor at the same time all of that distributor's product, or more than the group of 10 actually purchased, and the exhibitor refused to take the other pictures, then he is not entitled to any cancellation privileges under the code on the 10 purchased—because, in order to get this cancellation privilege the exhibitor must purchase all of the pictures offered to him by the distributor at the one time.

However, if the exhibitor purchased the group of 10 when the distributor did not offer him any others at the time of purchase, and the distributor returned at a later date and attempted to sell the exhibitor additional features, then the cancellation privilege on the original 10 purchased could not be interfered with if the exhibitor refused to play the additional pictures offered at the later date.

No. 45—BOARD'S JURISDICTION ON OLD CONTRACTS

QUESTION—Is it within the jurisdiction of the Local Grievance Board to entertain a complaint filed by an exhibitor against an exchange, or vice versa, when a contract was signed prior to acceptance of the code?

For example: A contract which was signed during March, 1933, and not lived up to by the exhibitor or by the exchange in my opinion is not eligible to be filed before the Local Grievance Board.

Also, can the Local Clearance and Zoning Board modify protection granted first runs under the same contracts, namely, contracts signed before code acceptance?—LOUISIANA.

ANSWER—A complaint filed by an exhibitor against an exchange, or by an exchange against an exhibitor for failure to abide by the terms of a motion picture contract which had been signed during March, 1933, is not—with but two exceptions—a matter for settlement by the Local Grievance Board. It is a matter either for court settlement or for settlement by arbitration, if the exhibitor and exchange signed an arbitration clause in the contract.

The two exceptions referred to above, when the Local Grievance Board may entertain a complaint under a March, 1933, contract, have to do with minimum admissions and cancellation privileges.

The motion picture code says that an exhibitor must at all times maintain the minimum price of admission specified in ALL contracts—regardless of when they were executed—and if an exhibitor fails to maintain such minimum admission price then the exchange, or another exhibitor, has the right to file a complaint against the offending exhibitor with the Local Grievance Board, even though the contract was signed before the code became effective on December 7, 1933.

The second point involving such contracts is the clause in the code which permits an exhibitor to cancel 10 per cent of all pictures released after December 7, even though such pictures were contracted for prior to that date; provided, however, that the exhibitor's contract under which he seeks the cancellations is in good standing, and provided further that the average rental for each picture of the block is not more than $250, and, furthermore, that the exhibitor purchased at the one time all of the pictures offered to him by the distributor.

The Local Clearance and Zoning Boards in the field are now drafting new schedules to take effect at the beginning of the approaching new season of 1934-35. Existing protection under contracts signed in March, 1933, is not to be changed.

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

This service is available to everyone. Send questions to the Code Editor, Motion Picture Herald, 1790 Broadway, New York City.

Lardner, Veteran Of Theatre, Dies

Foster Lardner, veteran showman, with 24 years as manager of Providence, R. I., theatres behind him, an actor, a sleight-of-hand expert and proudly but incidentally a registered pharmacist, died on the stage of the Elks Auditorium in Providence recently, stricken by a heart attack. He was 60 years old.

Supplying entertainment, as was his life long habit, Mr. Lardner was tickling the fancy of 400 members of the Providence Engineering Society at a smoker, when he fell to the floor, dying before a doctor could reach his side.

He retired from active show business four years ago, when RKO replaced him as manager of the Albee, then taken over as part of the circuit. That resignation terminated 24 years of theatre management. Prior to that he had enjoyed many successful years as an actor, the last 10 of them as leader of the E. F. Albee stock company. Through the Lardner company, under the tutelage of the actor who had played with such as Ada Rehan and John Drew, and on to higher planes passed among others, Burton Churchill, Spencer Tracy, Lynne Overman, Wilfred Lytell and many another.

Years of barnstorming followed graduation from the University of Wisconsin. He arrived in Providence in 1900, at one time later acting as general manager of all Keith-Albee enterprises in Rhode Island. He was a cousin of the late Ring Lardner, famous humorist. His wife and a daughter survive.

Coast Theatre Veteran Dead

Ben Mars Giroux, 71, veteran theatre man, died at Oakland, Calif., last week of pneumonia. In recent years he managed theatres in San Francisco and Marysville and was shortly to take charge of a large house in Oakland. He began his theatrical career in Chicago, and for 10 years was traveling manager with Oliver Morosco's "The Bird of Paradise."

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 228.—(A) Just what is a "candle meter"? (B) Quote the law relating to light intensity at different distances from an open light source and explain its operation. (C) Upon what is the law based? (D) How can we easily prove the law?

Answer to Question No. 222

Bluebook School Question No. 222 was: (A) Is a projection lens of larger diameter than is necessary to admit the entire light beam, advantageous or otherwise? (B) In what very simple, practicable manner may the projectionist test his projection lens for flatness of field? (C) In what way may projection lenses be tested for barrel distortion?

While some men gave different and more or less practicable methods for testing flatness of field, none gave the best one. I would have been surprised if they had, although the thing is so amazingly simple and rather obvious that, like myself, you will all feel, I think, like kicking yourselves, for not having thought of it immediately. Leaving Section B out of it, the following answered correctly:

C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; D. Danielson; T. Van Vaulkenburg; R. J. Arntson; R. DeTotto; D. Ferguson; A. F. Sprafke; L. Cimikoski; L. J. O'Melia; G. Thompson; W. Broadbent; G. Lathrope and N. L. Tomlinson; D. L. Sinklow; H. Edwards; Nic Granby; L. F. Evans; B. R. Walker; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; M. and J. Devoy; F. Simms and O. L. Daris; T. H. Morton, L. Klar and F. H. Klar; L. R. Doty; R. and K. Wells; M. L. Spooner; D. Breaston and D. Habor; O. Allbright; D. D. Davis, T. T. Golley and L. Thomas; B. H. Thaler and S. Spanner; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; U. L. Danielson; T. Malleby; H. Brown, P. L. Wilkins and B. R. D. Skinner; J. J. Richmond; B. H. Sanders, J. Gensen, D. L. Lode and K. Y. Spencer; J. Urts and D. Howard; K. L. Knight and L. Henderson; A. Richardson and L. N. Haynes; M. U. Sampson; L. N. and C. B. Traxler; G. Johnson and L. R. Spooner; R. Prane and B. R. Mills; D. H. and L. B. Palmer; S. T. and M. Gibson; G. N. Davis and G. Garrison; D. T. Arlen and M. Spencer; L. C. Northup; D. C. Lode and J. Jensen; G. Harrison and F. Harlor; M. R. Jones; P. and L. Felt; B. L. Donald and F. Y. Gradley; D. U. Granger; J. Lansing and R. D. Oberleigh; L. H. Daniels and B. T. Canter; L. M. Richards; G. Haught and J. Turner; F. Ferguson and D. Lally; L. B. Bryant and D. L. Monehan; R. Geddings and L. Grant; K. L. Less; H. and L. R. Clark; J. Brody, M. L. Merola, T. Ray, J. W. Holmes and B. F. Norton; M. Lerr; C. A. Benjamin and L. R. Durant.

We will hear from G. E. Doe on Section A. He says, "I would regard a projection lens having greater diameter than necessary to pass the entire beam, as having certain disadvantages, to wit: first, it would be unnecessarily costly; second, it would tend to decrease depth of focus, which would be especially objectionable where the projection angle is heavy; third, a lens having unnecessarily large diameter would tend to pass rays of light reflected from aperture edges and possibly elsewhere, sending them forward very possibly to points outside the screen image."

(B) To test for flatness of field, first get as sharp a focus as possible in the screen center, then having fixed a sheet of white cardboard on a suitable handle, hold it at the edge of the screen and have some one move it slowly forward, observing whether or not such movement increases sharpness of focus. If it does, then move it forward until everything is perfectly sharp, whereupon you will know not only that the lens does not give a flat field, but also exactly how much it is lacking in that respect.

Several suggested using the S.M.P.E. test reel for making the test, which is quite correct, but has the drawback that relatively few projectionists have access to the reels, whereas the test suggested is one any man can make without any accessories, except those already at hand.

(C) Rau and Evans say, "Barrel distortion may be tested for by scratching perfectly straight lines on a flat piece of mica, checkerboard fashion. Insert the mica at the film plane and project it. Stretch a cord along the lines. If the cord coincides with the line images, all is well—there is no barrel distortion."

Progressive Californians

From J. Gordon Paulsen, projectionist of Ventura, Cal., comes an excellent answer to a Bluebook School question, very neatly prepared by the way, and the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: Although for several years I have been an ardent scholar of your famous handbook, I have at the present time just subscribed to and received my first copy of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. With these credentials I apply for enrollment in your Bluebook School.

"Although not a veteran projectionist, having only been in the profession six years, I have at least the egotism to class myself as a progressive one. Unfortunately there are no union contacts in Ventura county, but we boys (nine of us in the county) meet once a month to discuss new equipment, etc. In this way we keep fairly well informed as to all latest developments.

"Perhaps a word about the theatre here would not be amiss as an introduction. It is of Spanish design seating 1,250. The projection equipment consists of Western Electric wide range, employing 41, 42 and 43 type amplification, two high frequency units, four 555 units and three dynamics for low-frequency response; Super-Simplex mechanisms, and Ashcraft C-70 Hi-Lo lamps.

Projection distance is 101 feet, and projection angle 3 degrees. There are two high-intensity Hall & Connelly spots, and a Chicago Cinema Equipment Company effect projector. All stage lights may be controlled from booth (including stage pockets, which are very handy for use with floods). Grand curtain and braille are motor-driven and booth controlled. Incidental equipment includes W. E. non-sync equipment and p.a. system. Although the house is five years old, the owner is one of the unusual type, shall I say, that believes in modernizing every year. My job isn't work, it is a pleasure.

"I trust you will allow me to continue to participate in your 'school,' and that my answers will show enough mental agility to be worthy of your consideration. One of these fine days I hope to have some snapshots of the projection room, which I shall take the liberty of sending you. Onward to better projection and projectionists."

As to the "school," friend Paulsen, you are welcome.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

Neligh, Nebraska

DEAR HERALD:

Maybe we're dumb. Maybe we don't know anything. In fact, we will admit it and that will save any argument on your part. Maybe it's the fault of the producer, the director, the star, the climate or the "Sunkissed Oranges" but what we can't understand is why it is necessary to the enjoyment of a picture to have an orchestra pounding out discordant sounds while the picture is being unfolded. Will somebody please inform us so we can get a good night's rest.

We recently saw a picture of some jungle scenes in which the director was trying to make the audience think that they were right out in the wilds watching the animals fight, and he had an orchestra playing jazz to mingle with the growls of the lions and tigers. To us it seemed like feeding a man raw onions while he was eating huckleberry pie. There is about as much sense to it as there would be for a man who was creeping up on a flock of wild geese to have a brass band following along at his heels playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever." Someone made the remark once that "the public lives and learns," but we have heard of some people who only live. Whoever heard of an orchestra playing out in the jungles? Then we saw another picture wherein there was a court scene and the prosecuting attorney was making a plea for conviction of the defendant while an orchestra was playing "Soapsuds Over the Fence" so loud that it drowned out the plea of the attorney.

Single Track Minds

The average American has what might be called a single track mind. That is, he can't grasp two subjects thoroughly at the same time although there are those who can play five or six games of chess blindfolded at the same time, while some will sit on the top of a pole for days at a time and others join the marathon dance, but they are so largely in the minority that pictures should not be made entirely for their benefit.

There are times when it is necessary to have music. You couldn't very well dance without music and your dinner would taste better while the band was playing. There are times and again there are other times, and sometimes a jazz orchestra adds a little to the bray of a jackass, but not much, and seldom to the enjoyment of a picture.

We are glad to note, however, that there are a lot of directors who don't have to depend upon an orchestra to help them put entertainment into a picture, and that's one of the hopes for this industry. We don't mean that music is not necessary to the enjoyment of some pictures, for it is, but it doesn't follow that ALL pictures need music to make them enjoyable. Putting music in some pictures is like putting castor oil in your soda. All right, don't try to prove that we are crazy, we'll admit it.

Benfield Knows a Good Thing

We have just received a letter from B. J. Benfield of the Strand theatre at Morris, Minnesota, and he sends us a renewal of his subscription to the HERALD, which proves that he knows a good thing when he sees it.

Bonnie Benfield, as he is familiarly known throughout the northwest, tells us that golf and fishing is fine up there and suggests that we come up. Bonnie wants to get a whack at us on the golf course; we know that, but we'll fool him. We are not going to play one of the champions of the state. Bonnie has a ravenous appetite for dried apples, and when he gets full of those he is like Andy Anderson at Detroit Lakes when he fills us on his favorite dish of pickled pigs' feet, and when they are in that condition Herb Anderson, who helps Andy run the theatre at Detroit Lakes, says he can whale the tar out of both of us. When Bonnie and Andy get tangled up in a foursome on the golf links they make the other two look like rank amateurs. Thanks, Bonnie, for your renewal.

Then again comes a stemwinder from A. E. Hancock of Columbia City, Indiana, in which he jumps all over us for having said in a recent colyum that the Ohio and Indiana line ran through the town. He states as a geographical fact that Columbia City is 60 miles in Indiana from the Ohio line. A. E. being part Hoosier and part something else, we will have to give him credit for knowing what he is talking about, especially since he operates the popular playhouse of the town, but if Columbia City isn't located about 10 miles east of Winchester, Indiana, where Bill Brenner lives, and on the Ohio line, then we are a goat and don't have much sense anyhow.

A. E. intimates that we must have been filled up with hooch when we wrote as we did, but if he moved the town over in Indiana 60 miles from the Ohio line since we were there it isn't out fault, for that is where she was, and we surmise that Indiana's prize bootlegger is finding business good in and around Columbia City. A. E. refers to our limousine, April Shower, as "that puddle-jumper." We are going to overlook his caustic insinuation, because we are part Hoosier ourself (and the other part airedale) and we know how hard it is for a Hoosier to tell the truth (when he is offered pay not to), so we are going to leave him and Bill Brenner to settle it.

A Pair of Good Showmen

Ralph Dalton of the Osmond theatre at Osmond, Nebraska, must be made of boiler iron to operate a theatre in as small a town as Osmond and in the dried-up district, for things look mighty tough around Osmond, as they do around Randolph, where A. A. Uhlm is making a success of the Orpheum theatre. Both of these boys have the stuff in 'em or they would have thrown up the sponge long ago.

C. J. Kremer of the Rialto at Stanton is in doubt as to the beneficial results of the code. He asked us what we thought about it and we told him we were not operating a theatre and therefore we were looking on from the outside of the fence. He is only about 12 miles from Norfolk, a town of about 10,000, and that makes it pretty tough, and if he doesn't win out then fine theatres are not the answer, for he has as fine a theatre as there is in a town of that size this side of Hoboken.

Doesn't it beat all what little regard some people have for the truth? Especially is this true of a Nebraskan. We went down to the Majestic at Oakland the other night to call on Mickey Larsen. Mickey came out and sat in April Shower with us and we had quite a visit. Mickey said he didn't want to be around the theatre when the multitude came out, because all three of 'em would want to know when he was going to have a picture. He told us that the carp were eating up his garden and wanted us to come up the next morning and help him and Nels Benson move the garden up on higher ground. We asked him how the carp could get into his garden and he said they came in in the overflow from the Missouri River, and we said, "Why, the Missouri River is 30 miles miles from here; how could it overflow this far?" And he said, "Say, does the HERALD pay you to go around the country and ask honest people fool questions?" Oakland is located at the edge of the Logan valley and close to the Logan creek and Mickey says that the water in the Logan is so dry you could scratch a match on it.

The Logan valley is probably the finest farming country in the United States but right now it looks pretty tough. The small grain is practically all gone, as are the pastures, and farmers are pasturing their cows along the highways wherever they can find a little grass. The future doesn't look any too rosy for this part of Nebraska, which is about identical with the balance of the state except in the extreme western part, where we understand they have had considerable rain.

105 in the Shade!

Tuesday it was 105 in the shade in Lincoln and 103 in Omaha. We don't know how hot it was in Oakland, so we headed for Omaha to cool off. We stayed over in Omaha a day and then headed for home in the belief that a man who had good sense wouldn't be driving in such hot weather unless he was trying to get away from the sheriff. That heat just about got our hide, but here we are, and here we are going to stay until this heat spell (the most severe ever known) is broken and we get rain, and if we don't get rain pretty soon we will all have to go back to our wife's folks.

Our local butcher told us yesterday that he bought four hogs from a farmer and he deducted $20 from the price of the hogs and had to send that amount to the government as a processing tax. It is none of our business, since we didn't own the hogs, but the farmer wants to know who got the $20. We are a little curious about it ourself. The theory that you can help the farmer by taking all he's got won't wash out.

Freuler Gets Right to Title

Freuler Film Associates was sustained by the supreme court, New York, last week, in its right to the use of the title, "Marriage on Approval," for a motion picture. Plaintiff in the action was Michael Kallesser, author of a play similarly titled, in 1928. The film title was taken from a serial by Priscilla Wayne, published in various newspapers from October 31, 1927.

COWBOY COUNSELLOR, THE: Hoot Gibson, Sheila Manners—Too slow and not enough action to satisfy the western fans. Played Saturday.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

PICTURE BRIDES: Dorothy Mackaill, Regis Toomey—Fair play of the diamond mines in the jungles of Brazil. Good acting and a good story. For some reason or other the people don't come out for the plays that are not advertised by the companies. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 22-23.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

Columbia

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Entertainment value from start to finish. Not a dull moment. A few more like this and we might keep up with the music tax, code assessment and a few other such expenses. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 7-8-9-10.—Mrs. N. Montc Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert—Pleased 100 per cent and best weekend business for several months. Should be a money maker anywhere. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 19.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: Warren William, May Robson—A marvelous, fine picture that anyone would he proud to show. Guy Kibee and Ned Sparks are unforgettable comedians. May Robson drew tears, and then the thing ended up so delightfully that you had to laugh through your tears. They loved this picture out here. This is another picture that, like "Little Women," makes you feel like going out and doing something really helpful for your neighbor.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

LADY FOR A DAY: Warren William, May Robson—Here is one swell picture, not so much for any one thing as much as the way that it is put together. Keeps moving all the time to a good ending and has everything. Although I played it old it did not hurt the picture and many said it was the hest that they had seen in a year. Good Sunday show. Played May 13.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

MAN'S CASTLE, A: Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy—A very good production but a little heavy. Fifty per cent raved ahout it and the other 50 per cent panned it, although I could not see why. Seems to appeal more to the men than the women but well worth playing. Played May 20.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

NINTH GUEST, THE: Donald Cook—Very good mystery picture. The ladies did not care for it but it went over good with the men. Used it on our Bargain Days to fair business. Running time, seven reels.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

NO GREATER GLORY: George Breakston—Not the type liked by our patronage. Women came out, eyes reddened by weeping. Men walked out calling it a kid picture. The acting is excellent and it is a good picture for those who care for that type. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

PARTY'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Ann Sothern—A good program picture with a lot of laughs. The story of a sap who supports all his relatives and finally gets tired of it and kicks 'em all out. Little too much repetition but still a good Saturday picture in any small town. Played May 24.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN: Elissa Landi, Joseph Schildkraut—A good program picture that pleased fairly well. The eternal triangle with a little different quirk than in most stories of this type. Pleased as well as any society picture will in a small town. Played May 27.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHTAWAY: Tim McCoy, Sue Carol—Thrilling action of the automobile race tracks. Held the interest of the audience throughout. Business way off, in fact, the worst Saturday in three months. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 26.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

WHIRPOOL: Jack Holt—Good Jack Holt picture that did not click very strong at the hox-office. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WHITE EAGLE: Buck Jones—Good western drama. A story of the Pony Express days with the usual amount of Indian war-whoop and scalping. Did good business here and they all came out with that satisfied look. Running time, 64 minutes. Played May 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WHITE EAGLE: Buck Jones, Barbara Weeks—This western pleased them all. Our Saturday night crowd likes action and they got it here.—Erma L. Racburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

First Division

FORGOTTEN MEN: War Film—There is little shown in this picture that has not already at some time or other been flashes of in other pictures. However, in this you just get gobs and gobs of war activities of all the nations in the World War and my notion is that every citizen of this old United States should see this and the seeing will make him have more and more respect for the soldiers that participated in the war. It will do more than average business in any house and properly handled will bring home the bacon.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

First National

DARK HAZARD: Edward G. Robinson—A very good picture hut not the hest this star has made. Gave good satisfaction but did not draw like the other Robinson pictures have.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

ELMER THE GREAT: Joe E. Brown—Joe E. Brown hrings them in. This picture shows expert direction. Everyone enjoyed it, baseball fan or otherwise, and there were plenty of thrills packed in. —Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell—This is better than the usual picture of its kind, but not as good as "Gold Diggers of 1933" or any of the big ones Warner Brothers produced. Running time, 75 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

JOURNAL OF A CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—Pleased about 75 per cent of my patrons. Adolphe Menjou looks so old in this picture that it seems ridiculous that even one woman would he crazy ahout him much less two. My folks don't care for pictures that depict too much tragedy. Played Sunday and Monday.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE GIANT, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A fine outstanding picture. It started slow but ended with a bang while the gangster brought some needed punishment to the would-be swindlers. This delighted our audience.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess—A very satisfactory picture for small towns for Friday and Saturday. A picture of action and western nature hut way above the average in quality of the ordinary run of western and action pictures. One or two shots in the picture are not so good for kids but you cannot cut them out for they are the theme of the story. We had good crowds and everyone was well pleased. The title drew. Barthelmess did not. Played June 1-2.—Bob Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak—One of the best action pictures of the year. It starts off weak hut picks up in the third reel. Played on our Bargain Nights to capacity crowds. Running time, eight reels. Played May 30-31.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—A darn fine show, although it is light and foolish; it will make anyone laugh and after all that is what it was made for. A good show for Saturday in any town. Played May 10.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Pat O'Brien, Mills Brothers, Radio Rogues—Here is another great picture from the Warner-First National studios that is sure to please all kinds of patrons and do a hig husiness. It is a musical comedy drama that is fast moving, clean and full of entertainment. It is a story of the inside workings of radio studios and presents such radio favorites as the Mills Brothers, the Radio Rogues and Ted Fio Rito and his band. The new love team composed of Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers is great and will long be remembered. Powell in a role that fits him great and with gorgeous Ginger Rogers as his sweetheart. They both sing and do some wonderful acting, but Pat O'Brien practically steals the show. The trailer will sell the show for you. Get out and boost this one. Played two days to very good business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 4-5.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

Fox

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore—An excellent picture for Decoration Day or any day. Janet Gaynor is always good, while Lionel Barrymore as the old Confederate hero is unusually good. One of the high lights in this picture is the singing by the negroes. Should please any audience. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 30-31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lehanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE: Warner Oland, Heather Angel—Just a fair detective story. Sound not as good as it could he and drawing power was not so good.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond—Just wasting your time and hurting any future animal picture hy playing this studio produced socalled animal thriller. Even the children detected this put-together thriller. Shame on you, Mr. Sidney Kent, for releasing such a joke. You are a bigger man than that. Give us the real McCoy. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 25-26.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

DOCTOR BULL: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser—A nice little picture. Will Rogers always draws a fine response from our people.—Erma L. Raehurn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: George O'Brien—Fair western. Did not draw for us according to other westerns, which seem to be our hest het on Friday and Saturday nights. We have placed hig pictures on these nights but our receipts never equal those from a good western. Played May 4-5.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Oregon. Small town patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, George White, Alice Faye—Excellent entertainment. Nothing particularly objectionahle. Has a little of everything. Cliff Edwards stole the show. He's a knockout. Believe the title kept some away. However, was disappointed in our crowd. One of the best musicals I have seen this year and no backstage stuff, which is always uninteresting. Played May 27-28.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

HOOPLA: Clara Bow, Preston Foster—Had been told this one was as hot as a firecracker, lit on both ends. But my patronage did not think so. Advertised it, "not suitable for children" and it drew good for one night. Don't know what it would have done on the second night. Played May 25.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey—We played this picture a little late because we were afraid to use it and had been holding it back, but boy, we sure were surprised, for it is really very good entertainment, something different. I think there was too much footage given to puppets and my cash customers can't see Lilian Harvey at all, but it drew to an average business and I am satisfied. Played May 30-31.—Bob Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey. Gene Raymond —Had a number of walkouts on this one. Too much puppets. Too long. Had trouble keeping the volume right. Hard to understand at times. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 1-2.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

I AM SUZANNE!: Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond —Good musical but about six reels too long. Too much puppet show and not enough action. It pleased the ones that saw it. Running time, 14 reels.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

I BELIEVED IN YOU: John Boles, Victor Jory—A very poor picture, absolutely no story. Played to the poorest Friday's business in months. Running time, 64 minutes. Played May 25.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

I BELIEVED IN YOU: Victor Jory, John Boles, Rosemary Ames—Did not please in my town and I have very serious doubts that it would please in anybody's town. Played Bargain Days.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. SKITCH: Will Rogers, Zasu Pitts—Drew extra business. All Rogers' draw extra for me. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 18-19.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

MURDER IN TRINIDAD: Heather Angel, Victor Jory—Used on midnight show. Went over okay. Nothing particularly outstanding. Played May 26.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

MY LIPS BETRAY: Lilian Harvey, John Boles—A very good picture which seemed to please 90 per cent. Played May 29-30.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

ORIENT EXPRESS: Norman Foster—One of the worst yet. People as a rule dislike the setting of any picture in a foreign country. There must be a good story to make them satisfied. This is slow and uninteresting. We didn't make enough on this for film rental. Played May 11-12.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

ROBBERS' ROOST: George O'Brien, Maureen O'Sullivan—Unusually good western.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

SUCH WOMEN ARE DANGEROUS: Warner Baxter, Rochelle Hudson, Mona Barrie, Henriette Crosman—When and if Fox will bring back Warner Baxter into a he man role he will get a lot further than this type. A temperamental writer of lurid fiction with the accompanying pursual by three different types of women. Just another picture that went by in the run of the mill stuff of these problem pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Majestic

WHAT PRICE DECENCY?: Dorothy Burgess, Alan Hale—A poor story but will do for fill-in on program. Running time, 65 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

MGM

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Alice Brady, Frank Morgan, Madge Evans—This is only a fair picture of the comedy drama type. It is a simple story of backstage life with a few musical numbers here and there. It is entirely too tragic to be a musical and I personally think it would have been much better if the tragedy had been omitted. It has an excellent cast and one scene in beautiful color. Played one day to poor business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 31.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Alice Brady, Frank Morgan—Let this one get a little old, but it drew good and pleased 95 per cent. Played May 15-16.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Ramon Novarro—Just another musical that some fell for and some didn't. Ramon Novarro sure isn't up to par. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 13-14.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

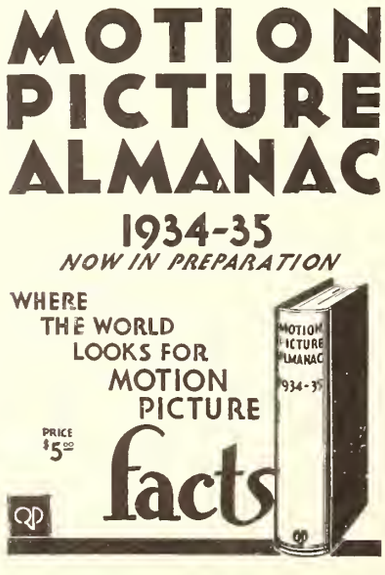
CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Ramon Novarro, Jeanette MacDonald—A very good musical that was not good at the box-office. Pictures with a foreign locale do not go over here. Music is good and the last reel in color is beautiful. Not a small town picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 26-27. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DINNER AT EIGHT: All Star Cast—This picture is hard to write about. Any exhibitor would think that he had a natural in this picture by casting his eyes over the list of box-office stars and the cast. Boy, what a fine selection of talent and in the picture, what did they do? Nothing, absolutely nothing. A wonderful cast wasted on a plot and story that did not mean a thing to my patrons and they did not fail to tell me so when they came out. I didn't know whether to hide behind the door or face them with a smile. This should do good in the big cities where they may have a large volume of sophisticated people to draw from, but for the small town like mine it is just poison. This picture did my second lowest gross in eight months and I paid too much for it, so I am sunk all the way around. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 3-4-5.—Bob Ouellette, Dixie Theatre, Brooksville, Fla. Small town patronage.

GABRIEL OVER THE WHITE HOUSE: Walter Huston—A fine picture that pleased nearly everyone. We ran this old so didn't do as well as we expected. But patrons were satisfied and it is always a pleasure to run first class entertainment and feel that you can face your patrons with a smile after the show is over. A show of this kind will renew your confidence in the industry and in yourself for having had the judgment to play it. Played May 13-14.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

HER SWEETHEART (CHRISTOPHER BEAN): Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore—Pleased very well, but not the picture "Tugboat Annie" was. Played May 22-23.—H. B. Wood, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

MEET THE BARON: Jack Pearl—We were surprised in this show as we had to read some pretty poor reports on it. We dreaded for the play date to come. It is silly, of course, but our audience got a lot of laughs out of it and we believe Jack Pearl is lots easier understood in this picture than he is over the radio. We believe the average audience will enjoy it. Just fair drawing power. Played May 20-21.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.



MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—A good picture which had a lot of favorable word of mouth advertising and together with the popularity of Clark Gable brought a large attendance. Anyway, it was a large crowd for this place. Played June 2. —B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery—Picture failed to draw average Saturday business. Why don't Metro give this popular Montgomery a story suitable to his talents? This industry has made too many murder and crook stories. Why waste a fellow who has a chance if handled properly in stories like this? Give him light comedy, Metro, and plenty of it. Played June 1-2.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery—Entertaining mystery picture which gave general satisfaction. Business good and, glory be, they toned down the English accent for once. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery—Just another program picture. Failed to do our average Thursday business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 24.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY, THE: Max Baer, Primo Carnera, Myrna Loy—Had more favorable comments on this than anything I have run in the past six months. Played May 29-30.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert —This picture surprised us. The first night had one of the worst storms of the year and did a fair business. Rain on the second night and played to a full house. It seemed the people wanted to see who Garbo really is. The strange part is they all liked it. Running time, 11 reels. Played May 28-29.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert —Would like to give the remarks of my patrons but space does not permit. A few more like this one will put the padlock on the door. Good acting but it was produced three hundred years too late to interest small town patrons. Pleased about five per cent but the rest "tank they go home." Just a long line of walkouts. If I never see Greta Garbo again it will be too soon. Running time, 103 minutes. Played May 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert —The ads said, the one and only Garbo. Well, that's something to be thankful for. I am glad that there are no more like her. The picture had some beautiful scenes and was well directed, but my patrons do not like old costume pictures or Garbo, so the result was two days of rotten business. Why don't the producers wake up and give us good American stories with American actors? Running time, 103 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

REUNION IN VIENNA: John Barrymore—All right if they like Barrymore, but personally I don't like it. It's all right though as long as the customer is pleased. Running time, 85 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery, Herbert Marshall—A great picture. Big story and fine acting. But after the first show we did no business to speak of. That tells how the people in this town liked the picture. I say this type of picture is too good for towns less than twenty thousand. Over their heads, but I called it great myself. Played May 27-28.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery— Here is a grand picture from Metro. It is a dramatic romance of the high society type and will not appeal to all classes. Miss Shearer is welcomed back to the screen in this splendid performance and turns in some wonderful acting. The beautiful gowns and the gorgeous settings all help make this excellent entertainment for adults. Played two days to only fair business due to bad weather. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 28-29.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHOW-OFF, THE: Spencer Tracy, Madge Evans —Just fair as a picture. We did average business on this and the customers seemed to be satisfied. Played May 30.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SONS OF THE DESERT: Laurel and Hardy—The funniest picture this pair have made to date. Went over big with the patrons. Better than average business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 11-12.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE: Alice Brady, Lionel Barrymore—A very sophisticated and ultra modern society comedy that tends to bore the average low-brow working class patron. Were it not for the splendid acting of Alice Brady, who steals the picture, and Lionel Barrymore, it would not go over at all unless in a highbrow district. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 16-17.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

STAGE MOTHER: Alice Brady—Fair entertainment. We hardly know what to think of Alice Brady. We are getting tired of her nervous chatter. Many of our patrons don't like her. Did not draw here. Played May 8-9-10.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

STRANGER'S RETURN, THE: Lionel Barrymore —This picture had an appeal in it for all our people. The young people thought Miriam Hopkins arrestingly lovely. The old folks were delighted with Lionel's portrayal of the crotchety old farmer, positively lovable underneath the gruff words and manners. There was a good sprinkling of humor and the farm scenes were pleasing and the story held interest. Played May 27.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE: Marie Dressler—A wonderful production but we did not do so well. It had been so widely exploited in the towns near us last fall that when we showed it for two days we got only those who had no cars and consequently hadn't already seen it.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery—A wonderfully produced picture that failed at the box-office in spite of a tremendous campaign to put it over. Played June 3-4.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

Monogram

BEGGARS IN ERMINE: Lionel Atwill—A very good picture. Atwill hard to understand at times. Played Bargain Days.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

BROKEN DREAMS: Randolph Scott, Martha Sleeper—Here is a dandy little program picture that will please. An interesting human story told in an interesting way. This girl, Martha Sleeper, we thought exceptionally good. Played midweek.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

HE COULDN'T TAKE IT: Ray Walker, Virginia Cherrill—A dandy little program picture that pleased a good crowd. Played Bargain Days.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MANHATTAN LOVE SONG: Dixie Lee, Robert Armstrong—Here is a very good little picture of the comedy-drama type. Nothing big about it, but a swell program picture that will please. There are three romantic love stories combined in this and all in a different twist. Dixie Lee turns in a great performance and adds much to the entertainment of the show. Played one day to good business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 30.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RETURN OF CASEY JONES: Charles Starrett, Ruth Hall—Ran this on double bill program as a filler. That is just what it is. It is too old, the theme is old, and the action reminds one of the old silent picture days. The kids liked it, though they are not so critical. Makes a good matinee for children. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 11-12.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDERS OF DESTINY: John Wayne—An average western that will please the John Wayne fans. Played Saturday.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

SAGEBRUSH TRAIL: John Wayne—A good action picture, the kind the Saturday nighters eat up and like it.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Paramount

COLLEGE HUMOR: Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie—This picture had quite an appeal to the young folks of the town. A little music that pleased and was quite a travesty on college life.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March, Evelyn Venable—This picture with the title that it carries will perhaps be a problem in the small towns to put over, but this you can say, that there is nothing gruesome in it, but the finest acting that is possible on the part of March and Venable. It is intensely interesting. Death comes back to earth for three short days and assumes mortal flesh. This is one picture that I would stress that they see it from the start. Also I made a note for them to watch March's eyes closely as he appears, too, when Prince Sirki, cast back to the spirit world. I had seen the picture before I decided to run it. Artistry of the finest is his and Venable's work in this picture. A little spooky but not too much to develop the story. Direction of the finest. As you will admit that one slight slip would have spoiled the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT: Dorothy Wilson, Douglass Montgomery—This picture lacks star names to put out in front. They are asking you to feature the name of Douglass Montgomery. This boy is okay in the bits that he plays but his identity is lost in the shuffle and you are left without any worthwhile names to get this across, consquently poor box-office. Only fair entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM: Marguerite Churchill, Charles Ruggles, Charles Farrell—I find this as good as an average picture. Interesting to most customers. Opened on Sunday to average business and less than average last three days of a four day run.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE: W. C. Fields, Stuart Irwin, Peggy Hopkins Joyce—This did not begin to equal "Big Broadcast." I think Bing was missed and the few suggestive lines were not so well received.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

ISLAND OF LOST SOULS: Charles Laughton, Richard Arlen—Not as horrible as I feared it would be. A few complained of nightmares afterwards. Attendance a little above average.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

LONE COWBOY: Jackie Cooper—Played this on a double feature Friday and Saturday and it really drew 'em in. Jackie Cooper was swell. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 19.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—This is a fair program picture that is full of action, comedy and dramatic romance. It is of the rough and tumble type and would make an excellent Saturday show. It is different from the usual run of features and should please all of your fans who like McLaglen. We played this on a midnight show and to a very good business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SHE MADE HER BED: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen—Good program picture. Nothing objectionable. Played May 24-25.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

TRUMPET BLOWS, THE: George Raft, Frances Drake—Scenes in old Mexico. Play written around the Mexican Robin Hood, "Pancho Gomez." Quite interesting, with several nice bull fights. Our crowd was not anything extra, but it was an excellent play and should do good business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 26-27.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk Ohio. General patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields, Joan Marsh, Adrienne Ames—The funniest picture we have played this season. Our patrons laughed so much that they could hardly keep track of what was said. If your patrons like a play with plenty of comedy, play this one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 19-20.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

WHARF ANGEL: Victor McLaglen, Dorothy Dell, Alison Skipworth—Nothing really objectionable in the picture, except there is not much to it. No entertainment. A good one to cancel. Dorothy Dell cries most of the time.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

AND THEY MEAN BUSINESS, HE SAYS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

"The battle is on. 'Pledge Cards of Decency' were passed out at all the churches last Sunday, and what an effect it had on the box office. Looks like the swan song for the small town exhibitor unless they eliminate block booking. I don't know what effect it will have in the cities, but in small towns where there are four and five churches it's just going to be too bad. Might be tough going for awhile until the smoke clears away.

"I figured it was coming a long time ago and I'm telling you they mean business. Producers will be smart if they outline their new products to the small town ministers, getting their okay first, and then call on the exhibitor. 'Passed by the National Board of Review' won't mean anything. It will have to be worded 'Passed by the Legion of Decency'.

"Time will tell who is right and who is wrong."—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb.

RKO

CHANCE AT HEAVEN: Joel McCrea, Ginger Roberts, Marian Nixon—A splendid program picture. A fine story well acted by all the cast. Lots of good comments on this one. Interesting and clean entertainment.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

KING KONG: Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong—We put this in as a substitute for "Son of Kong," being guided in this instance by reports from other exhibitors for which we thank them. A good picture and the thrill hunters ate it up. Some women said it gave them bad dreams and some children said their mamas would not let them see it. But on the whole we were pleased.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Gene Raymond, Fred Astaire—Truly a remarkable production. Give us more like this and don't leave out Astaire. Yes, plenty good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Raul Roulien, Fred Astaire—Rather late to bring this one up, but we thought it the best musical of the season in that the backstage stuff was left out. A good musical that is different. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 23-24.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond—Marvelous production. There is first class entertainment in every foot of it. Not the spectacular picture of some recent musicals but just as entertaining. Fred Astaire steals the show with his dancing, comedy and personality. Business way above average. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 27-28.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Walter Huston, Frances Dee—Some liked it, others did not. I consider it worth running. Wouldn't be bad for Saturday show. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—This is a gorgeous picture, the kind that makes you feel as though you are actually doing the world a little good while you are engaged in this industry. The surprising thing about this picture was the effect it had on our theatre assistants, the boys of teen age whom you would not expect such immediate and altruistic response from. But, one and all, the herald peddler, the seat dusting boy, the two floor sweepers, and the reel winder seemed to take a sudden interest in their mothers and wanted to make some sacrifice so the mothers could see the picture and did we get a lot of extra work done that week? But not only the boys were affected but mothers themselves went out of the theatre resolved to make a sweeter and happier home life and kindle some of the spirit that made this picture, and I think it did them good to see it anyway. Played May 7-8.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

LONG LOST FATHER: John Barrymore, Helen Chandler—This was a poor drawing card. I sure hope Barrymore will improve. This is the worst one he has ever made. Running time, 63 minutes. Played May 17.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

MORNING GLORY: Katharine Hepburn, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Katharine Hepburn was wonderful in this play but there was too much dialogue to make the play interesting. We expected a rushing business but received the usual crowd. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 15-16.—William Day, Jr., Grand Theatre, Dunkirk, Ohio. General patronage.

RIGHT TO ROMANCE: Ann Harding—A good program picture for the ladies. The men want more action. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—Picture pleased and drew some extra on midweek days. However, it is not near the picture to draw as "Little Women." Ralph Bellamy and Robert Young alway please here. Believe RKO pictures better as a whole this year than ever before. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 30-31.—A. J. Simmons, Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

TWO ALONE: Jean Parker, Tom Brown—A very good small town picture. Our patrons liked it and told me so. The star, Jean Parker, put the show over. Running time, nine reels. Played June 1-2-3. —Robert Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN: Lee Tracy—Just another picture. Mildly interesting newspaper story. Poorest midweek business this year. Played May 23. —B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CATHERINE THE GREAT: Elizabeth Bergner, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—A spectacular costume play that is decidedly well acted. All roles well taken off by competent actors but the patrons who like this highbrow stuff are in the minority in this district, so it flopped as a box-office attraction. Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 14-15.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—A good picture but a flop at the box-office. I lost money on this. No more Eddie Cantor for me. My patrons heard him so much over the radio they all are sick and tired of him and don't care to see him in pictures. Some of my patrons told me so, that is what the radio does to a good star and we poor exhibitors get the rap. We pay a big rental fee for these stars' pictures and when we get to play them, they don't do anymore than some little program picture. Running time, 94 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

BELOVED: John Boles, Gloria Stuart—Hardly know how to report on this picture. Some of my patrons liked it, others walked out on it. Personally I gave it a 50-50 rating, that is it will please about 50 per cent. One thing is certain, when John Boles' time comes to shuffle off this mortal soil he should be able to do it in great style as he certainly had enough experience in enacting this role. Let's hope that when his time does come that his going will be as quiet and peaceful as he so skillfully portrays the scene at the close of his pictures. Played Sunday-Monday.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

CROSBY CASE, THE: Wynne Gibson, Onslow Stevens—One of those pictures you sit through thinking or hoping against hope that something will happen and all of a sudden they drop you into space and it is all over. Poor entertainment, poor box-office. W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

CROSBY CASE, THE: Wynne Gibson, Onslow Stevens, Alan Dinehart—Played this on a double bill and they liked it. Lots of good talent in the cast but the lighting was too dark and that was all the fault I heard about the picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, Alice White—A very fast moving comedy with a mystery murder thrown in. The picture is a great advertisement for the Greyhound Bus Lines. Played one day. —Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

GUN JUSTICE: Ken Maynard, Cecelia Parker—Okay for Saturday. Some beautiful photographic work. Mountain scenes with clouds in background. Will please Saturday fans. Played May 26.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

HALF A SINNER: Joel McCrea, Sally Blane, Burton Churchill—Nothing objectionable in it. Churchill is the whole show and he is real good. Romance between McCrea and Blane not strong enough to interest flappers. Did not go over very well. Just a fair program picture. Played May 31-June 1.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

HONOR OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard, Cecelia Parker—Maynard in a dual role and if you ask the audience it wasn't so hot. They dragged in some show business to help it along with what purported to be some broken down troupers that sang "Only A Bird in a Gilded Cage." How's that for going back into the ten, twenty, thirty days, and this one belongs there.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columia City, Ind. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—With the exception of plenty of laughs, there isn't much to this seven reels of nonsense. Played May 24.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Played it on a double feature with a western Thursday-Friday-Saturday and it pleased everybody who saw it. Let's have some more from this team. Andy Devine superbly comical. It'll go well with the country folks on Saturday. Might be substituted instead of a western. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 10-11-12.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

I LIKE IT THAT WAY: Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor—This is a very good comedy drama with music. It is good entertainment and will appeal to all of your patrons. It is not all musical, but rather a love story with a song or dance number here and there to pep it up. There are one or two shots that should have been cut out, but after all it is just comedy. Played one day to good business and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 30.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—A great newspaper story. They don't make them any better, and this actor certainly puts it over right and the balance of the cast is fine. Great entertainment.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

KING FOR A NIGHT: Chester Morris, Helen Twelvetrees—Played this one on a double feature. The patrons enjoyed it but went home dissatisfied with the sad ending. I don't blame them. Who wants tragedies? Chester Morris splendid. Played May 18-19.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

KING OF THE ARENA: Ken Maynard—An average western with a touch of circus atmosphere that seemed to please, especially the youngsters. Played Saturday.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE ARENA: Ken Maynard, Lucille Brown—A very good western with plenty of action which seemed to please the majority of my patrons. However, we did get a very bad print. Played May 31.—J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

ONLY YESTERDAY: Margaret Sullavan, John Boles—The finest picture Universal has ever made. I have never seen a more perfectly acted picture. Let's have more from a real star, Margaret Sullavan. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 8-9.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY ROAN: Ken Maynard—Here's a western special. Some of our fans thought the roan stole the show. It has everything it takes to make a good western. Played to above average business. Running time, six reels.—Robert Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHEELS OF DESTINY: Ken Maynard—This one was a surprise. We expected just another western. Boy with a trained goose and a leaping steer made a hit with the kids. Personally we got a great kick out of it. Of course, Tarzan, the wonder horse, did his share. If you play westerns don't pass this up. Played June 1-2.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

Warner

BIG STAMPEDE, THE: John Wayne—A very good western which seemed to please. Played May 29.—J. C. Dart, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck—The best picture that Stanwyck has made in a long time and everyone liked it. Did nice business. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 26.—Fred M. Elkin, Carolina Theatre, Lexington, N. C. General patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Hal LeRoy—Certainly great entertainment. All the characters good, the star fine, dancing great. The picture gave 100 per cent satisfaction here. Played May 22-23.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell—Don't be afraid to step on this if your folks like the greatest combination of laughs and thrills ever put together. You can be doubly sure of satisfying them when you show this. Trailer will sell this show for you. Played midweek.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

JIMMY THE GENT: James Cagney—Not nearly as good as Cagney's previous efforts. Story awfully weak, lines spoken too rapidly and weak supporting cast with the exception of Allen Jenkins, who practically steals the show. Business average. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 29-30.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

LADY KILLER: James Cagney—A fast moving picture that seemed to please. Cagney is quite popular here. I don't know why. Played May 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MODERN HERO, A.: Richard Barthelmess, Jean Muir—This is a mighty good entertaining picture. Fine story, well acted, better than some of the specials. Played May 29-30.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CINDER ALLEY: Krazy Kat Kartoons—Good cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CURIO SHOP, THE: Krazy Kat Kartoons—These short subjects are fine. Good music and entertainment throughout. Running time, seven minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

ROAMIN' THROUGH THE ROSES: Art Jarrett—Quite entertaining. Better than many two-reel subjects. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE: Krazy Kat Kartoons—Entertaining.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

HIS WEAK MOMENT: Andy Clyde—Andy and all others connected with it must have had a weak moment during the making of this, as there is not a laugh in a carload. Running time, two reels.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

INVENTORS, THE: Coronet Comedies—It's not a good two-reeler for Saturday. Better to use with your best features. Lots of chuckles but not much slapstick.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR MELODY: Musical Comedies —Not so good.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

PAIR OF SOCKS, A: Moran and Mack—This is a fine little comedy. The little negro body made a smash hit with our audience.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

STATIC: Tom Howard—Just two reels of film and that was all.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

MGM

BEER AND PRETZELS: Musical Revues—Just fair. The cabaret entertainers were good here and the patrons would have liked to have seen more of them. Running time, 20 minutes.—William A. Crute. Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BULLONEY: Flip the Frog—The cartoons seem to please about as well as the other comedies. Usually good music.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

BUSY BODIES: Laurel and Hardy—One of Laurel and Hardy's best. I sure hope they don't break up the team. Played May 13-14.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

DIRTY WORK: Laurel and Hardy—The best this pair turned out since their feature "Sons of the Desert." Several of our patrons told us this comedy was worth the admission price. Play it and watch them laugh. Running time, 19 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon. Ky. Small town patronage.

HANDLEBARS: Oddities—A rather amusing description of bicycling days from the early days to the ultra modern fad from Hollywood.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark.

HAPPY WARRIORS: Oddities—Intended for an educational but it turns out good comedy and everyone enjoyed it. Running time, nine minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

SCOTLAND THE BONNIE: PitzPatrick Travel Talks—A very good entertaining travelogue that I made a featurette and it was well liked by all, especially any one from Auld Scotia. Running time, nine minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

TWIN SCREWS: All-Star Comedies—If your patrons don't laugh at this one there is something wrong with them. Some said it was rather raw in spots, but they all seemed to enjoy it. The dance number is extra good for a laugh. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL ON DECK: Headliners—Good one-reeler, mostly singing by different people.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

BETTY BOOP'S MUSEUM: Talkartoons—A pretty good little cartoon. Some fine music while the skeletons perform.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

NO MORE BRIDGE: Leon Errol—Now if you want to bore your people, either before or after your feature, just try and get them to sit through this. Running time, 15 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL (No. 2): These one-reelers are good with any program. They will hold the attention of all classes. Running time, eight minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

PEANUT VENDOR, THE: Screen Songs—Would have been okay had they cut the gal's song to 20 frames. Frank Sabin, Majestic Theatre, Eureka, Mont. Small town patronage.

STUFF ON THE BALL: Grantland Rice Sportlights—All right for the sport fans.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

THREE LITTLE SWIGS: Leon Errol—Here is a good comedy of the slapstick variety featuring the one and only Leon Errol with his clever comedy from Broadway. This short is very good and especially after seeing so many musicals. It will keep them laughing and should please all. Running time, 21 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

RKO

BUBBLES AND TROUBLES: Cubby the Bear—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

CROON CRAZY: Cubby the Bear—Seldom is there a short nowadays that doesn't ring in the "come up and see me some time" stuff. You wonder whether new expressions are not all washed up. Why not start something new.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

KICKING THE CROWN AROUND: Clark and McCullough—Good as the average. Too noisy to suit our particular taste. How we need less dialogue, naturalness and less yelling in our comedies. Let's hope the future will bring us this improvement. After the voice is raised above a certain pitch it loses its clearness of intonation and therefore is tiresome instead of entertaining.—Estes and Estes, Merry Land Theatre, Addison, Mich. Small town patronage.

United Artists

SILLY SYMPHONIES: These are the perfect cartoons. Disney, give us more of them.—B. R. McLendon, State Theatre, Idabel, Okla. General patronage.

TOY SHOPPE, THE: Oswald Cartoon—Very good, better than average. Running time, eight minutes.—J. E. Tunstall, Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. Small town patronage.

WARREN DOANE BREVITY: Universal Comedies—One of the best comedies we have ever played from another company with the exception of Warner Brothers. Excellent.—J. C. Dars, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BORRAH MINNEVITCH AND HIS HARMONICA RASCALS: Melody Masters—A dandy short. Good enough to fit in any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

BUDDY'S BEER GARDEN: Looney Tunes—This is a very good cartoon comedy with plenty of laughs and will please everyone. This is much better than any of the previous issues and seems to please as well as Bosko. Let's have some more good cartoons with a laugh in them. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

DOUBLE-CROSSING OF COLUMBUS, THE: Broadway Brevities—Not as good as many previous ones. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EASY ACES: Pepper Pot—This will appeal to the bridge playing elders of the audience and bring lots of laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

EASY ACES: Pepper Pot—My patrons wanted to know where I got that thing. Just another filler that won't fill. Running time, eight minutes—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE GIRL WITH BIG IDEAS, A: Molly Picon—Here's the poorest short subject I've had this season. Absolutely nothing to it. Running time, 28 minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Texas. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS MISCHIEF: Broadway Brevities—The most uninteresting of all this series (only the antics of a baby that one sees every day everywhere. No good for film fare. Running time, nine minutes.—C. A. Pratt, Texas Theatre, Smithville, Tex. Small town patronage.

MAIN STREETS: World Adventures, E. M. Newman—Only fair. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND: Melody Masters—This is a very good musical one-reeler, featuring an all colored orchestra. Some very good singing and popular music. These one-reelers are very good and always please our patrons. If you want good entertainment in shorts, book these shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

NOTRE DAME GLEE CLUB: Pepper Pot—A very clever musical short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

THEN CAME THE YAWN: Jack Haley—Two reels of nothing. So poor we pulled after one showing. If that is the best this bird can do making two-reel comedies why doesn't he quit. There were plenty of yawns but no laughs. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Serials

Mascot

MYSTERY SQUADRON, THE: Bob Steele—Just played fourth chapter. Exciting. As we feared, however, already the flashbacks have started. If too many, the serials will have to be given up, as unfavorable comments are frequently heard.—Mrs. N. Monte Gill, Strand Theatre, Montpelier, Vt. General patronage.

Principal

TARZAN, THE FEARLESS: Buster Crabbe—This chapter, number eight, very weak. Have been disappointed in this serial up to now. In one chapter Crabbe had black swimming trunks on while giving an exhibition of his ability as a swimmer and all other times he wears jungle attire. It may be better from here to the end, if not, would rate it as very poor.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

Universal

GORDON OF GHOST CITY: Buck Jones, Madge Bellamy—Have run six chapters of this serial and it seems to be holding the interest of the children and young folks.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

"GET OUT AND MIX"

A manager sent to a new spot astounded his superiors a short time later by putting over a business building contest with a local sheet that had never before given theatres the slightest cooperation. When queried regarding the method used to induce this seeming miracle, the showman replied that the idea was broached to the editor of the hardboiled sheet and finally sold while they were golfing together.

Another theatreman obtained an important rent concession from his landlord after the circuit real estate heads had flopped on the job. The answer—manager and owner were serving on the same Rotary Club committees.

Similar instances of the dollars and cents value of outside contacts are sufficiently numerous to prove their desirability. Unfortunately, not every independent exhibitor or circuit head sees clear-eyed on this valued phase of theatre operation. To many, a manager's worth is based on the number of hours he spends in the performance of actual mechanical duties that could more profitably be handled by others of the staff.

Howard Waugh speaks eloquently on this subject in a recent message addressed to the managers of his Warner Theatres Southern Zone, from which we quote:

"What are you doing to intrigue business into your theatre that you are not getting? . . . Analyze your business and analyze yourself. . . . Get out of that office. Mingle with your patrons and friends. . . ."

Such sterling advice dare not be disregarded. We offer it to those executives incorrectly interpreting the trend of the times who still believe that a manager's sphere of influence should be confined within the walls of the theatre.

INSURANCE GOES "CLUB"

Folks, meet up with the newest exploitation outfit—Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., now listed in the rapidly expanding ranks of those organizations promoting their activities by means of a children's club.

The smart insurance minds no doubt encouraged by the success of kid societies inaugurated by radio sponsors, who in turn lifted the gag from the theatre, are now putting out booklets to further the aims of a Junior Safety Club which binds members to help keep down accidents and increase the safety of streets and homes. The suggestions offered are very sound and may help to diminish the total of fatalities.

However, it is not unreasonable to suppose that many applicants for membership have been encouraged by fathers and mothers anxious for the welfare of their offspring. And in the interests of good business the names and addresses of these fond parents may provide welcome additions to the calling lists of insurance solicitors.

The adoption of this profitable device by the conservative Metropolitan is yet another indication of the extent to which billion dollar corporations are drawing upon advertising ideas originated and perfected in the theatre. We bring this emphatically to the attention of exhibitors disinclined to favor vigorous exploitation on the part of their managers.

THE WORD "SELL"

Used often, perhaps too often in these pages, the word "sell" describes aptly the salesmanship of managers who persuade conservative merchandisers to come in on advance campaigns. This week, Ben Cohen and John McManus illustrate ably what we are endeavoring to bring out. To help promote his "Palooka" campaign in New Haven, Cohen actually sold the comic strip of the same name to his leading paper as a regular daily feature. Out in Kansas City, McManus sold a whale of a laugh display ad on "Tarzan" to the town's leading clothier.

Of necessity, every good salesman need not be a good showman, but these above cases are just a few of the many that prove the sales ability of every talented theatreman.

FOR SIMPLER PLEASURES

" . . . People raved about the barn dance for days. . . . the success of this naturally got me to thinking. Folks have been getting down to earth these last few years and seem to want the simple forms of entertainment. They seem to tire of glitter and pomp."

The above is quoted from Harry Moore's report on the success of his barn dance and contest, detailed on the next page. Managers inclined to the more sophisticated forms of exploitation may find food for thought in Moore's findings.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!

Moore Sets Contest For Square Dancers

Manager Harry R. Moore, Egyptian, Delta, Colo., comes in with an idea that contains plenty of box office meat—a "Square Dance" tournament to run over a series of weeks and aimed to appeal to his farm folk in every part of the surrounding territory.

The thought was created recently when Harry put on a Saturday night old time barn dance and contest, with square dance set, old fashioned "caller," fiddlers, mouth harpists and all the other properties. The stage was set to represent a barn, with saddles, harness, hay and a barrel of hard (?) cider. No drops were used, the stage being cleared back to the brick wall, with a wood set to close in sides.

The contest was put on between the rival jiggers for cash prizes, and Moore reports that the packed house rocked with applause and laughter, so much so, that with the encouragement of many of his patrons, this member is putting on the above mentioned tournament to run all summer.

The sessions will be held each Saturday night, all surrounding towns being invited to enter a square dance set with their own "callers." Eliminations will continue until the final night, when the two top dance sets will compete for the championship of the county, with a consolation competition on the same bill.

Judges are to be the audiences, and as Harry expects each set to bring their farm friends as rooters, increased attendance is naturally to be looked for. Generous cash prizes have been provided and merchants are contributing, as well as plugging the idea in ads and windows. The stunt is to run through nine weeks of the summer.

Frank Larson Plants Gag Dillinger Ad in Paper

Frank P. Larson, Paramount Theatre, Idaho Falls, Idaho, got out a nifty ad on "Six of a Kind" in the form of a two-column open letter to "John Dillinger and His Gang" inviting them to "put aside your pressing engagements, artillery, etc.," to witness the picture. Frank goes on to say "We guarantee you an uproarious time and especially in your honor, have invited those straight-shooting marksmen the Chief of Police and Sheriff. They have promised to bring their staff and are expecting a good laugh also. May we hope for your presence at this mirth feast?"

Fast thinking, but wonder what Frank would have done if the desperado and his playmates had accepted the invitation.

Give Smith a Hand

Round Tabler Dick Smith, ill for the past three years, has written a song entitled "The Breeze," already used by Vallee and other notables on the air. It's a corking tune, and the membership can give Dick a hand by plugging this number wherever possible. Olman of New York is the publisher.

Totman Breaks Page One With Star Shot

The cooperation that Erie, Pa., newspapers are known to give theatres was utilized fully by Manager J. M. Totman, of the Warner Theatre in that spot on his "20 Million Sweethearts" campaign. Copies of one of the local sheets with front page headlines, announcing the date, were sent to Dick Powell at the studio who posed as illustrated below, this shot being carried on page one of the daily. Two co-op pages were also promoted and a classified tieup brought further returns, as did musical memory contest prizes given to readers correctly naming pictures and song hits from scenes stills.

Many other costless ideas were put over by Totman, which included distribution by shoe store of Powell star stills left over from one of his former pictures, store paying cost of attached snipes. These stills were also given away on a radio hookup. Jimmy also promoted bumper cards, life savers and airplane from which heralds were thrown at field meet. Heralds were obtained gratis on Philco Radio tieup. Imprinted grocery and market bags were also obtained gratis, as were the services of local boys' club drum and bugle corps parading opening day.

Practically every important window in town was secured for display and street stunts included skating girls carrying banners, sound truck and man carrying lettered umbrella. Lettered congoleum mats were placed on street corners.

Other radio tieups were made, Western Union jumbo telegrams used, gown display week effected at leading woman's shop, and featured in the lobby display was a Hollywood voice test gag which brought further attention to Totman's front, the feature of which was a series of beautiful silk valances.

Musselman Covers Vacant Buildings on "Wonder Bar"

C. J. Musselman, Plaza Theatre, Paris, Texas, decorated all vacant buildings with window displays plugging "Wonder Bar" while taxies carried signs giving playdates.

All employees of the Interstate Theatres in Paris plugged the picture personally and just before the showing distributed personal cards plugging the picture in addition to which three service clubs made arrangements for their entire membership to attend.

Telephone subscribers were called and asked to attend and announcements were distributed to schools. On opening day a negro attired like Jolson in "Goin' to Heaven on a Mule" number, paraded the streets.

Sugarman's Ballys Attract Thousands

As important as the advertising he puts behind his pictures is the general exploitation sponsored by Harry Sugarman, at the Egyptian Theatre, Hollywood, Cal. Taking advantage of the theatre's spacious forecourt, Harry is continuously putting on crowd-stopping stunts and exhibits of various kinds in this area. And so successful has he been he is reported to have made this house one of the most popular and profitable on the West Coast.

One of the most recent of these displays was "The Enchanted Promenade" from Catalina Island, secured through the cooperation of the Wrigley Company, owners of the island. The display, famous in all parts of the world, represents a Mexican quarter with craftsmen at work on pottery, strolling senoritas and caballeros in costume, playing Mexican music, etc., etc. The entire exhibit was brought over intact, attracting thousands.

A hobby show was also sponsored by this fast-moving Round Tabler, the main collection being the property of a local resident consisting of such interesting items as miniature practical violins and cameras, gold mouse trap and other oddities, all of which were well publicized by the local papers and helped to bring the curious from all sections of the surrounding area.

Harry also plays up sensational stunts, one of his latest being a couple dancing for 48 hours on a 24-inch platform atop a 150-foot pole, the gag being representative of the many ace ballys used by this member.

American Consul Praises Barcelona Exploitation

On the occasion of a Jantzen bathing suit tieup in Barcelona, Spain, in conjunction with the local showing of "Footlight Parade," put on by Jose M. Bragulat, Warner branch manager, the success of the stunt prompted an unsolicited letter of congratulation from the American consul, Claude I. Dawson, to Vice-President Sam E. Morris. The tiein was the first of its kind in that country and is reported to have gone over to gratifying returns in attendance and publicity.

Winners' Stunts Blanket Montreal

A mileage contest with a chain of drug stores was reported to be the highlight of the prize winning drive put on by Manager Gene Curtis and Exploiteer Ken Finlay on their prize "20 Million Sweethearts" campaign at the Palace, Montreal. Every purchaser of 25 cents or more in merchandise received a mileage check, the weekly holder of the greatest "distance" receiving a junior gas driven auto racer. Double mileage coupons were given with theatre admissions and although Montreal children are not allowed by ordinance to attend motion pictures, they undoubtedly aided in persuading parents to attend the Palace for this reason. Curtis reports that the advertising on this blanketed the city, including a tremendous newspaper campaign, that was paid for entirely by the drug chain.

Department store tieups were made on the Cinema Shop hat fashions with windows and newspaper advertising, as was also done with a chain of women shops to plug their women's stockings. Strong newspaper campaigns were also put on by a chain of beauty shops plugging a Ginger Rogers' coiffure with stills of the star given to all patrons. Men's stores were tied in on a Dick Powell wardrobe and display ads were also secured in shoe and flower tieups. Jewelry stores also ran windows of scene stills showing stars wearing jewels and followed this with newspaper display ads.

Radio department of city's leading store devoted entire radio floor to tie in with picture, stills being carried on every radio model. Store ads carried picture underline and announced same on radio hour. Similar radio tieins were also effected with other stores and hookup was made with Victor records whereby special displays were made for dealers' windows and other promotions secured via delivery trucks, newspaper ads, etc. As Montreal is largely French speaking, largest sheet music distributor printed lyrics of song hits in French.

In addition to other stunts as effective, including street ballys, Gene reports an especial bid for attention with his most elaborate front in months as illustrated. Background was in red with cutout letters flittered, large blowups were given shadow box effects with indirect lighting. Atop marquee large display was built with large sized girl cutouts, each holding a large circle containing name of one of stars.

Dave Ties "Cheer" To Merchants' Days

Newspaper got behind the idea solidly, even to the extent of lead editorial in which the title was mentioned and residents urged to support the stunt. The merchants' association paid for large canvas banners attached to both sides of buses traversing a radius of 15 miles. Bakers and launderers, brewers and dairies bannered their trucks and delivery wagons likewise, with two colored window streamers, tack cards, window cards, inserts and gum stickers displayed by and used by every store in town. All window displays included copy and stills of the picture.

Speakers' committees composed of prominent citizens gave talks on the stage of the theatre and also spoke at lunch club meetings and other civic functions. Advance co-op pages were plentiful, the copy in most ads leading off with the title to tie in to the various sales, and the campaign wound up with an elaborate street parade to the theatre with Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Boy Scouts, Musicians' Union and other organizations in line, all carrying theatre banners.

Dave reports that over 70 merchants participated, and in addition to individual store advertising expenditures, $500 were spent by the participating stores for the extra advertising material. Initiated at this time by Sablosky was an effective bus-theatre hookup in which the transportation company is selling combination bus and theatre tickets at reduced rates. Details of this will be carried in an early issue.

On "Eskimo," Sablosky arranged for the personal appearance of Capt. Earl Hammond, well known Arctic explorer who brought along his Eskimo sled and dog team. The captain spoke at high schools, civic luncheons, YMCA, women's clubs, and also made addresses from the stages of the Norris, Grand and Garrick Theatres.

Hamilton Promotes Fountain for Lobby

Taking advantage of every situation is part of a showman's job and B. B. Hamilton, Palace, Norwich, Conn., did that when he learned that one of his patrons had brought with him from Europe a very fine electrical fountain. Soliciting the man's cooperation, Hamilton borrowed it for a lobby display with "House of Rotthschild" (see photo).

Apparently "B. B." goes in for profitable promoting, as he succeeded in getting one of the leading florists to donate a lobby full of plants, flowers, etc., which were later turned over to local hospitals.

Perry Fights Circus With Street Bally

Simultaneously with the arrival of the MGM Rhino truck, Fred Perry, skipper at the Capitol, Binghamton, N. Y., staged an animal show to plug his "Tarzan" date. However, a circus selected the same date to play the town, and to fight off the opposition, Fred broke out with a parade of his own, headed by the travelling menagerie, and a flock of bannered cars, sound truck, etc.

In between times, Perry stopped for a moment to pose, and here he is (see photo) handshaking Capt. Proske, the "man in white"—the trainer of the stage tiger act.

Usher planted at another connection, dialed the theatre at frequent intervals.

Appropriate copy was used on board and whenever signaled, operator would answer in regular theatre manner, giving current attraction and then work in a plug for the picture.

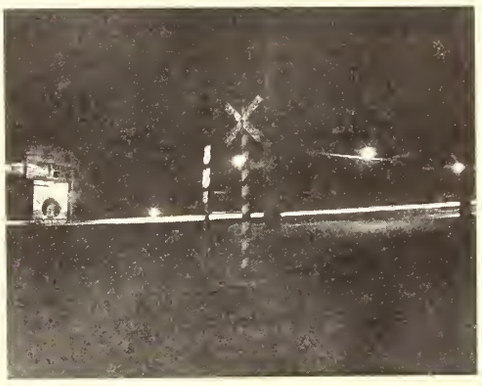
Ed Hiehle Engineers "Hollywood" Opening

Edward J. Hiehle, Midland Theatre, Newark, Ohio, recently put on a "Hollywood Premiere" for his showing of "Let's Fall in Love," with all the trimmings, spot, flood and searchlights playing on the crowds as the cars arrived. Stars were local impersonators who, as they arrived, were picked up by the M. C., introduced over the radio and then led into the theatre and escorted to their seats.



Between star arrivals M. C. sold the pictures, stage revue, etc., to the gaping crowd. Each star was named as the car approached and a uniformed usher opened the car door and escorted the occupant to the mike.

A carpeted aisle led from the middle of the street through the lobby and into the entrance, with traffic officers on hand to keep the crowds under control. "Mae West" arrived by police patrol, "Ed Wynne" by fire truck, "Jean Harlow" arrived with "Harpo Marx" in her wake and Ed tells us the whole gag clicked 100 per cent for him.

After all the stars were seated, they were invited up to the stage where each in turn went through a rehearsed humorous dialogue. A local band was promoted and they accompanied the impersonators in their renditions, said to be highly entertaining.

The sign was right at the intersection of the road and attracted plenty of attention in daylight, but was even more arresting at night (see photo). Joe had the board put up thirty days in advance.

On "We're Not Dressing" a music window was promoted in which a girl was planted with a microphone before her into which she made announcements about the picture and over which records were played. Store also switched the speaker over to the music counter from which the girl played and sang hits from the picture.

Roscoe Drissel has transferred his activities from Washington, and is now working with Elmer Brient, at Loew's Richmond. Going right to bat in the new spot, Roscoe tied in the town's largest bakers for a big ad on "Wonder Bar" in addition to windows and posters, and followed that by promoting the bakers' sound truck for a bally on the picture. The Baby Ruth tieup was also made for a total of over 200 windows.

Drissel executed some nice stuff on "Sadie McKee," outstanders being a number of co-op newspaper ads, one taken by the biggest store to sell the Crawford coiffure, and another announcing an offer of a free star photo with every purchase. In both splashes cuts of Crawford were included.

Galston Submits First Photo of House Front

The Novelty Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., where Jack "Lonnie" Kleinman holds forth, has acquired more than local fame with its unique displays, and the accompanying shot shows the flash front on "King Kong," which Jack reports is the first submitted voluntarily by his employer, Albert Galston, for publicity.

The display included giant cutouts of "Kong" and stuffed animals against a palm tree jungle background, the main attraction being "King Kong, Jr.," a seven year old pet monkey and the show mascot which Jack tells us has been an important part of the theatre's props department. Mary, the monk's offstage name, can be seen in the center of the display where she caught peanuts thrown up to her during the day by a girl hired especially for the job.

Breaks Story on Short

Meritorious short subjects receive a consistent plug from Manager William Connors, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind., who reports an effective newspaper splurge on an Eddie Duchin Vitaphone novelty. Not only was it given prominent mention in the regular house ad, but Connors also promoted a story on the amusement page with a two-column head wherein the title was mentioned that included the name of this added attraction. Results proved this worthwhile.

Redelle Ties Philco To "Sweethearts" Showing

Elmer Redelle, manager of the Victory, Dayton, Ohio, aided ably by Irving Windisch, Warner exploiteer put over a tie-up with Philco Radio (see photo) which resulted in a mighty fine looking display for "Twenty Million Sweethearts."

One of the leading men's shops tied in with a Dick Powell shirt window; photographs of Powell were inserted in laundry bundles, heralds in grocery packages, and a Shoppers News was promoted for a half-page ad using pictures of Rogers and carrying theatre name and playdate.

Orchestrations were placed with bands in all resorts and hotels and an amateur theatrical group played the sketch over the radio. Orchestrations and transcriptions were also spotted with the radio stations.

All in all, a very snappy job and engineered mainly through the efforts of Irving Windisch, who is cutting a mighty path for Warner on campaigns in various spots.

On "Bolero" he took advantage of the national tie-up with Beck shoe stores and promoted additional window displays in prominent stores that distributed heralds with every purchase. Rudy also had a victrola hidden in his office with a loud speaker connection over the box-office plugging tunes from picture.

On "Wild Cargo" six pet shops tied up and gave their entire window displays to rare animal life. Jean Muir being a Jersey girl, Kuehn tied up every flower shop in town on "Modern Hero" with a still of the star and card reading "the flower of Jersey."

Sculptured Butter Figures Make Unusual Lobby Display

Three scenes from the picture, sculptured in butter, of Eskimos, reindeer, igloos, dog teams, etc. (see photo) and made up into a highly effective lobby display, was the unique idea thought up by Pete Egan and Dave Bayne on "Eskimo" at the Palace, Calgary, Canada. Dave worked out the details in cooperation with local dairy which supplied everything gratis and ran special ads, mentioning the exhibit, papers also giving stories to the display.

It was reported to be one of the best attractors put on in months, the lobby being thronged with crowds who asked so many questions that an attendant was found necessary. On the opening day the display was moved to a leading downtown window and passes given to the first ten people each day estimating the correct number of objects in the three scenes.

Rosen's Shoe-Guessing Contest on "Wonder Bar"

A shoe-guessing contest is a little different and Leo Rosen, Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Any one who could guess which shoes were worn by what stars in the picture were given free passes to the theatre. Four pairs of the shoes were planted in the show merchant's window, thereby making it easier for patrons to secure ballots, which were placed on top of show case in both spots.

For a street ballyhoo two stilt walkers were engaged walking business district with placards on their backs giving theatre, playdates, etc. Merchant tie-ups consisted of music stores plugging tunes, and five and 10-cent stores promoted "Wonder Bar" sundaes. Loudspeaker in front of theatre played song hits, while the lobby had a special set with star heads, stills, cut-outs that proved mighty attractive and stopped passersby.

The activities of these members are printed frequently, and on this page are set down a combination report and a few photos of some of their recent doings.

Augsten's House Staff Builds Hanging Sign

Manager Ernest Augsten, Loew's Akron, worked out a very ingenious hanging sign to advertise his stage show policy. Constructed of heavy blue canvas, size 12 by 22, the sign was hung from the flagpole, and across the face (see photo below) were placed cut-out letters, eight feet high, into which light bulbs were inserted. This was all done by theatre employees at a considerable saving.

Augsten has created a number of style displays with which he secures prominent windows, one of the best women's stores going for a full flash on pink and semi-pink dresses to tie into the stage show, "Strike Me Pink." Across the front were a series of disks upon which were lettered the title of the show in pink, and two theatre posters bordered the sides.

Bovim Holds Screening For Local Clergy

Before a selected audience of rabbis and history professors at the local high schools and Ohio State University, Manager Russell Bovim, Loew's Ohio, Columbus, held an advance screening of "House of Rothschild." Many of the rabbis spoke on the picture to their congregations, one wrote a special newspaper article on the story, and another plugged the date in his radio talks. The educators also praised the attraction to their various classes.

Bovim planted the serialization in one of his dailies, the paper's delivery trucks carrying banners to advertise this. Promotional display ads also created extra interest. Cinema Shop hookup was made, Western Union cooperated, and restaurant menus contained notices of the date.

Burnett Promotes Co-ops To Sell "Sadie McKee"

A full-page coop co-op in one paper, and a half page in another were two effective means utilized by Manager M. C. Burnett, Loew's, Dayton, Ohio, on "Sadie McKee," a classified hookup also being put on with another of his dailies. Noteworthy was a full-page illustrated feature story on Crawford's life and loves, in addition to another lengthy break on the settings of the picture.

Burnett also was able to stuff thousands of copies of Liberty, and to heighten interest in the song hit, prominent music stores gave windows and counter displays, with orchestrations furnished the leading local dance bands.

Caldwell Contacts All Rabbis on "Rothschild"

Ten days ahead, Manager Wally Caldwell, Valentine, Toledo, had personal letters and invitations delivered via regular messengers to every local rabbi. This netted numerous buildups before many congregations. Of further aid, was a synopsis of the story delivered before a regular meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs, by the chairman of the Motion Picture Committee.

As part of his regular weekly advertising, Wally has arranged many helpful promotions. A double-faced street banner is placed across the intersection of his busiest streets on the ballyhoo attractions, 24's are posted in good locations, and four-page tabs. distributed house to house.

Fashion window tieups are made regularly, and on pictures with songs, music shops, night clubs and hotel orchestras are contacted. During showing of advance trailers, title of coming picture is sold by electric sign mounted behind screen, worked by dimmers brought up to start and dimmed out at finish.

McManus Ties in Pet Show on "Tarzan"

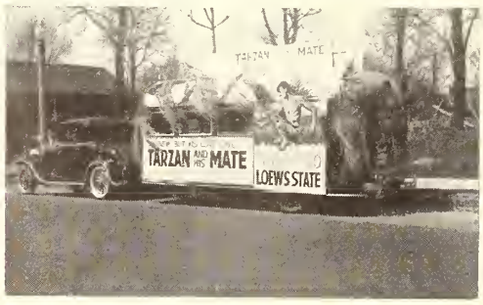
A local feature attracting thousands, a small stock and pet show, coming at the time of his advance on "Tarzan," was utilized by Manager John McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, to sell his show. News shots of the event were promoted and shown at the theatre, bringing many who might not otherwise attend. Breaks were obtained in the local press, and announcements made at offices of the various pet headquarters.

The front was beaverboard covered, with cutout Tarzan figures, and swamp grass to heighten effect. The hanging Tarzan and girl idea brought attention, as did an animated elephant figure in the center of the lobby.

Evens Scores With Decorated Sound Truck

To vary the usual routine of the sound truck street gag, Manager Evens decorated his with jungle cutouts, grass and palms (see photo), using ballyhoo record over amplifiers, unusual appearance of truck helping to stop the curious.

Tie-in with local daily on Tarzan strip netted gratis display ads, grooved drawings were distributed at schools, and chocolates in imprinted bags were also promoted. Feature stories were planted, as was "Big Game" classified stunt suggested in home office manual.



Big Campaign by Reid On Velez in Person

Appearing at Loew's Broad, Columbus, Ohio, in person, Lupe Velez was welcomed royally as a result of Manager Ken Reid's drive to spread the word. Starting with an underline under an AP story announcing the star's departure from the Coast with Johnny Weismuller, Ken worked out a free broadcast at the airport where the stars landed (see photo). He promoted an amateur to radio the welcome which was picked up by one of his stations, thus saving the line charges.

Army planes flew out to meet the arrivals, the key to the city was given Lupe, and a parade of bannered cars escorted her to town. Receptions were given to the press, with sport writeups on Weissmuller included. Many gratis ads were promoted through the auto dealers, Lux and other merchants.

Windows carried "welcome" banners, police chief escorted Lupe through state pen and made star honorary member of force. Velez also helped to plug both "Viva Villa" and "Hollywood Party" by attending screenings, inviting prominents to go along, this cracking the papers. Ken put on a raft of other good stuff, all of which clicked big.

A focusing flashlight can be wired to a six-volt bell transformer (transformer used in lieu of batteries), mounted on a base, and used for a miniature spotlight. A six-volt bulb is used to replace the ordinary flashlight lamp.

Cohen Sells "Palooka" Strip to Local Paper

It seems that no New Haven daily ran the "Palooka" strip before Ben Cohen dated in the picture at the College Theatre in that spot. So Ben went to work and succeeded in selling his leading paper on the idea of running the comic, to start about the same time of the playdate. The campaign that Cohen then put on was double-purposed, and to insure its success, Ham Fisher, father of the "Palooka" funnies, was persuaded by this Round Tabler to appear in person on the opening night.

The Mayor and other civic heads participated in a welcome ceremony, the Lions' lunch club had the cartoonist as guest of honor, boys' band serenaded the visitor and paraded to the theatre, and department store went for big windows and adds. Ben interviewed Fisher via radio, sang a couple of songs from the picture and also made sure that all the doings crashed the front pages.

Contests also played a part in the campaign, the outstander being a limerick idea sponsored by the local makers of Palooka products for prizes of baseball gloves. Seconds at fight clubs wore the titled sweat shirts, and a host of other good gags were whammed across by Cohen, who says that he lost poundage (and he can afford that) on an 18-hour-day schedule that took in the week of the advance.

THE COMMUNITY WEDDING

Round Tabler Gets Results with Stage Bridal Ceremony; Gives Low Down on Correct Procedure

by E. M. HART
City Manager, Reade Theatres, Plainfield, New Jersey

Utilize the business opportunities, help wanted male, female and both, also situations wanted both in classified section of daily newspaper. At the same time start plugging with free stories the June Community Wedding, using as the best reason for free publicity the local interest and the success of the previous Community Wedding. The popular appeal always gives the managing editor of the newspaper a pleasant reaction and a desire to cooperate.

Never stop looking after one couple is found available for the wedding because family, near relatives, and "busy body" friends of the girl particularly may discourage the couple at the last moment; therefore, it is best to have at least three couples available for an emergency. I had this experience this year and had to call upon my third reserve couple to clinch the stunt.

The person to perform the ceremony is another "headache" and unless the cash is laid down on the line, he is not anxious to appear before the public, giving many reasons such as political, lowering his prestige, etc. I find it best to make him a cash offer that would be interesting. Last year I gave $10 and this year doubled it and procured a judge from a neighboring town which is usually the easiest way out. I procured the $20 from a merchant who naturally would be mentioned in the announcement of the wedding on the screen.

I find it difficult sometimes in promoting certain goods for the bride and groom, but have been usually fortunate in procuring the wedding ring, wedding gown, suite of furniture with other housekeeping accessories such as lamps, linen, flowers, wedding dinner, traveling bags, traveling wardrobe, tuxedo rentals, groom's outfit, shoes, lingerie, bridesmaids' gowns, in exchange for mentioning these merchants on the screen as part of the Community Wedding announcement.

Owing to the fact that I run so many contests during the season giving prizes such as cruises and trips, I sometimes find it difficult to get the honeymoon trip for nothing, particularly if I happen to be in a small town where I have worn out the scheme. In that event, I promote the cash from a merchant to purchase the honeymoon trip, crediting the merchant with the gift on the screen.

I'm happy to say that I have completed all details regarding all gifts and am all set for the second Community Wedding ever held in the city of Plainfield, having promoted the original first Community Wedding last June. I find that June is the best time for weddings, being the most popular season for such an event and most girls like to be "June brides."

The wedding stunt does not cost the theatre one penny, even the cost of the trailer announcing the wedding is promoted and properly advertising this stunt should increase the business at least $500 in a theatre with sufficient capacity and just when you need it most during the hot weather in June.

Where I have more than one theatre, such as at the present time, I select the house that needs the business most and keep it away from outstanding and important film attractions so that it is not wasted.

UNIQUE "TARZAN" LOBBY. Leo Rosen, Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y., created this display that ran almost the entire length of his lobby. Stuffed animals were borrowed and most of the other material promoted. Leo states the entire cost was $2.25 which sets some sort of a record and attests to this member's ingenuity in creating much for little cash outlay.

Psychology In Theatre Operation

Manager J. E. Lykes, Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, Ohio, has analyzed the psychological principles of human feelings and emotions as they apply in theatre exhibition. Here are some of his findings.

"Our feelings tell us whether an experience is agreeable or disagreeable, pleasant or unpleasant, harmonious or inharmonious. The stimuli which produce feelings vary in their power to create pleasant or unpleasant feelings. Too loud sound is unpleasant because of the sheer force of the stimuli, and too low sound becomes disagreeable because of the strain involved in hearing it.

"The same applies to the feelings of bodily comfort. For example, sitting in a theatre that is uncomfortably hot or uncomfortably cold, the feeling of discomfort makes one dissatisfied with the entertainment, causing a lack of interest which creates a feeling of not wanting to ever return again. Allied to bodily comfort is that mental condition which goes by the name of satisfaction and pleasure. Obviously, then, feelings in business play a part of very great importance in the aggregate."

Jack concludes by stating that while managers do not have any part in the production of the pictures they show, there are a great many ways in which a favorable impression may be created in assuring patron comfort and pleasure, and thus recommends the above for consideration.

SMART SELLING. The above illustrates Johnny McManus' keen "Tarzan" promotion for the date at the Midland, Kansas City. Merchant took four column ad, one line of clever copy tieing in famous jungle call.

Helson Also Promotes Stage Wedding Stunt

Right on the heels of Hart's report, comes a splendid campaign from R. S. Helson, Hub Theatre, Rochelle, Ill., who staged the bride-and-groom gag to satisfactory returns. His local paper gave enthusiastic support with a front-page streamer head and column story, following this with a double truck of ads from participating merchants. Extra copies of the paper were distributed to every house in town, all rural delivery routes and in the surrounding territory, and Helson states that he cleaned up handsomely.

To encourage the principals in the ceremony, the names of the couple and the minister were not made public until just before the actual wedding. Everything was in keeping, with attendants, ring bearer and flower girls, organ solos, rice showers, etc.

A series of weekly home talent vaudeville nights are also going over for this number, with seven acts presented on Friday nights, and the winners of these meeting on the seventh Friday to compete for the grand prizes. The surrounding towns are solicited for talent, and as each entrant brings his own group of rooters, receipts have picked up encouragingly.

"HARUM" HANDICAP. The showmen at the Grandin Theatre, Roanoke, Va., tied in this effective street bally to the exploitation on "David Harum," the idea hooking in with the picture's trotting horse sequence.

Taylor's Screening Nets Fine Results

Bill Taylor at the State Theatre in Houston, Texas, had a special screening of "House of Rothschild" a week in advance to an invited group of Jewish citizens, merchants and writers whose word-of-mouth comments resulted in additional business, reports Bill.

He also effected a coiffure tie-up with one of the leading beauticians and another merchant tied in with a display of Loretta Young shirtwaists in one of the leading store windows; stills with scenes from the picture were planted giving playdates, etc.

Bill contacted the business manager of one of the newspapers and interviewed him concerning the typical Jewish customs as portrayed in the picture, thus netting additional space in the papers. Jewish Herald ran a feature story on the Rothschild family.

Car banners, window cards, busy street sections, radio and hotels were also covered. Ladies' and gentlemen's rooms had cards a week in advance and many other practical angles were covered by this member, one of those fast moving showmen of Lionel Keene's southern Loew Division.

Sussman Promotes "Rouge" Caravan

Undaunted by the work of his brother showmen here in the States, Lester Sussman, United Artists manager in San Juan, Porto Rico, promoted a "Moulin Rouge" Caravan from one of the local bus companies as an advance ballyhoo when the picture played at the Paramount Theatre.

Among other stunts that Lester put on was a "Moulin Rouge" dance at one of the hotels, and a radio broadcast was held. Sussman also contacted one of the beverage companies, which netted him co-op page ads.

Dannenberg's Milk Stencil Pulls Crowd

Sid Dannenberg, Warner exploiter in Cleveland, pulled a neat street stunt recently by sending a couple of men out to stencil the sidewalks with a pail of water slightly colored with milk to represent whitewash. The crowds that gathered attracted a policeman, who attempted to stop the stunt and by the time the argument was over the street was effectively blocked and the stenciled signs naturally had disappeared.

COME ONE, COME ALL—YOU, TOO!

JAMES E. AYRES

manages the Liberty Theatre in Susanville, Cal., and he has had somewhat of a varied career. Jimmy has been a projectionist, an assistant manager and finally arrived at his present position. However, he started out by being a teller and head bookkeeper in a banking Petalum, which you'll all admit is a long way from theatre management. However, he tells us showbusiness always had an attraction for him so it is natural for him to have a house of his own to manage. Jim is not yet thirty but apparently he's been places and done things.

who manages the Queen Theatre, in Abilene, Texas, and is a smart showman, because he says on his application blank that "no manager can operate a theatre and know what he's doing without a HERALD on his desk," and of course we feel much the same way about it. Since you've been following our pages so closely, "R. D.," you know how active the balance of the Paschall-Texas Circuit is, so get busy, and do your share.

is another Paschall-Texas or Interstate Circuit boy to join us and he manages the Rivoli and Strand Theatres in Waco, Texas. Not only does he join, but he wants to be sure that he gets the HERALD at both houses. These Texans sure show the proper spirit. How about you trying to outdo Leatherman, in a little lively competition via our pages, Abe?

joins the Club from Rahway, New Jersey, where he is managing the Rahway Theatre. George was born in New Jersey and has always managed houses there. He started in show business as usher at the Branford in Newark, from there went as treasurer to the Mosque in Newark. Then a promotion was in store for him and he became manager of the Capitol in Union City. The Rex Theatre in Irvington then held his attention for a time, only to be promoted and shifted to his present house in Rahway.

is down in Clarksburg, West Va., managing the Warner Ritz Theatre. He ought to be able to tell us plenty about theatre operation, since, according to him, he entered showbusiness at the tender age of fifteen. He has been manager and stage manager, is a Mason and Elk, married, has a daughter and has seen service in the World War, and a few of these things are enough to keep a man busy.

is the City Manager of the Interstate Circuit in Austin, Tex., with headquarters at the Paramount Theatre, there. Just when we get to the point of thinking we have the whole bunch lined up 100% up comes another Interstater and we take the welcome mat out again for him. How about lining up all the men in your district to get them to send in their theatre activities?

JOHN J. BAKER

in St. Louis, Mo., manages the Missouri Theatre. He's a far piece from home, because he was born in Brooklyn and was educated at Horace Mann. Johnnie started with Loew's as usher and was promoted to assitant manager, later having charge of the entire Service Staff for the whole Loew Circuit, covering practically every theatre from coast to coast. How about writing us an article for publication on House Personnel, Johnnie, that's something that ought to be of interest to the entire membership. Are you on?

manages the Liberty Theatre in Wheeling, West Va., and is a fairly new comer to moviedom, having been in it only seven months. Tony is a graduate of Ohio State University and is a member of Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity. He has only been with Warner Brothers, starting in as assistant manager of the Warner house in Pittsburgh and was then promoted to manager of the Victoria in Wheeling and then to his present position. Considering the short time he's been in showbusiness he's to be congratulated for his quick rise.

joined as the assistant manager of the Globe Theatre in Calcutta, India, but since joining has been promoted to the managerial position, so we'll take this means, too, of welcoming and congratulating him on his promotion. He was educated in St. Xavier's College in Bombay. In less than two years he has worked his way up from assistant to manager of the Globe. Our entire membership is always interested in the doings of our foreign members, so please let us know how you exploit your pictures in Calcutta.

R. B. DIEFENBACHER

manages the National Theatre in Woodland, Cal., among the various theatre activities that Ronald undertakes is a very well gotten out little publication which he calls the "Playgoer." It is interesting to know how he entered show business. Ron, had an advertising idea and talked to a theatre manager about it and he became so engrossed in the theatre that he finally entered it as a profession. He started as a doorman, operator about seven months and was then given a chance as manager. He was the youngest manager in California, having a house at eighteen, and has always worked under George M. Mann, president of his company.

is in Philadelphia, Pa., managing the Forum Theatre for the Circuit Settle. Corporation. He takes care of an 1,800 seat house with three changes a week; enough to keep any one man busy, but not too busy, we hope, to prevent him from keeping in touch with us. Some day soon, we hope to come over to Philly, and you may be sure we'll drop in to see you.

is assistant manager at the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., assisting Jack Hodges, club member who is well-known to all of you. He started in this business of ours on November 11, 1930, Armistice Day to be exact, if you're superstitious Dick that ought to be a good omen. You're working under a great fellow and we're sure you enjoy the association and will learn much from him. We hope it won't be long before you have a house your own.

manages the Fox Gateway Theatre in Glendale, Cal. He has worked his way up from doorman to his present job as manager. He has handled houses in Long Beach, Los Angeles and Glendale. He started in with West Coast Theatres and Gore Bros. Ellsworth was born in Rockford, Ill., and went to high school in Venice, Cal., so apparently is a native of California by adoption.

is a little closer to home; he manages the Rialto Theatre in New Britain, Conn. We've lots of friends in your fair city, Art, as you are probably aware. Now that summer is fast approaching, a lot of you men will be coming down to the Big Burg. If you're one of them, remember Club headquarters is always ready to welcome you, so be sure to come in and say hello.

another Interstater, manages the Palace Theatre in Abilene, Texas, and apparently is the possessor of a grand sense of humor. We wish we could reproduce his application blank in toto. He tells us for one thing, that his sound equipment is "Duke's Mixture." Listen, "B. G.," as long as you get such a kick out of your job, let's in on what you are doing to keep the shekels coming into the little old register.

Triple

EASTMAN Super-sensitive Panchromatic Negative has a three-fold distinction. Its introduction has led to more significant advances than any other film ...excepting only Eastman's original motion picture negative. Under the expert hands of the cameraman it has in the last three years photographed a great majority of the biggest screen hits. And...because of this record of accomplishment...it now enjoys by far the widest preference among all motion picture negative films. Eastman Kodak Co. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

CENSORSHIP'S TRIUMPHS

THE current industry predicament and problems presented by the Legion of Decency movement of the Catholic church, coming somewhat to a focus this week at the meeting of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures in Cincinnati, gives rise to some reflections on the achievements of censorships, political censorships, state and municipal, to date.

Three of the regions most affected, points where the Legion of Decency campaign has reached its greatest fervour, where the clergy have been the most emphatic, where the response has been the most marked, are Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago, all of which have these many years enjoyed official censorships operated as functions of government, municipal in Boston and Chicago, state censorship in Pennsylvania.

The most spectacular example of the utter failure of political censorships is afforded in Pennsylvania, where to the world the censorship has been a grotesque joke and something akin to a continuous disaster to both the theatre and its public at home.

And along with this long continued exposition of the failure of governmental and political censorships, the progress of the years has seen the decline and fading out of the powers of what started out as the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures and has become today the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. It is not intended to infer that the services of this public spirited organization are at an end, and there is or should be full recognition in the industry of its leavening labors, especially through the Better Films Committee, in behalf of selected lists of product and productions of special merit. But the line "Passed by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures," stencilled on the main title by the producer before the film leaves the studio, has no such meaning as the original brand "Passed by the National Board of Censorship."

There are certain fairly obvious lessons in the errors, the weaknesses and the shortcomings of the motion picture industry's two conspicuous endeavours at self-discipline. The acute problems of today would not exist if either of these two prior movements had been supported on all sides and by all factors in a spirit of performance that matched with the promises. The National Board, formed by figures of the People's Institute, by reason of the backing of the late Jeremiah J. Kennedy, the iron man of the Patents Company, was coercively effective only a little longer than the life of the powers of Mr. Kennedy. With the retirement of Kennedy as the boss, the National Board became regarded as entirely external.

Again, the essay at self-discipline and regulation represented in the adoption, if not the observance, of the Production Code has let the industry come to the dilemmas and issues this week under discussion in Cincinnati by the Episcopal Committee, has arrived at this state of affairs as a result of thinking of the Code, too, as an entirely external matter.

The step being taken by the industry in the action of the members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in voting to make their New York directors instead of their Hollywood picture makers the court of last appeal from rulings of the Hays office supervisory office in the west, has at least the merit of excluding the accused from seats on the jury. And the while aims to preserve for the industry the principle of self-regulation.

With the spotlight of attention on the League of Decency movement, any observer of the cinema scene must now be impressed with the eclipse of the excitement of and about the movements of the Motion Picture Research Council and its avowed program of crystalization of an organized public demand for improved screen standards. It is not, however, to be assumed that the capable publicity personnel of the Research Council and its stellar cast of names has permanently yielded the stage. Its headline builders will be heard from on the day of opportunity.

DISPATCHES from Mexico City bring the tidings that Senor Diego Rivera is to recreate on the walls of the National Theatre there the mural which was aborted in the making at Rockefeller Center, sometimes known as Radio City. That will be just the place for it. But that's not where he wanted to put it.

BASIC DEFENSE

SOME of the contemporary issues in Code and other matters in the industry, with the manner and nature of the arguments involved, bring to mind an episode of early code discipline when the board of directors of the Motion Picture Patents Company imposed a fine on Sigmund Lubin of Philadelphia, a member, for duping a Melies film.

"Pop" Lubin, most annoyed, appeared before the board.

"Duping? Duping, hey? Well, I tell you, Vitagraph does it, Biograph does it, Edison does it. I didn't do it.—And anyway I didn't make no money on it, anyway, so I won't pay the fine."

And he did not.

ADVERTISING'S JOB

MR. KENNETH COLLINS, assistant to the president of Gimbel Brothers, and one of New York's most spectacularly successful advertisers, speaking at an American Newspaper Publishers Association meeting, observed, "The government in cooperating with industry can spread purchasing power as far as it likes, but it will never bridge the gap between consumption and production until the force of advertising makes people want to spend the money which this New Deal will have given them."

Incidentally, figures coming out at the New York meeting of the publishers revealed that newspapers, magazines, outdoor, chain broadcasts and car cards received from national advertisers a total in 1933 of $298,000,000 and that of this 48.6 cents of every dollar went to newspapers.

INTERNATIONAL NEWSREEL

Under study by the League of Nations is development of an international newsreel "for the promotion of mutual understanding between nations," according to the report of the recent international cinematography congress in Rome. Model censorship regulations for general use, a sport film award, educational use, were also discussed by the congress. . . .

WORLD WIDE FILMS

Withdrawn from the Fox lineup have been 21 World Wide features, distributed by Educational prior to its releasing deal with Fox. Unaffected are Educational shorts. The features will be state-righted, with R. N. Savini as World Wide general sales manager. The New England franchise has gone to Leo Britton, Philadelphia and Washington to J. A. Bachman. In New York is Time Pictures Corp., headed by Harry Brandt, Dave Rosengarten, Moe Kerman. . . .

$1,000,000 THEATRE

Incorporated in Deleware is Western States Theatres, Inc., to operate a new $1,000,000 theatre in Oklahoma City. The largest house in the state, it will seat 3,000. Heading the company are Foster McSwain, W. T. Spears, A. R. Powell, theatre men. This is the first major move in the city since Warner and Publix joined in 1933 to dominate the situation. . . .

LOEW'S ON COAST

With E. A. Schiller, vice-president, conducting a survey on the ground, Loew's plans an invasion of the San Francisco situation, with construction of subsequent runs in residential districts. The move, if concluded as expected, would throw the circuit into competition with Golden State Theatres, T. & D. Junior Theatres, United California Theatres. . . .

FILMS TO HOME

Forsaking the films for a home, Janet Snowden, 19-year-old oil heiress who went to Hollywood for fame (she has the fortune), has decided to "forget all about pictures now" following her marriage last week to William S. Gill, theatrical agent. . . .

BERT WOODRUFF

William H. (Bert) Woodruff, veteran trouper of stage and screen, who played with Charles Ray in some of his biggest successes, died last week in Hollywood at the age of 78. From the stage he went to the films in 1916, appearing, among others, in "The Fire Brigade," "Speedy," "Manhattan Cocktail." . . .

ELECTRICS SUED

Named defendants in seven anti-trust suits filed this week in New York federal court, totaling $22,500,000, were Erpi, Western Electric, A. T. & T., charged with unfair competition, restraint of trade in the equipment field. The plaintiffs: Standard Sound Recording, $9,000,000; Service on Sound, $4,500,000; Macy Manufacturing, $3,000,000; Granger Manufacturing, $1,500,000; Standard Sound Service, Sound Picture Engineers, Audio Equipment Maintenance, $1,500,000 each. . . .

WILL NOT CANCEL

No intention has E. J. Sparks, Florida circuit operator, of exercising the 10 per cent cancellation privilege on product, he informed W. H. Richardson, Universal southern manager. The reason: the distributor has his problems too, and cancellation will cut into revenue. His decision is in reciprocation for past favors. . . .

FIGHT FILMS

No Kansas law exists which forbids exhibition in the state of the Carnera-Baer fight pictures, this week ruled attorney general Roland Boynton on a censor board request. The board may determine whether the film may be shown, guiding its decision by the existing statutes. . . .

MASS PRODUCTION'S END

The end of mass production is in sight, in the opinion of Mary Pickford, expressed this week in Hollywood. Many small studios humming with activity, using big names, is to her an indication that the mass production days are numbered, which, she said, "augurs well for the screen.". . .

"DIGEST" RETURNS

Back to the screen has come "The Literary Digest," which, under a deal with Mentone, will make "The Spice of Life," one-reelers, for Columbia release. The former Digest series were "Topics of the Day" and "Fun from the Press." Dr. Rockwell, vaudeville player, will be featured. . . .

PETITION AGAINST GTE

Filed against General Theatres Equipment, in receivership, at Wilmington, Del., last week was a petition, under the new bankruptcy law, by the Colonial Mortgage Investment Company, alleging it holds $225,000 of 10-year six per cent debenture bonds, in default in interest. Creditors may ask reorganization, under the law, but 75 per cent of the creditors must approve.

TRI-ERGON APPEAL

Believed planned by RCA Photophone is an attempt to appeal the Philadelphia circuit court of appeals Tri-Ergon patent decision to the U. S. supreme court. One of a number pending over the country, the action was brought by Tri-Ergon against Wilmer & Vincent, Locust Real Estate Company and Altoona Publix Theatres, Inc., defended by RCA Photophone. . . .

MISS HARVEY LEAVES FOX

Terminating her player contract with Fox by mutual consent, Lilian Harvey, German actress, whose performance in "Congress Dances," German film, brought her to Hollywood, has left the studio. With her went Paul Martin, German director, who was to have directed her in "Serenade." They are expected to return to Germany.

MRS. ZUKOR ROBBED

Breaking into the Chicago hotel room of Mrs. Adolph Zukor, wife of the Paramount president, as she slept, jewel thieves last week robbed her of pieces valued at $65,200. Mrs. Zukor was awaiting the arrival of her husband, en route to the company convention in Los Angeles. . . .

To the studio labor and extra standing committees on the Coast the California State Compliance Board has turned over 97 complaints, 67 involving objections of extras, 27 concerning labor. Quick hearings, rapid disposition were ordered. . . .

130 NEW SEASON'S FILMS DESCRIBED FOR EXHIBITORS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and RKO Radio Reveal the Details of Product Planned for 1934-35 Period

With the preliminary drafting of product schedules for 1934-35 accomplished by seven of the eight large distributors—Columbia excepted—and the composition of the new feature programs revealed to their distribution forces at the annual sales conventions held during the past ten days, the field selling battalions were this week packing briefcases to proceed before the week-end from 35 exchange centers to the lobbies of some 14,000 theatres with contract blanks and a definite outline of the title and talent structure of 277 features out of 350 announced by the seven companies for the new year. Columbia will join the ranks early in July.

Reports reaching Broadway late Wednesday from the Chicago and Los Angeles hotels where Paramount, RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were in convention, indicated that the feeling among their studio, distribution, corporate and field forces was equally as optimistic for the new season as that which last week radiated from the convention halls of Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner.

Following the recent convention announcements of 58 features by Fox, 24 by United Artists, 42 by Universal and 60 by Warners, there were made known this week programs of 64 features by Paramount, 52 by MGM and 50 by Radio, with a combined schedule of 656 one and two-reel subjects, in addition to newsreels, listed by all of the seven companies.

Leeway for Timely Material

The following is a comparison of the number of features promised for 1934-35 by the seven companies which have held conventions, with the number of features of which the title, story and talent structure have been announced:

	FEATURES PROMISED	FEATURES OUTLINED	SHORTS SCHEDULED (Exc. Newsreels)
FOX	58	47	112
MGM	52	43	100
PARAMOUNT	64	51	104
RKO	50	36	104
UNITED ARTISTS	24	20	18
UNIVERSAL	42	33	88
WARNER	60	47	130
TOTALS	350	277	656

Motion Picture Herald, on June 2, published the details of new product and policy announcements of Fox Film, and in the issue of June 9 outlined the new product structures of United Artists, Universal and Warner. In this issue, on pages 10, 11 and 12, appear those of Metro, Paramount and Radio.

Deviating slightly from its former policy of holding a national sales convention, Columbia Pictures, last of the large companies to meet, will center its sales forces in two strategic spots next month to launch its 1934-35 sales campaign. Eastern salesmen and managers, executives from the home office, and the eastern Canadian forces will assemble in Atlantic City on July 2 for the first of two conventions. The second has been set for Chicago, where, on July 9, all divisions from the Midwest, Southwest and Pacific Coast will gather. Home office executives will travel to Chicago for this meeting, led by Jack Cohn, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Details of 130 features of three companies—MGM, Paramount and RKO Radio—appear in this issue.

Brown in 8 Action Features

Columbia decided during the week to star Johnny Mack Brown in a series of eight action features, work starting about July 1, with Irving Briskin supervising. Another new group on the company's program will be a series of one-reel Mentone Productions known as "The Spice of Life," to feature the comedian, Dr. Rockwell.

Exchangemen, bookers and managers of Universal's branches in 11 southern states attended a regional convention over the week-end at the Hotel Roosevelt, New Orleans, where W. H. Richardson, southern division manager, explained the policies and the nature of the 42 features and 58 short subjects which had been outlined at the main convention in New York on June 8.

Warner Ends Sessions; Lists Shorts

Public announcement that the company will "positively" not make available any of its motion pictures for booking into 10-cent theatres was made by the Warner Brothers management at a sales convention on Monday at the St. Francis in San Francisco.

At the same time, Gradwell Sears, western sales head, told the convention that Warner will launch a nation-wide campaign for a general increase in admission prices and complete elimination of double bills. The company will adopt a policy of withholding product from theatres charging less than 15 cents for matinees or 20 cents for evening performances, Mr. Sears stated.

Major Albert Warner declared that the company had consummated the sale of its entire product for 1934-35 to Loew's and the RKO circuit, to be split between them for $2,000,000. Last year Warner sold exclusively to Loew's.

Seven of Eight Major Companies Announce Total of 350 Features and 656 Short Product to Sales Conventions

At the previous meetings, the sales forces heard outlined some 60 features scheduled for 1934-35, but not until this week's session at San Francisco had it been decided to release a short subject lineup consisting of two three-reelers, 50 two-reelers and 78 singles, a total approximating last year's, but more diversified. The two three-reelers are a departure.

Mr. Sears presided at the discussions pertaining to actual sales policies, while S. Charles Einfeld spoke on advertising and publicity budgets for the new year. Others from the home office were Norman Moray, Vitaphone executive in charge of sales of short subjects and trailers, and Carl Lesserman, Harold S. Bareford and A. W. Schwalberg. Representing the studio was Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production. The group from New York accompanied Mr. Warner to Burbank after the sessions at the St. Francis, to remain at the studios until about July 1, at which time they will meet Harry M. Warner, president, for final executive conferences.

Mr. Moray announced the following Vitaphone release schedule: 32 "Broadway Brevities" musical comedies; 20 two-reel "Big V" comedies; 13 "See America First" one-reel novelties; 13 "Melody Masters" in one reel; 26 "Pepper Pot" one-reel novelties; 26 Leon Schlesinger single-reel cartoons.

Independents Continue Active

The Chesterfield-Invincible interests are understood to have decided on 20 features, instead of the 18 on the current program, with each company producing 10 for distribution on the state rights market through George Batcheller's Chesterfield organization.

Arthur A. Lee, head of the Gaumont-British distribution unit in this country, said during the week that the American division will handle several next season on its own having already established the following representatives: Abe Fisher, in Chicago, to handle the Midwest; E. Warwick-Owensmith, assigned to Connecticut; Nathan Marcus, in charge of upstate New York; Sam Rosen, at Philadelphia; Francis O'Mahony, directing New England contacts out of Boston, and George W. Weeks, in charge of all territories west of the Rocky Mountains. Certain first runs and all circuit bookings will be handled by W. D. Shapiro.

Eight Spanish features will be distributed next season by J. H. Hoffman, who returned to New York from Spain late last week.

Select Pictures, with headquarters at the New York Biograph Studio, this week launched its schedule of 12 features for 1934-35, by placing in work Dashiell Hammett's "Woman in the Dark," with Fay Wray in the lead.

MGM WILL OFFER 52 IN 1934-1935

Details of 43 Are Outlined To the Chicago Convention

Sales Forces at Session Hear 100 Shorts Are Scheduled; Company Plans to Continue Emphasis on Star Values

The 11th sales season of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was to be launched on Thursday at noon, when the entire executive personnel from both coasts, and the salesmen from the exchanges in the field converge on Chicago for the annual sales convention, to be held at the Drake Hotel during the rest of the week. The company will announce a feature program of 52 for 1934-35, an increase of four over the program of this year. Outlined to the conventioneers were details of 43 of the group, together with an assortment of 100 short subjects.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president, leading a delegation from the home office on Broadway, will reveal to the delegates definite indications that theatre attendance is on the upgrade and that the company has in prospect one of its most active seasons in recent years.

Loews and Warner Bid 4 Millions for Fox Metropolitan

Loew's Inc., and Warner Brothers on Wednesday made a joint offer of $4,000,000 in cash for the 87 theatres in the Fox Metropolitan circuit. The news came as a surprise at a hearing in New York on a plan of reorganization sponsored by bondholders of Fox Metropolitan before Judge Julian W. Mack in U. S. district court. Competitive bidding between the two had been expected. The highest known previous prospective offer for the circuit's assets had been $3,000,000 and when the Warner-Loew bid was made, the Fox Metropolitan bondholders' committee, authors of the reorganization plan which would have continued operation of the circuit by Skouras and Randforce, was granted an adjournment until Thursday afternoon.

If the Fox bondholders accept the offer any reorganization would be obviated through a foreclosure sale and would make available to them an additional $1,500,000 in cash now in custody of Irving Trust Company, receiver. The division of the $5,500,000 aggregate amount would give holders of $13,000,000 in bonds of Fox Metropolitan an approximate cash settlement of 42 cents to the dollar.

Appeals Court Reserves Decision in Paramount Case

The U. S. Circuit court of appeals in New York on Wednesday reserved decision on an action brought by Chase National Bank as trustee for bondholders seeking authorization to file a claim against Paramount Publix for the full amount of a $20,000,000 bond issue and to receive interest payments on the entire issue. The appeal in this case was sought by both Chase and Paramount and followed a series of court activities.

Richard Washburn Child Loses Plagiarism Suit

The $1,000,000 plagiarism suit brought by Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, against James Hagan, playwright, and Paramount Productions, Inc., interests, were dismissed as unfounded in New York Tuesday by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey. Mr. Child charged that Mr. Hagan's play, "One Sunday Afternoon," filmed by Paramount, was taken from his novel, "The Avenger."

Ochs Negotiating For Sale of Four Houses

Details of 51 Announced; 100 Single Reels Planned

Production, distribution and exhibition forces of Paramount Pictures, assembled in annual convention this week at the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles, officially ended the season of 1933-34—one of the most hectic in the history of the corporation—and launched the new motion picture year of 1934-35, confident that the long fight for complete economic rehabilitation soon will draw to a successful conclusion.

Five regional meetings have been scheduled as follows: June 25, San Francisco; Chicago, date not set; June 29-30, Atlanta; July 2-3, Washington; July 6, New York.

Everywhere about the convention chambers there appeared a new spirit as the management explained the manner in which its sales force in the field will merchandise 64 feature productions and 100 short subjects in the new season. The salesmen and their managers from the field, production officials from the studio nearby, and corporate and distribution executives on from New York heard outlined the details of 51 of the 64 pictures planned. Many already have been completed. Sixty-five features were on this season's schedule.

Emanuel Cohen delivered the highlight speech and then took all 200 delegates to his home for a reception Thursday evening, when the meeting adjourned.

"Thirty pictures out of 35 released the past eight months have not had a single cut made by the censors. The balance received very minor changes. We have gone a step further, bringing John Hammell right into the studio. He has my complete authority to eliminate anything he believes offensive.

Following the rollcall on Monday by G. B. J. Frawley, and the opening address by Sales Manager Neil Agnew, George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager addressed the 200 delegates on sales policies for 1934-35.

Mr. Schaefer explained that the new Paramount service contract will prohibit duals or ten-cent prices at theatres, or both practices, where their use by subsequent run houses is shown to injure prior runs.

Adolph Zukor, president, addressed the gathering at luncheon on Monday, expressing an optimistic note for the new season.

However, Sam Dembow, vice-president in charge of Paramount theatres, explained that admission prices have not increased correspondingly with the increase in theatre costs which have developed under the code.

Adolph Zukor sat in the center at the dais, surrounded by the chiefs from both studio and home office, including: George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager; Emanuel Cohen, vice-president in charge of production; Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager; Charles Reagan, western sales manager; J. J. Unger, eastern sales manager; Sam Dembow, Jr., vice-president in charge of theatres, and Robert F. Gillham, head of advertising and publicity.

Other officials in attendance were: John Hicks, Jr., vice-president of Paramount International, representing the foreign division; Lou Diamond, in charge of short subjects; Max Fleischer, short subject producer; Don Velde, advertising sales manager; Larry Flynn, in charge of transportation; Herman Lorber, assistant to Mr. Agnew; G. Knox Haddow, assistant to the late Stanley Waite; Arthur J. Dunne, assistant to Mr. Reagan; Fred Leroy and Jack Roper, statistical sales executives, and William Schneider, assistant to Mr. Schaefer. Louis Phillips represented the legal department of the New York headquarters.

Additional delegates from the foreign department included: Eugene Zukor; John C. Graham, in charge in Great Britain; Montague Goldman and Earl St. John, of London; Carl York, of Sweden; M. J. Messeri, of Spain; John Day, South America; J. E. Perkins, China; George Weltner and Albert Dean, of the home office foreign staff, and Phil Hyams, of the circuit in England.

Frank Freeman and Leon Netter, vice-president and head film buyer, respectively, of Famous Theatres, accompanied Mr. Dembow to the meeting as circuit representatives.

INDUSTRY MEETS CATHOLIC HIERARCHY TO TALK ABOUT "LEGION OF DECENCY"

National Codifying and Crystallizing of Movement Seen as First Concern of Church Committee's Session in Cincinnati

The first official facing of the problems between the motion picture industry and the Legion of Decency movement of the Catholic church came this week incident to a meeting beginning Wednesday evening in Cincinnati of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, with representatives of the industry in attendance, ready to present its proposals bearing on future production.

Other Bishops Represented

The gathering in Cincinnati includes also a considerable array, perhaps a dozen, of priests representing other bishops who will not be in personal attendance.

As the Episcopal committee went into its first session it appeared likely that its first concern would be a national codification and crystallization of the Legion of Decency movement. As reflected these several weeks in the daily press and dispatches to MOTION PICTURE HERALD, the campaign, consisting chiefly in asking Catholics to refrain from attendance at performances of objectionable pictures, and in some instances from all pictures until standards were admittedly improved, has been sporadic even though widespread, and somewhat variable in its nature and intensities in various regions and centers. A unified national program of application is expected to evolve in the course of the week's meetings.

The presentations of the industry representatives were to include a recitation of the decision made last week by the component member directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., otherwise "the Hays office," to reinforce and in substance re-create its internal machinery of self-regulation—with most significantly what appears a provision aimed at the divorce of Hollywood from the industry's own machinery of moral control of production.

Breen's Staff Reinforced

In essence the industry program is to continue, with reinforced staff, the activities of Joseph I. Breen, executive assistant to Mr. Hays in Hollywood, especially concerned with approval of scripts, stills and productions, to make the court of appeals from Breen decisions the board of directors of the AMPA in New York.

Hitherto the court of last resort has been in Hollywood in the organization of picture makers called merely "The Jury," made up of three members chosen by rotation from the list of the heads of the member studios.

The obvious purpose, or avowed purpose, of this elimination of Hollywood's "Jury" is to take the final decision away from executives who may any day be seeking a friendly ruling from three of their fellow picture makers.

This step constitutes the first expression of New York home office and distribution authority over Hollywood production, to be made in many, many years.

There appeared a probability that the Episcopal committee in Cincinnati would hear, consider and perhaps act upon plans within the church group for the setting up of a special Catholic organization of picture examination and approval for the purposes of the issuance of what might be called "white lists."

Cardinal Approves Plan For Massachusetts Boycott

In Boston, populous with Irish Catholics, a plan by which a far reaching boycott of objectionable films is to be made by Catholics in Massachusetts has been worked out and approved by Cardinal O'Connell. Provision is to be made in this plan for boycott of all product of large producers who make objectionable films, or to boycott theatres which show objectionable films by the independent producers. Provision is made for preview by a committee, at the request of a producer, of any film over which question might arise, and for reinstatement of the producer or theatre after a lapse of time. The Boston chapter of the American Federation of Actors is said to have pledged its support of the Catholic program.

Plans this week were under way for the formation of a central committee to pass on the merits of films as released. A producer whose product is boycotted for a month or more, it was said Tuesday, will find his pictures on the "not recommended list" for six months after conclusion of the boycott regardless of the quality of his product during this time.

Suggests Complete Boycott

In answer to requests that a "white" list of four-star pictures be published, the Catholic Telegraph, Cincinnati weekly, says: "The most effective campaign for better pictures is to remain away from all of them, whether good or bad, until those in control of the industry are willing to accede to the demands of the public. This will not be accomplished in a week or a month. Courage and persistency are needed to win the fight. When box office receipts drop, the motion picture theatre owners will protest, and protest vociferously, to the film producers."

Movement Reaches Tennessee

The Catholic movement against objectionable films will be extended to Tennessee this week. Bishop Alphonse Smith in Nashville has asked all Catholics in the state to sign the Legion of Decency pledges.

Pre-Censor Board Urged by Bishop

Creation of a three-member board composed of one Catholic, one Protestant and one Jew to pre-censor films at their source was urged Tuesday in Kansas City by Bishop John Joseph Cantwell of Los Angeles, Bishop Assistant to the Papal Throne, and official observer for the Catholic Legion of Decency. The Bishop urged this arrangement as a substitute for the preview organizations sponsored by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, which he branded as ineffectual because, he said, they are carried out by men answerable to the producers, and because decisions rendered by them may be appealed to producers themselves who would not want to uphold a ban of the MPPDA "since they may be in a similar fix themselves."

At the same time the first official Catholic anti-film action in the Kansas City territory was launched during the week by Bishop Tief at Concordia, Kan., in a letter to his parish priests asking for Legion of Decency pledges. He called for the organization of signature committees in each parish. Bishop Lillis of the Kansas City diocese is expected to take similar action shortly. Protestant denominations are said to be supporting the Catholic movement.

Baltimore "Sun" Supports Catholic Drive on Films

The Catholic campaign against indecent films is said to be assuming alarming proportions in Baltimore with the Baltimore Sun, powerful newspaper, aligning itself on the side of the church. Exhibitors in the Baltimore territory, nevertheless, report that any pressure of boycott resulting from the Catholic crusade has not yet been felt.

To date the campaign has been sponsored solely by the Catholics, although it is reported other faiths may join the movement within the next two weeks. The Baltimore Catholic Review will print a "blacklist" weekly of those pictures considered unfit and another of those approved. About 5,000 students have signed pledges that they will not attend pictures blacklisted. The MPTO of Maryland passed a resolution last week declaring the organization is an innocent victim of the block booking system and that they have absolutely no control over the type of pictures found objectionable and must accept without elimination all pictures now produced.

Chicago Hears Denunciation

The campaign against motion pictures penetrated through to the Chicago city council late last week when resolutions were introduced declaring that immoral films "upset the foundations of religion, undermine the work of the schools and depend for their popularity on the degradation of women."

Pope's Concern Over Films Is Cited in Vatican Letter

Papal Secretary, in Communication, Says Pius XI Desires Unity of Effort To Make Screen Serve for Moral Education

In a letter written for the Pope by the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Pacelli, to Canon Brohee, president of the Catholic International Cinematographic Office and Chaplain General of the Centre Catholique d'Action Cinematographique en Belgique, Pius XI expresses his interest in the positive influence of motion pictures and his concern over negative influences.

While the Pope has expressed his disapproval of the immoral aspects of motion pictures in general encyclicals in the past, this is believed to be his most extended and most direct reference on the subject. Extracts from the communication follow:

"The Catholics of all the countries of the world ought to make it a duty of conscience to concern themselves with this question, the importance of which is constantly growing.

"The cinema is going to become the greatest and most efficacious means of influence, more efficacious even than the press, for it is a fact that certain films have been seen by several million spectators.

Moral and Religious Harm Cited

"His Holiness desires to emphasize the urgency of this apostolate, in which all well-minded people should unite, co-ordinating their efforts, energies and activities to make this powerful modern means of diffusing ideas serve for the moral education of the people.

"Despite the measures taken by the public authorities of various countries, the Holy Father continues to receive from all sides allegations and denunciations of the moral and religious harm caused by cinema shows, which exercise an irresistible influence on a great part of humanity, but very particularly upon youth— truly a matter of concern for the future.

—Praise Good Films, Censure Bad

"The laudable efforts of legislators and men of learning, of parents and teachers who have to train the new generations to honest ways of living and thinking, are consequently in danger of being irremediably compromised by these frequent representations of an artificial and immoral life: the materialism which is there dominant is in itself a negation and a refusal of the supreme gifts communicated by Christianity, which are indispensable to the conservation and development of Christian civilization in the world. . . .

"The discoveries of science are the gifts of God, and must be used for the glory and the extension of His Kingdom. . . .

"It is highly desirable that organized Catholics should occupy themselves constantly with the cinema in their meetings for Catholic Action, in their programs of study, etc.

"It is equally important that all the Catholic papers should offer criticism of the cinema, praising good films and censuring the bad. . . .

"The Catholic International Cinematographic Office rightly seeks to secure the multiplication of large halls, equipped with modern improvements, and strongly intercoordinated, either for the presentation of instructional or recreational Catholic films, or by their demand for good films to induce film companies to provide them.

"Besides—and this, perhaps, is the essential object to drive at—the program of the C.I.C.O. conduces to arouse the energies of well-minded people to an understanding that, having by this coordination assured a very ample supply of good films, they will be able to devote themselves competently, after the necessary serious preparation, to the production of high-class films, and thereby to establish an enterprise which, while safeguarding good morals, and succeeding by their technical, artistic and human value, will materially benefit industry.

"The Holy Father ardently desires that in so salutary a work the C.I.C.O. will meet with a perfect understanding and a generous collaboration by the Catholics of the various nations, and very specially, as has been said, by the Catholic Action of the countries."

Philadelphia Showmen Feel Boycott Effects

The Catholic ban on objectionable films, which has the support of the Methodist Church in Philadelphia, has caused Philadelphia showmen no little concern.

Grosses in the downtown houses have been far below normal during the past two weeks, and while part of this slump is conceded to be seasonal, a large percentage of it has been attributed to the boycott. Theatres in strong Catholic parishes have felt very definite reactions, according to reports. On Tuesday the Presbyterian Church joined hands with Catholics and Methodists in the film boycott campaign.

Directors of the Philadelphia Federation of Churches on Tuesday approved the purposes of the Legion of Decency as announced recently by Cardinal Dougherty. They called upon all ministers of the city to urge church members to withdraw their support from motion pictures considered unwholesome.

Hartford Churches Agree

The Roman Catholic Church was commended for its activities against unwholesome films in a resolution adopted in Hartford, Conn., on Tuesday by the executive committee of the Hartford Federation of Churches. The resolution declared in part:

"We urge our members to cooperate in this movement. It is safe enough to stay away from pictures where advertising and news stories given out by the theatre promise an unwholesome appeal."

Methodist Group Joins Criticism

Off-color motion pictures were denounced this week as "enemies of God and society" by the Maryland conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, representing churches in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia at a meeting in Westminster, Md.

In Wilmington, Federal Judge John P. Nields, who has heard several important court cases affecting the motion picture industry, on Tuesday severely criticized motion pictures produced in America and exhibited in foreign countries giving false and distorted ideas of the manner in which the people of the United States live and their standards of morals. Speaking before a naturalization class in the United States district court at Wilmington, Judge Nields urged them to do all they can to arouse public opinion against this misrepresentation and to demand a reform of the evil and protect the good name of America.

Milwaukee Group Makes Block Booking Protest

Resolutions protesting against block booking and the "grossly inadequate" broadcasting time allotted to non-profit-making radio periods have been adopted by the League of Catholic Parent-Teacher Associations in Milwaukee. Indecent motion pictures were scored last week by Rev. S. A. Stritch, D. D., Archibishop of the Milwaukee diocese, while in Beloit, Wis., to confirm 300 persons at the three Catholic churches in that city.

"We know high calibre films can be produced," he said, "so why is it impossible that pictures of a fine type cannot be the complete program? Motion pictures have a tremendous influence. They leave impressions that affect the majority of those who witness them."

Showmen Ask Help of Martin

Forty independent motion picture exhibitors in small Catholic-populated towns throughout Nebraska and Iowa have besieged Lester Martin, Allied leader, with entreaties to do something about the Catholic boycott now in full swing in the territory. Baseball, beer garden and dance hall receipts are said to have jumped as much as 40 per cent since the Catholics started their drive in the territory.

Hits Business Girl Films

Speaking before the Better Films Committee of the Louisiana Cooperative Educational Association, New Orleans, last week, Miss Ethel Ryan, past president of the New Orleans Business and Professional Women's club, declared that young girls get erroneous ideas of a business girl's life from many motion pictures. "We should encourage pictures that give a truer picture of life," she said.

RUSSIA SOLVES CONTINUOUS SHOW PROBLEM BY CLOSING THE DOORS

There's No Guesswork in Number of Pictures, Allotment of Raw Stock from Government Deciding, Say Returned Pair

There Are No Stars, and Today's Lead May Be Tomorrow's Extra; Five Film Trusts Do All the Producing, Too

By VICTOR SHAPIRO
Hollywood Correspondent

Helmer Bergman and Henry McCarty, whose firsthand observations on matters cinematic in the land of the Soviets are recorded by Mr. Shapiro in the accompanying article, are both Hollywood product.

Mr. Bergman, sound engineer, rightfully may be called a film veteran, having served with Kalem, Vitagraph and Lasky from "props" to writing and directing, and as sound engineer with Metropolitan Studios.

Mr. McCarty, screen writer, has written for Joe E. Brown and others, and directed "The Carnation Kid" with Douglas MacLean.

Returning from a world tour and a side jaunt into the film fastnesses of Soviet Russia, Helmer Bergman, Hollywood sound engineer, and Henry McCarty, Hollywood screen writer, bring back the startling information to American showmen that picture patrons there never see films back-end-to in any theatre, because no one is admitted after a picture starts.

Seated in Levy's, a bourgeoisie-capitalist restaurant on Vine street, without vodka or tea and lemon to unloose the flow of thought, Bergman and McCarty made shrewd observation of Russian film exhibition and production, interpersing comment with kindly anecdote of the Ogpu and the proletariat.

30,000 Theatres, 3,500 Wired

According to these two travelers, there are about 30,000 picture theatres in the U.S.S.R. Of these, about 3,500 are wired.

Five film trusts produce all the silent and sound films, and by their vertical cartel organization, distribute their films and also control exhibition. The five companies are Meshrobpom, Sov Kino, Leningrad Kino, Tiflis Kino and Kiev Kino, located in the five different cities.

Approximately 100 sound features are produced by these five trusts in a year, and about 300 sound shorts, exclusive of newsreels and what the Soviets call "Topicals," an overlong one-subject newsreel.

Looking over the theatre situation, Bergman and McCarty delved into the first-run Main Street situation in Moscow, Leningrad, Rostof on Don, Kharkof and Kiev, cities having populations running from about a million up to four millions.

First-run theatres in these cities are newly built, modernistic in design and up-to-date in equipment. Four performances are presented, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. Each show runs about two hours and is patterned somewhat after American shows with a feature, newsreel, travelogue or cartoon comedy, on the bill.

All seats are reserved for each performance. Tickets are purchased a day in advance. Best seats are 75 kopecks down to 40 kopecks. There are no ticket speculators in Russia. After a show starts at the specified hour, the doors are closed and no one is admitted. The idea of seeing a film from start to finish as the producer intended it be viewed works splendidly and the public is pleased.

Early arrivals or late comers have at their disposal the divertisements of a large foyer in which they can relax. Soft drinks, candy, cakes, and so on, are sold in stalls. Books, magazines and newspapers are available, games of checkers and chess are in another section

While all this is going on, an orchestra plays on a balcony, and in another portion of the foyer a lecturer explains what the current film is all about.

The sound employed, similar to the Radio system, is "a rotating modulator showing both sides of wave band in variable area."

Easy for Advertising Men

Advertising men have an easy time of it in Soviet theatres. All they have to do is put up the lobby photos and posters, and take one column, half inch space in the newspapers, announcing the attraction and the hours of showing and the name of the theatre.

Russia, according to our informants, is a theatre-loving film-attending nation, with opera houses provided and with opera art rated among the best in the world.

In films, however, the Soviets have no stars. A star of a picture today is tomorrow's extra. Producers seek to cast their productions to make the talents of the personality fit the story, character and plot, and not vice versa as is done in most other countries where the star system has evolved.

The number of films produced a year under the Soviet plan is not a matter of guess work or shuffling of cards. Curtailment is not a problem. The five Film Trusts are automatically limited in quantity output by the simple expedient of limiting the amount of raw stock allotted to them. Each of the five Film Trusts receives from Intorg Kino about twenty-five million feet of positive and negative film for all their needs for the year.

Plan According to Raw Stock

Having received their allotment of raw stock for the year, each of the five Film Trusts proceeds to plan its production schedule.

All the writers, directors, heads of departments and workers who so desire, submit outlines for picture material.

It may be the Subway in Moscow, the Arctic Exploration, Turkestan, Collective Farming, National Minorities, Kulaks, Gold Mining, Young Pioneers, Workers in the Cities versus Workers in the Country.

After subjects are selected from outlines submitted, directors apply for those vehicles they feel they can best make. With a writer, the director toils on the script. A representative of the Polit Bureau reads it at completion, much in the same way as our Production Code Committee operates.

Having passed from writer-director-politico, a Soviet script is then read to the entire organization. Suggestions are in order from lowest to highest.

With suggestions incorporated, the picture is budgeted, clocked for time of running and footage. Vital in this process is the desire to save raw stock.

Anyone May Be Starred

After all these preliminaries, shooting starts. Directors, who are also trained cameramen, are not permitted to deviate from final okayed script. Soviet producers could not understand the five to fifty "takes" common in American production. Raw stock to them is too valuable for "retakes"; besides raw stock base is also used for explosives, which may or may not have a bearing on allotment of film stock.

Organization of the film industry finds at its head the Communist Central Committee. From there, it branches in two parts—one, the Bureau of Light Industry, and the other the Bureau of Education. Both of these pipeline into Intorg Kino, the financial and technical agency. From Intorg Kino stem the five Film Trusts named. From each film trust operate the production staff, distribution machinery and theatres, all three trust-owned.

Intorg Kino advances moneys to each film trust with which to operate. Pictures play theatres on percentage. If the total amount collected from a film after it plays the theatres is more than the cost of production, that surplus (profit is unknown in Russia) goes to Intorg Kino.

All workers in the film industry receive free medical service, hospitalization, dental work and old age pensions. If a film employee absorbs too much vodka and becomes obstreperous, he is not taken to a hoosegow and fined. Instead, the Ogpu bring him to the Town Club, place a chain and tag on his wrist with a number, give him a turkish bath, shave and haircut and put him to bed. In the meantime, his clothes, tagged with the same wrist number, are pressed and his linen laundered. In the morning, he pays the cost of these hotel expenses and is freed.

Promises New Color Development

John Hay Whitney's first Pioneer color picture made with a new three-color Technicolor system will serve as a test reel for color expansion planned by Radio during 1934-35. The Cooper production of "Pompeii" has been tentatively set for filming with the new process, which utilizes three rolls of film, photographed simultaneously, as against two rolls formerly employed. By this tri-process, it was explained, are photographically blended from the three prime colors—red, yellow and blue—"thousands of varying shades."

The delegates were also told that a $500,000 building program will be carried out at the studios in Hollywood,

THE MERRY WIDOW

Waltz down your aisles and vision your packed theatre spell-bound as MAURICE CHEVALIER with delicious gayety flirts, sings, conquers the rich and merry widow, exquisitely portrayed by JEANETTE MacDONALD. ERNST LUBITSCH,* sly maestro of love's magic, makes a glorious screen holiday of this beloved romance, now at last on the talking screen. Its vivacious Franz Lehar melodies are brought to audiences by six different symphony orchestras. Additional cast names are: Edward Everett Horton, Una Merkel, George Barbier, Minna Gombell. And the genius of Thalberg guides it to glory!

DAVID COPPERFIELD

1934-35 will be known as "The year of David Copperfield!" The heart of humanity beat faster when the news was flashed that M-G-M would bring its unlimited resources of talent and physical equipment to the production of Charles Dickens' beautiful soul-stirring novel. A special trip abroad was made by Producer David O. Selznick with director George Cukor (he made "Little Women!") and Howard Estabrook, scenarist. Thousands of tests were made of characters, architectural details copied and research such as no picture ever enjoyed has been under way for months here and abroad. A cast of sixty-eight characters will bristle with big names! A final master stroke was the signing of Hugh Walpole, noted author and Dickens authority, to lend counsel during the filming. A monumental enterprise is under way. Only M-G M could attempt it!

THE GOOD EARTH

No other story property, whether a novel or stage play, was ever so desired by all producers! M-G-M is honored to be the means whereby Pearl S. Buck's thrilling novel is to be brought to the screen. It is an honor because "The Good Earth" is the most widely read book of our times . . . an obligation to far-flung millions whose heart-throbs, smiles and tears were showered on its unforgettable pages. Such humanity-in-fiction requires the unmatchable production genius of a Thalberg, the screen-writing talents of a Frances Marion, the directorial flair of a George Hill (a combination that gave you "The Big House" and "Min and Bill"). For four months Director Hill and a huge staff traveled in little known parts of China, accumulating materials, backgrounds, facts . . . to make this heart-drama real, vibrant, true!

CHAINED

It is an occasion for dancing in the streets when JOAN CRAWFORD and CLARK GABLE unite their magnetic personalities to tell a screen story of glamor and allure! Picture audiences recalling with delight the romantic sweep of "Dancing Lady" will be there when you announce their new co-starring love story. The director is Clarence Brown who guided these two stars to triumph in "Possessed." He also directed "Sadie McKee" and "Letty Lynton" among many others. In the cast are Otto Kruger, and Stuart Erwin. Hunt Stromberg is the showman-producer!

THE BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET

NORMA SHEARER'S popularity, heightened by absence, flamed into box-office brilliance in "Riptide"... but that was just the beginning! A vehicle that most nearly approximates the tenderness of "Smilin' Through" is that romance which has given Broadway its most glorious stage thrill of the decade "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." NORMA SHEARER and FREDRIC MARCH* (weren't they incomparable in "Smilin' Through"!) are the Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning of the stage hit. CHARLES LAUGHTON,* Academy Prize Winner, star of "Henry the VIII" has come from abroad especially for this picture! Sidney Franklin of "Smilin' Through" fame is the director. Thalberg is producer! What a screen audience awaits this biggest stage hit of 15 years which played Broadway for two solid seasons and presold America with two unbroken years on the road!

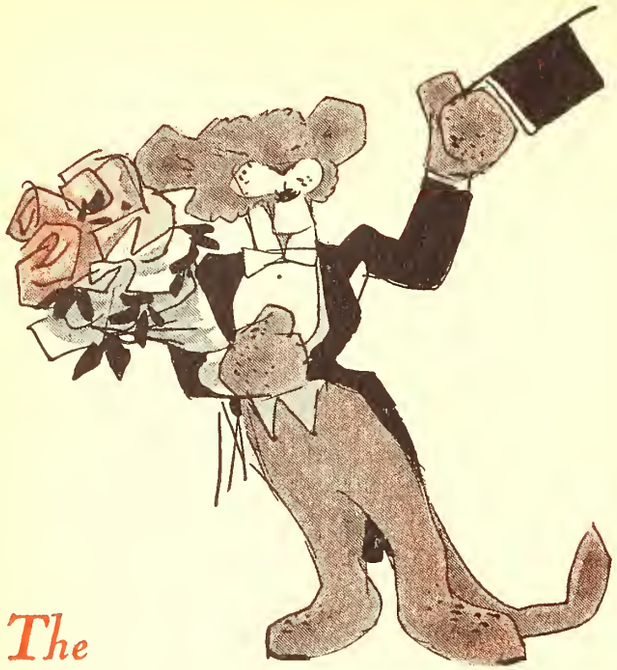
MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY

CLARK GABLE, WALLACE BEERY, ROBERT MONTGOMERY head the pageant of box-office stars who are making an entertainment that will rank at the very top of next season's amusement calendar! The popular appeal of "Mutiny on the Bounty" is reflected in its long listing as best-seller and its subsequent serial story fame in the Hearst newspapers. Frank Lloyd will direct this mighty romantic spectacle. Thalberg is producer.



MARIE ANTOINETTE

Why did M-G-M purchase this many-editioned best-seller by Stefan Zweig as a starring vehicle for NORMA SHEARER? Because no book of recent years gave its public such a soul-thrill! Because this book tells Marie's queenly story with new sympathy ... not that of the baby doll queen, but the youthful beauty starved of her rightful heritage of love ... seeking in profligate grandeur an outlet for heart-hunger ... finding romance in one of the deathless devotions of history! Because this book gives CHARLES LAUGHTON a role equal to his brilliant "Henry the VIII"... because this book gives HERBERT MARSHALL* opportunity for his most appealing charms. Three big stars! A production of magnificence unparalleled in talkies! Thalberg is producer.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA

It has been the privilege of M-G-M to immortalize famed musical comedies and operettas ... most recently "Cat and the Fiddle"... and notably next season's "The Merry Widow." How fitting that M-G-M selects Victor Herbert's deathless love songs in "Naughty Marietta" for the singing star JEANETTE MacDONALD who with handsome operatic-favorite NELSON EDDY brings this drama of Old New Orleans to the screen. "Ah—Sweet Mystery of Life" and "I'm Falling In Love With Some One"... typical songs of infinite heart-thrill! Robert Z. Leonard is director. Hunt Stromberg is producer.

PARAMOUNT CASH STATUS BETTERED BY $1,152,356 LAST NINE MONTHS

Fourth Statement on Financial Status Shows Total Cash Receipts $2,244,747 to June 9; Reorganization Progresses

The trustees in bankruptcy of the Paramount Publix Corporation on Saturday filed with Referee John E. Joyce their fourth report on the corporation's financial status. The highlight of the report was that Paramount's cash position has improved by $1,152,356 during the nine months ended June 9.

While the financial and corporate officials at the home office in New York were progressing in steps which ultimately will lead to a reorganization plan for the company, Paramount's distribution executives and branch managers and salesmen from the field were gathered in annual convention in Los Angeles outlining Paramount's 1934-35 merchandising campaigns and new product line-up. Convention details appear on page 11.

Total cash receipts reported by the trustees in their accounting to the referee for the nine-months period aggregated $2,244,747, with disbursements amounting to $1,092,391, which, with a cash balance of $2,074,480 as of September 30, 1933, gives the company a cash position of $3,226,836 as of June 9.

Disbursements totaling $979,504 represented advances to subsidiaries, with Famous Theatres Corporation, new theatre holding company, drawing $300,000; Lares Theatre Corporation, also a holding company, drew $122,979; Strand Leasing Corporation, $128,670; Seneca Realty Corporation, $185,287; Holston Enterprises, $148,405. Holston is engaged in acquisition of claims against Tennessee Enterprises, bankrupt theatre subsidiary of Famous.

Report on Subsidiaries

The trustees reported on reorganizations of Publix Enterprises, the assets of which were acquired by Famous for $1,800,000 last December; the Saenger Theatres and Saenger Realty reorganization plans, which are scheduled to be passed at a hearing before Referee Joyce, June 21; the G. B. Theatres Corporation, New England subsidiary, to be operated by Goldstein Brothers under a partnership arrangement; Dent Theatres, Inc., being operated by Karl Hoblitzelle on a partnership deal with Texas Consolidated Theatres; the Fox West Coast leasing arrangements on Pacific Coast theatres recently affirmed by the federal court in New York, and progress on the reorganization plan for Tennessee Enterprises. Under this plan, the report states, $415,000 of a $435,000 bond issue outstanding has been acquired by Holston Enterprises, organized for the purpose.

The trustees also reported on the agreement reached with bondholders on the Paramount Building, under which the existing 5½ per cent bonds, maturing January 1, 1951, will be exchanged for new 20-year bonds at reduced interest rates, in return for which the bondholders withdraw their $178,543,000 claim against Paramount Publix.

Also reviewed are agreements reached with mortgagees on property held by Seneca Holding Corporation, which include agreements not to foreclose on the Criterion and New York theatre properties in Times Square, on which a $4,000,000 mortgage has been defaulted; the Astoria, L. I., studio on which there is an unpaid mortgage of $930,000, held by the Prudence Company, and lesser mortgages on other plots.

The report states that negotiations for a revision of terms on a $2,900,000 serial bond issue on the Paramount West Coast studio have not resulted in any satisfactory plan of adjustment.

The report further states that nearly $18,000,000 of claims contested by the trustees have been expunged, withdrawn or reduced, and that $33,000,000 of claims to which objections have been filed are still pending.

Working on Reorganization

The report concludes by saying that in connection with the reorganization plan for Paramount being developed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in conjunction with company bondholders, the trustees are now furnishing information to the bondholders' committee.

Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, the trustees, were named temporary trustees of the company under the new federal bankruptcy laws by Judge Alfred C. Coxe in United States district court, New York, on Saturday. The temporary appointment was made at a hearing on the bondholders' petition, filed June 7, asking for reorganization of the company under the new bankruptcy laws. On July 10, at a creditors' hearing before Judge Coxe, the appointments probably will be made permanent. Pending that ratification all corporate matters will be held up.

New Seattle Firm Opens

Zell, founders of the Northwest Sound Films Company, are the owners. R. E. Gunn, former manager of the National Theatre Supply Company Chicago office, is president.

Hamrick House Drops Price

A decrease of five cents, to 50 cents including tax, was made effective in John Hamrick's Music Hall theatre, Seattle, last week. The house opened three weeks ago with a first run film policy at a 40-cent top. The following week an increase to 55 cents was affected.

Tupper Guild Editor

Tristram Tupper, Monogram scenario editor, and secretary of the Screen Writers' Guild on the Coast, will edit the new Guild monthly magazine. Associates will be Brian Marlowe, Joel Sayre, Wilfred McDonald.

Opposition Group Set in Philadelphia

B. M. Golder was named president of the newly organized Independent Exhibitors' Protective Association at the initial open meeting of the group in Philadelphia early this week. Mr. Golder was elected for a period of six months, with Morris Nemez named treasurer and Morris Wax chairman of the board. Resolutions were passed condemning salacious pictures and asking producers to eliminate them.

Lewen Pizor, president and last week elected chairman of the board of the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, in a circular to members, issued last week, made sharp reply to recent attacks by the Protective Association, which is composed for the most part of former members of the MPTO. Mr. Pizor declared, with reference to the association: "others of them have selfish, personal motives, and still others desire to become officers of the MPTO, but are not wanted by the rank and file." He described them as "mischief makers who have definitely decided that unless they can control our organization they will wreck it."

At a recent open meeting of the MPTO, the irreconcilability of the two organizations as they are now constituted was indicated. At a meeting this week MPTO members will be given an opportunity to vote on election of a new slate of officers and withdrawal of the organization from the MPTOA.

Sidney Samuelson, president of Allied States, in an address before the Independent Protective group, declared Allied would welcome the new association if it is without affiliates and not a "decoy duck for the enemy." He condemned blind booking, and blamed "dirty commercial methods" for conditions.

Color Pictures Liquidation

Stockholders of Color Pictures, Inc., in process of liquidation, are receiving two shares of Technicolor, Inc., for each five shares of Color Pictures and 60 cents for each one share at the Bank of the Manhattan Company, New York, since May 16. A receipt entitling the shareholder to a pro-rata share in the liquidation of the remaining assets is also being given.

MOTION IS IGNORED, SAYS FRENCH PRODUCER

Charles H. David, Managing Director of Pathe-Natan Studios at Joinville, Declares Public Is Tired of Dubbed Films

The motion picture industry has forgotten the art of motion since the inception of sound and producers the world over have been relying too completely upon the dubbing process for the success of their pictures abroad, in the opinion of Charles H. David, managing director of the Pathe-Natan Studios, Paris, or, to be precise, Joinville, which is just outside of Paris. M. David is in New York on a "tour d'inspection."

"Dialogue has come closer to ruining a great art than any other factor, and the camera has become subservient to it," the young French producer charged. "Look what René Clair did with 'Sous Les Toits de Paris'—not a single unnecessary line of dialogue in the picture, and if the whole sound track had been run together it probably would not have lasted more than 15 minutes at the outside."

It was M. David's contention that pictures of this type, in which the camera tells the story, could be as successful in foreign countries as domestically. He pointed out that in the case of the Clair masterpiece no dubbing or even superimposing of titles in English was necessary.

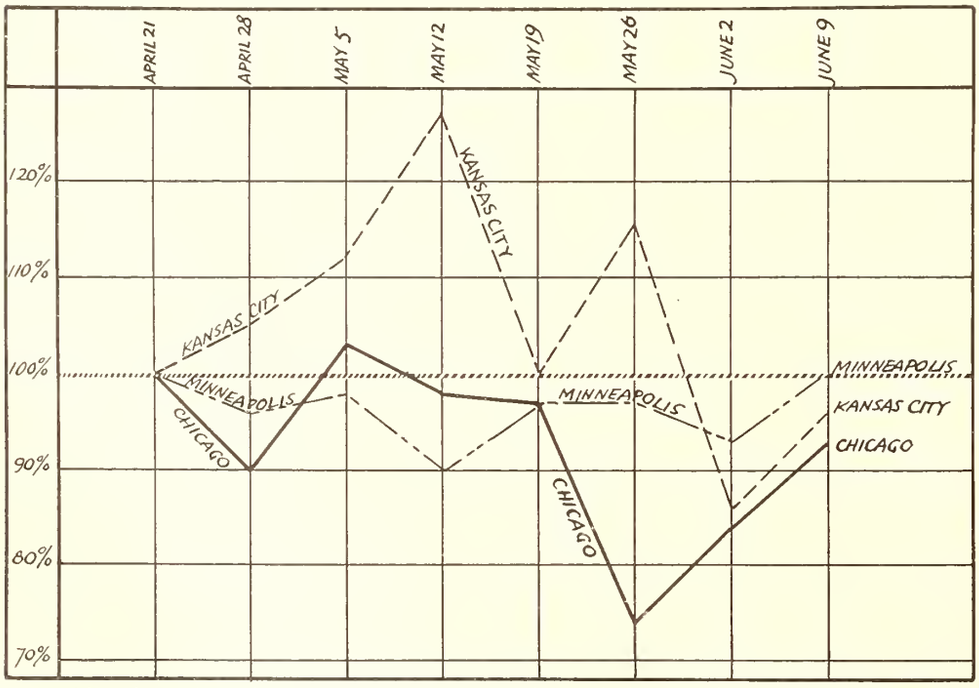
Calls Dubbing Unsatisfactory

"Any farmer in what you call 'the sticks' could have understood the story," he said. "Dubbing is, on the whole, a most unsatisfactory method of making a foreign language film acceptable to other foreigners and I know that in France, at least, the public is very, very tired of these dubbed films. They would much prefer to see a picture in the original version."

The only alternative to this, as M. David saw it, is for producers to make foreign language and native versions coincidentally, although producers say the market is not sufficiently large to warrant the expense.

The French public, he said, will support the better type American product, mentioning such films as "I Am a Fugitive" and the Mae West pictures.

"These films are mostly dubbed," he said, "but at least in the case of 'I Am a Fugitive' the story was so powerful it did not matter. But Mae West cannot be dubbed successfully—those things which make her so fascinating miss completely in the dubbing."



Plans 16 Features

Pathe-Natan will make 16 feature pictures on its 1934-35 schedule and among them will be one Rene Clair picture, "Le Dernier Milliardaire." Others on the list include "Les Miserables," from the book by Victor Hugo, and "Amok," by Feodor Ozep. M. David brought prints of these three pictures with him to New York.

Three other pictures set for the new season by the French company are "Tatarin de Tarascon," by Alphonse Daudet; "Mademoiselle Docteur," a story based on the career of the famous war-time German spy, and "Equipage," an aviation story.

Production costs in France average between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 francs, or $100,000 to $150,000, the production executive said. In 1933 there were 572 feature pictures on the French market of which 423 were foreign made. Of these, there were 230 American films and 34 British. At the same time, 17 French pictures found their way into the United States in 1933 as against 24 British films. Out of 572 features in the French market last year, there were, therefore, only 150 French pictures.

Accompanying M. David to this country was Bernard Natan, head of Pathe-Natan, who left New York immediately for Hollywood. M. David will join him there next week, after which they will return to New York en route for France.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the business done in each of three Midwestern key cities during the eight-weeks period from April 21 to June 9, 1934. In each city, the gross for the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent for that city.

RKO Realignment Approved by Court

Radio-Keith-Orpheum's petition for reorganization under the new federal bankruptcy laws has been approved by Judge Alfred C. Coxe in United States district court, New York, and the Irving Trust Company, receiver for the company, is being continued in its administrative capacity pending the creditors' hearing, which has been set for June 26.

In Baltimore, a petition similar to that filed in New York for RKO reorganization under the bankruptcy laws was filed in United States district court last week by a group of RKO bondholder creditors. RKO is expected to file an answer to the bondholders' petition some time this week.

Paramount Adds Two New Buildings at Coast Plant

Two additional buildings are now in process of construction at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, making four new major buildings under way. One of these two is a title printing laboratory, and the other a new wing for the process stage.

Already under construction are a combined dressing room and executive office structure, three stories high, and a large one-story bungalow at Irving and Marathon streets to house the publicity, mailing, art and foreign departments.

Loew's To Take Over Poli Circuit in Fall

Loew's will not take over actual operation of the Poli circuit of 18 New England theatres until the fall, company headquarters in New York announced late last week. Harry Shaw, former Loew manager in Syracuse, has been named assistant general manager to Louis M. Sagal.

Loew is supervising operation and Mr. Sagal periodically is engaged in conferences in New York relative to operation of the circuit.

Warner Club Outing Held at Bear Mountain

The annual boat ride and outing of the Warner Club, organization of home office employees, was held on Wednesday of this week, with approximately 1,500 employees and guests in attendance. The party sailed to Bear Mountain where the outing was held. Harold Rodner and Irving Birnbaum handled details of the affair.

I'M SORE!

On every side I hear the demand for "better" motion pictures.

I do everything in my power to get the producers to make "better" pictures. That's part of my job.

The producers are making "better" pictures . . . Yet when one of them comes along, the public has a perverse way of showing their appreciation by lack of good attendance.

What I want to know is . . . where are all these people who are always demanding that the movies get away from sex and crime and "hokum" and all the rest of what these self-appointed critics of the movies criticize most?

If you self-appointed critics have attended the Uptown theater this week to see "Change of Hearts," your criticisms were answered, and you enjoyed as fine a piece of screen entertainment as ever ran through a projection machine.

If you have not been here . . . and you really do want what you ask for . . . you will go out singing the glad tidings in such loud and joyous tones that the theater will not be able to handle the crowds. That's the only way we have of knowing your desires.

You have just two days more to see this picture which answers your demand for a better screen entertainment. It leaves Friday night.

Stanley K. Chambers

Manager Uptown Theater.

Above is a reproduction of the advertisement with which Mr. Chambers took to task those who ask for "better" films, but would not attend one when he had it for them.

Urges Protestants Join Drive

American Protestants should unite with the Roman Catholics in their efforts to elevate the standard of the motion pictures of the country, the Rev. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale said in his sermon Sunday at the Marble Collegiate Church, on Fifth Avenue, New York. "We are becoming increasingly suspicious that the motion picture industry is making no real effort to provide more wholesome entertainment," he said.

Civic Union Extends Drive

The Civic Union has decided to extend its campaign against indecent motion pictures with new chapters in the South and East, according to its president, Rev. Theodore Graebner of Concordia Seminary in Clayton, Mo. New chapters are to be organized at various points in the South and in the East. The organization demands national censorship of films, to be applied at the studio.

4,500 Sign in Youngstown

Pledges to stay away "from all movies except those which do not offend decency and Christian morality" have been signed by more than 4,500 Catholics in Youngstown, Ohio, and thousands more are expected to sign.

St. Louis Church in Campaign

The Emmaus Lutheran Aid Society of the Emmaus Lutheran Church, St. Louis, has adopted a resolution calling upon its membership to refrain from attending immoral motion pictures.

UPLIFTERS BERATED FOR IGNORING "BETTER" FILM

Stanley Chambers, Fox Kansas City Manager, Buys Space to Hit at Advocates of Cleaner Screen Who Missed Picture

Stanley Chambers, manager of the Fox Uptown in Kansas City bought extra space in the Kansas City Star last week to tell the screen uplifters, over his signature, what he thought of them for not patronizing "Change of Heart," a Fox film, which, he claimed, meets every requirement of those who would elevate film standards.

Chambers aimed his appeal at the crusaders for a cleaner screen, and had in mind specifically the presence in Kansas City of some 4,000 "social minded" delegates to the National Conference of Social Work, where some of the sessions were devoted to striking at the industry. Though the picture was scheduled to leave the Uptown the day after the ad appeared, it was held over four days.

Says: "I'm Sore!"

Under the large, black heading "I'm Sore!," Chambers told the reformers: "On every side I hear the demand for 'better' motion pictures.

"I do everything in my power to get the producers to make 'better' pictures. That's part of my job.

"The producers are making 'better' pictures. . . . Yet when one of them comes along, the public has a perverse way of showing their appreciation by lack of good attendance.

"What I want to know is . . . where are all these people who are always demanding that the movies get away from sex and crime and 'hokum' and all the rest of what these self-appointed critics of the movies criticize most?

Criticisms Were Answered

"If you self-appointed critics have attended the Uptown theatre this week to see 'Change of Heart,' your criticisms were answered, and you enjoyed as fine a piece of screen entertainment as ever ran through a projection machine.

"If you have not been here . . . and you really do want what you ask for . . . you will go out singing the glad tidings in such loud and joyous tones that the theatre will not be able to handle the crowds. That's the only way we have of knowing your desires.

Lee Analyzes Decency Drive

Arthur A. Lee, vice-president of Gaumont British Picture Corporation of America, in New York, declared this week that the drive for clean pictures now being carried forward is merely a more emphatic expression than before of a demand for entertainment acceptable to the entire family.

Two Elected to Research Board

Arthur Butler Graham, New York attorney, last week was elected to membership in the national board of the Motion Picture Research Council. Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, Jr., chairman of the Council's New York chapter, also was elected to the board.

Mr. Graham, counsel for Edward Quittner in his anti-monopoly suit against several large distributors, which is scheduled to come up before the New York appellate court early next autumn, will direct a Council study of the trade practices of the motion picture industry.

A research committee has been appointed to work with Mr. Graham and advise him. This committee consists of Dr. Wesley Clair Mitchell, Dr. Ben D. Wood, Dr. Frederick M. Thrasher and Dr. Paul Cressey. Dr. Mitchell is professor of economics at Columbia University and has been chairman of many research projects. Dr. Wood is director of collegiate research at Columbia and professors Thrasher and Cressey are sociologists at New York University. This committee will be enlarged as the work proceeds.

At the meeting at which Mr. Graham and Mrs. Parsons were elected to the board, the Council completed organization following the recent filing of its certificate of incorporation and adopted by-laws. It was represented in the incorporation by Nicholas Kelley of the law firm of Larkin, Rathbone & Perry of 170 Broadway, New York.

Minister Indicts Films, Leaves Before Refutation

"The crimes of the nation can be laid at the door of motion pictures," declared Dr. Jesse Baird, Presbyterian minister, speaking before 500 representatives of Better Films groups of northern California last week at the East Bay Motion Picture Council meeting in Oakland. "Films," said Dr. Baird, "are ruining youth, undermining and plundering their morals." They "always show up ministers as sort of saps and weaklings."

Mrs. Hulda McGinn, secretary-manager of the California Theatres Association, immediately rose to refute the minister's statements, but Dr. Baird hurriedly left as she began to speak. She denied his charges, declaring the motion picture industry is one of the few which cooperates with the public and has cooperated with every national organization.

GERMAN COMPOSERS WIN ROYALTY ON MUSIC PLAYED IN THEATRES

Agreement, Retroactive to April 1, Calls for Charges Ranging from 22 to 35 Cents a Seat; 16mm. Agreement

By J. K. RUTENBERG
Berlin Correspondent

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German Minister for Public Enlightenment and Propaganda, has adopted an agreement between the German Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Society for the Exploitation of Musical Rights (Stagma), which regulates performing rights and guarantees the music author a constant revenue from the reproduction of his works in cinema halls. The agreement is retroactive to April 1, 1934.

It was on April 5, 1933, that the Supreme Court of Germany acknowledged the obligation of the exhibitors to pay royalties for the reproduction of copyright music. Now, from April 1, 1934, German exhibitors throughout the country must communicate with the Stagma for stipulation of their royalties. The calculation, based on the number of seats, ranges between 90 pfennigs (22 cents at par) and 1.30 marks (35 cents at par) per seat and year. Exhibitors, therefore, must sign individual contracts with the authors' Society. These contracts will be placed before the Film Credit Bank which acts as the official representative of the State Film Chamber and collects the royalties.

The tariff for the exhibitors is as follows:

Seating Capacity	Reichsmarks
Above 1,000 seats	1.30
601 to 1,000 seats	1.20
401 to 600 seats	1.05
201 to 400 seats	0.95
Up to 200 seats	0.90

For those exhibitors who play films only once a week the charges will be reduced 50 per cent.

This agreement was signed by the president of the State Chamber for Culture, the president of the State Film Chamber and the president of the State Chamber for Music. Moreover, the contract bears the signatures of the German Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, the Film Credit Bank, the Society of musical authors and composers.

In order to made the first months of operation of the contract more agreeable for the exhibitors, a slight reduction has been granted in the various classifications.

16mm. Film Standard Adopted

For the period between April 1, 1934, and June 30, 1934, a reduction of 9 per cent will be effective, for the next three months a rebate of 6 per cent and for the last three months of this year a reduction of three per cent. From the first day of the next year, however, the tariff will be effective in its original form.

The Baden-Baden conference on 16 mm. film standards brought a far-reaching international understanding among the countries represented, though reports from London indicate that there is not complete unanimity on the decision in England.

After nine years of difficulties and fruitless negotiations, the representatives of Germany, France, Italy, England and the United States voted in favor of the German film standard. Some minor questions will be brought before the International Institute of Educational Cinematography in Rome. The official representatives of this institute and the technical and legal commissions will meet June 25, at Stresa, Italy, for formal affirmation of adoption of the German standard.

Two days before the end of the Baden-Baden conference, the British Kinematograph Society, in cooperation with the British Film Institute, had adopted the German film standard and the Gaumont-British company had started manufacturing reproducing sets and films on a large scale. The negative votes of Pathé and RCA Photophone in England were overruled.

Canty Returns to Berlin

George R. Canty, U. S. Trade Commissioner for Film Affairs in Europe, who has been away from Berlin for almost four months, dividing his time mostly between Warsaw and Prague, has returned to his Berlin post. Asked concerning his impression of the Czechoslovakian market, he told me that the American film companies never will accept the stipulation under which they are compelled by law to produce pictures in this country in proportion to the films imported. The question of a 1:10 or a 1:12 kontingent and an import license of 18,000 Czech crowns per film imported was considered not so important as the production requirement.

250 Teaching Films in Year

According to an official compilation 250 socalled teaching films were produced in Germany between April 1, 1933, and April 1, 1934, with 77 companies participating in this production. As reported some weeks ago, 50 of these films were financed by the German Film Credit Bank. The list of producers is headed by Ufa, with 28 films at a total length of 11,794 meters. Second are Hubert Schonger Company with 19 films (10,703 meters) and Cabinet Film Company with 19 (6,716 meters).

Czech Credit Bank in Operation

The latest country to create a state-supported Film Credit Bank is Czechoslovakia. The first steps in this direction were reported some months ago. At the general meeting of the Altstädter Sparkasse G.m.b. H. (Altstädt Saving Banks Limited), establishment of a provisional department for the financing of films was discussed. The purpose of this institute shall be the elaboration of plans which might lead to establishment of a body similar to that existing in Germany since July 1, 1933. Members of the Central organization of Czechoslovakian exhibitors entered the board of the Saving Banks, Ltd.

Hal Skelly, Stage, Screen Star, Dead

Hal Skelly, who will long be remembered where the lore of the stage is viewed and reviewed, for his portrayal of the role of Skid in the comedy-drama, "Burlesque," which later was filmed, was instantly killed late last week when a small truck he was driving was demolished by a Pittsfield-New York train near West Cornwall, Conn. He was 43 years old. Visiting with his wife on the estate of Major Merwin K. Lee, a friend, Mr. Skelly went in search of a lost dog, accompanied by Helen Bell, housekeeper. Returning, the truck apparently stalled as the train approached at great speed. Miss Bell was seriously injured.

The biggest hit of the Skelly career came in 1927, when, as the putty-nosed burlesque comic, Skid, he displayed a talent which brought him immediate and lasting fame. With him in that play, which ran a full season on Broadway, was Barbara Stanwyck, who went from there to stardom on the screen. "Burlesque" was produced by Paramount as "The Dance of Life," with Mr. Skelly again as Skid and Nancy Carroll in the Stanwyck role. "Behind the Makeup," "Men Are Like That" and "The Struggle" were other films in which he appeared.

Born Joseph Harold Skelly, in Allegheny, Pa., Hal began a theatrical career at the age of 15, via a traveling circus. Musical comedy, vaudeville, the circus again, the Broadway stage, were all a part of the career which was interrupted only twice, once when he had a tryout with the Boston Braves at first base, again to try his hand at prize fight management. Then the call of the stage had its way definitely and Mr. Skelly ceased straying from the footlit path. His first Broadway part came in 1918, in "Fiddlers Three," after an engagement in the road company of "So Long Letty." Then came a series of musicals, and "Burlesque," which made him, then and there. His own production, "Come What May," opened this season, and closed a few weeks ago.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

STANDING SILENTLY in the noisy market place of the small border town of Lemburg in Poland, next door to Russia, is an impressively tall monument, which was carved in bronze some eight years ago by a grateful populace to honor a daring aviator, a young lad in his mid-twenties, born in Florida, U. S. A. Flying voluntarily for Poland as the leader of the famous Kosciusko Escadrille, he had saved the townsfolk from starvation at a crucial moment by dropping food from his plane in the skies when the little place was hemmed in by the Russians during a siege in the late war.

Soon, we expect, the countryside will set out through the foothills for fresh summer flowers with which to redecorate the monument, in anticipation of the return for a visit to Lemburg of that American airman who so annoyed the Reds as to cause them to place a bounty of 25,000 rubles on his scalp, "dead or alive!"

Nearing Naples harbor at this moment is the S. S. Conte di Savoia, carrying the former aviator in her cabins. Over the ship's railing on the port side may be seen a refreshing countenance beaming widely from under an authentic copy of De Mille baldness. Along Hollywood boulevard he would easily be recognized as Merian Coldwell Cooper, author, soldier, student, adventurer, explorer and motion picture producer, now on excursion to the ruins of old Italy for backgrounds for "Pompeii."

But now along comes the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana officially expressing the belief to its membership that the trend is clearly in the direction of a nine-months movie season, with a "lock-up" during June, July and August, "so that the people may indulge in out-of-door sports and become more eager for shows part of the year." They appear to be quite annoyed over the continuance of the federal law which prohibits the transportation of fight films from one state to another. The law was passed in 1910 when Jack Johnson's victory over Jim Jeffries took the workers in the Southern Black Belt from their jobs to vivaciously celebrate the Negro's victory, raising race feeling to a high pitch. Because of this, Congress in July, 1912, enacted a law making it unlawful to engage in interstate transportation of fight films. There is no such ban on broadcasts of fights, however. They cross state lines without legal impediment. Probably because the broadcasts are so terrible.

WITH RESPECT TO the epistolary debate in these columns a few issues back in which Terry Ramsaye, editor of Motion Picture Herald, New York, and Howard E. Jameyson and Ramsaye seem to take their fishing seriously. In fact, he avers, they appear to work at it.

Which reminded Mr. Biechele of the time when, during the World War army draft, started by the good General Hugh (NRA) Johnson, the town roustabout of a small community in the Sunflower State was being interrogated by the examining officers of the local draft board. They inquired his occupation. The roustabout, who never took any work sufficiently serious to have an occupation, ridged his brow in deep thought, finally said, "Ain't got none."

"Well," suggested one of the examiners, "you do some fishing, don't you?"

"That's it!" exclaimed the prospective United States soldier. "Just put 'er down fishin'."

MAXWELL SAYS PLAN TO SOLVE BRITISH OVERSEATING IS UNSOUND

President of Renters' Society Denies Opposition to Restriction but Declares Proposal of Eckman Would Not Work

By BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

In a repercussion from the annual Summer Conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, held at Blackpool last week, John Maxwell, president of Kinematograph Renters Society, branded as "fundamentally unsound" a proposal that joint action be taken to solve the overseating problem by means of a boycott.

Sam Eckman, managing director of MGM in England, addressing the convention, had appealed to Mr. Maxwell to help undertake some plan such as the CEA idea to set up a committee to act upon all applications for new cinemas.

In a letter to the press, Mr. Maxwell denied that he opposed restriction on new theatres, but explained:

"I disagreed with the scheme put forward because I thought it fundamentally unsound, as it depended entirely on a boycott on the part of the K. R. S. by refusing to supply films to the offending exhibitor. I thought such a scheme dangerous to both exhibitors and the K. R. S."

"The scheme appeared hastily improvised and not properly thought out," Mr. Maxwell said. "It is obvious to me and to others that the boycott proposal will break into pieces on the first determined resistance and, after valuable time had been wasted trying to operate a scheme inherently unworkable, the whole thing would have to start afresh."

Says Ban Could Be Flouted

Maxwell said he could point out a case where under such a plan the theatre could get a supply of films despite a boycott. He obviously alluded to the situation where circuits with production contacts, such as his own, no doubt, would be in a position to laugh off any such step.

"I thought Eckman's attempted analogy between conditions prevailing in the United States during its mad orgy of gambling speculation in 1929 and conditions in this country completely unjustified and misleading," he declared. "The case against overbuilding is strong enough itself without recourse to such forced and artificial arguments and offensive comparisons. I am sure it was not Eckman's intention to frighten off capital from this business either in existing concerns or new ones, but if such had been his intention the speech seems admirably designed for the purpose."

In a reply, Mr. Eckman declared he welcomed Mr. Maxwell's statement that the latter would support effective steps to prevent overbuilding. "Regarding Maxwell's references to my paper, I stated facts as I knew them and I am far too gratified over his present attitude on overbuilding to attempt to vie with him in the use of such adjectives as 'misleading' and 'offensive' which I can afford to overlook."

Mr. Eckman pointed to the fact that the CEA had arranged to publish and circulate his paper.

Carbon Duties Stand

Attempts in an earlier stage of the debate on the Finance Bill to obtain a reduction in the new duties on carbons failed, as was expected. The matter came up on a motion by Dr. Grenfell to reduce the rates on 14 mm. diameter carbons from 5s to 1/6.

Points made by this speaker and his supporters were that the new duties amounted to between 300 and 500 per cent, the highest ever in British taxation; that what the Government was proposing was not taxation but prohibition; that international agreement stabilized the imported article at a higher price than the home produced carbon; and that the foreign carbon was necessary because of its superior quality.

The official reply (By Dr. Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade) was that 85 per cent of carbons were used by the kinema industry and that a definite undertaking had been given that prices should not be increased. The Government vote was 243 to 45.

Italian Theatres Cut Admissions, Picture Rentals

By VITTORIO MALPASSUTI
Rome Correspondent

Reductions of legitimate and film theatre admissions, and of percentage for film rental have been put into effect by the Italian motion picture industry as of April 23.

On film theatres the reduction is five per cent on prices of one lire or less, with a minimum of .05 lire. On admissions from one to five lires, the reduction is 10 per cent, and on prices over five lires the reduction has been set at 15 per cent.

The National Group of Film Dealers has applied the following reductions on all film rental contracts:

All clauses pertaining to the application of percentages above 60 per cent will be automatically canceled from the contracts.

A reduction of 10 per cent will be granted on all collections due to the dealers for contracts with a percentage from 31 to 44 per cent.

A reduction of 15 per cent will be granted on all collections due to the dealers for contracts with a percentage of 45 per cent and over.

For rental contracts at a fixed price not over 325 lire per film will be applied a reduction of 7 per cent; for contracts at a fixed price over 325 lire the reduction will be 12 per cent.

For rental contracts to be fulfilled from July 1 to August 31 next, at the request of exhibitors the dealers have declared they will consider further reductions after examination of the conditions.

Japanese Film Industry Is Showing Improvement

The condition of the motion picture industry in Japan has improved steadily in the past two years, concurrently with the general economic improvement of the country, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from assistant trade commissioner Donald W. Smith, Tokyo.

Attendance at film theatres in 1932, the last year for which figures are available, was 13 per cent higher than in 1930, and eight per cent better than in 1931. Distributors estimate that receipts during 1933 were 10 to 15 per cent higher than in 1932, with general agreement that foreign and Japanese films have never enjoyed greater popularity than at present.

FIGHT OVER FRENCH QUOTA TURNS TO JOCKEYING FOR OFFICIAL FAVOR

American Companies Resign from Chamber in Protest on Proposed Three-Months' Embargo and Prohibitive Tariffs

By PIERRE AUTRE
Paris Correspondent

For ten days the quota fight between the Chambre Syndicale of the Motion Picture Industry and the American Firms has been underway but there is now less of verbal fireworks. The two groups are now working quietly, each trying to win to its side the sympathy of the French Government officials.

The defenders of the Marcel Vandal project, which the Chambre has adopted as its own, argue this is not a design to bar foreign pictures from France, but a plan for reorganization of the French industry which they say will die unless drastic measures are taken. I have pointed out in previous articles how this plan concerned only in a small way the importers of foreign pictures.

The two important points of this project that American companies refuse to accept are:

(1) An embargo for three months on all foreign pictures.

(2) An assessment of 20 per cent of the value of the imported pictures. The value is set in the project as follows, by meter:

$1 for positive prints in the French language.

$1.66 for positive prints in foreign languages.

$20 for negative in French language.

$33 for negative in foreign languages.

If this tax were approved, foreign negatives would have to pay at least $16,666 for an average eight-reel picture.

On the other hand, French producers say they cannot go on making pictures with the competition in their own territory of foreign pictures which are often booked at a lower price.

Argumentation could go on for weeks and weeks. American companies want an entirely free market in France, but French producers will never allow that. So solution seems very difficult.

One thing absolutely necessary is to have once for all consistent regulation, which would not be changed every year. French and American firms agree that the present situation cannot continue. All these annual disputes over the quota stop all activities in the industry. The French market needs French and foreign pictures. There are not enough native pictures to supply all the French cinema houses. French cinemas cannot live without foreign pictures but they cannot live with only foreign pictures.

The fact is that French producers no longer can find money to make pictures. The many recent failures have overthrown all possibilities of outside financing. It is in this respect that the Vandal project is sure to give good results beneficial to national production. This project would bar the pirates of production who are nearly all foreigners from Eastern and Middle Europe. A good clearing of the French market could perhaps open an opportunity to serious producers.

The American firms have resigned from the French Syndicale.

Henry Klarsfeld, general manager of the Societe Anonyme Francaise des Films Paramount, explained: "This resignation is for the purpose of not sharing in the responsibilities of a drastic quota which would ruin the exhibitors. American companies prefer to be free to defend their viewpoint, as the French producers do theirs.

"It has never been proved that the bad situation of the French industry was caused by American competition. One most important reason is the inferior quality of many French pictures. Paramount knows this situation because this firm has produced French pictures for four years. Our French product has not always been very good but we know it was an apprenticeship and all kinds of experiments had to be made."

The French Syndicate of Independent Exhibitors, which includes all cinema owners who have no affiliation with a circuit, is holding the American firms in this fight. "Our liberty, our life is at stake," said the board of directors of the Syndicate.

La Cinematographie Francaise has opened a referendum addressed to all employed in the cinema industry, asking expression of opinion on the necessity for reorganization, advisability of government intervention, an open market, and a quota.

French Technicians Protest

Protesting that foreigners are usurping their places in French studios, motion picture directors, cutters, cameramen, still photographers, musicians, scene builders, and other French technicians, have organized and paraded the Champs Elysées and the Boulevards. These technicians are now grouped in a Federation of the French Artisans of Cinema. They do not protest against foreign pictures but against foreigners taking their jobs in the French studios. Of 400 French technicians in this group, 300 are now unemployed. There are 200 foreigners in their places in the French studios, and most of them irregularly, either without working permits or with permits expired or illegally delivered.

The Federation members are willing to admit 20 per cent foreign technicians in every category of work. They think that is very reasonable when Germany and England refuse to admit any foreign technicians in their studios. Of the 150 French pictures made in 1933, only 40 of them had a majority of French workers. Sixty were only French in part and 50 were really foreign.

At the present time a "French" picture is being shot at the Paramount St. Maurice Studios by a former German company which came to Paris from Berlin after Hitler's arrival. For this picture, titled "Depression Is Over," 18 technicians are German or Hungarian and 2 only are French. Producers, production executives, director, cameraman, music writer, dialogue and continuity writers, sound engineer, scenery-decorator, all are foreign, and mostly German. A general protest has been made against this picture and it is said the studios had to be protected by the police against possible attack by the French technicians, who wanted to destroy the sets where this "French" picture was made.

The French minister of labor has decided that no new labor card would be issued to any foreign technician, and the former cards would be revised.

There are now in Paris approximately 40 first-run theatres, 23 of them usually showing foreign pictures. The pictures shown in these theatres classify as follows:

Fifteen with French dialogue: 10 of them made in France, 3 made in Germany (UFA French versions), 2 German pictures dubbed in French.

26 foreign talkers: 23 American, 2 German, 1 British.

Two large theatres showing German dubbings are the Rex and the Gaumont Palace. The Paramount theatre now has a policy of showing dubbings of its best American product and independent French pictures, such as Georges Lacombe's "Youth."

Except the Pathé Natan Marignan theatre, now showing the French version of Ufa's "L'Or" (Gold), all the cinemas on the Champs Elysées are showing American talkers.

The two outstanding box office successes of the moment are "Little Women" at the Cinema Edouard VII, breaking all records, and "It Happened One Night" at the Ermitage which is going very well.

Three French pictures going very well are: "Lac Aux Dames," from Vicki Baum's novel; "Le Grand Jeu" ("The Big Game") and "Le Train de 8 Heures 47."

MPTOA Asks Unit Reaction On MGM Trailer Proposal

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has communicated with the several units and affiliates of the organization, requesting that they address directly to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer their reactions to the MGM proposal to make its own trailers. The communication by Mr. Kuykendall followed numerous inquiries regarding the position of the MPTOA in the matter.

Mr. Kuykendall has taken the position that the matter is one entirely of local autonomy, with each unit to render its own decision. At the convention of the MPTOA in Los Angeles the organization, in a meeting with producers, deplored the proposal of MGM, on the ground that trailer bookings are facilitated and more economical in purchase by handling through one medium.

De Rochemont Leaves Fox; With "Time" on Film Survey

Louis de Rochemont, who handled production of the "Magic Carpet of Movietone" and "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman," short subject series, for Fox, has resigned from the company. He has been engaged, for the next several weeks, working with the editors of Time, weekly news magazine, on a motion picture survey.

Groups Accord Paramount's "Scarlet Empress" June Honor

Six of the country's most influential women's clubs designated Paramount's "The Scarlet Empress" as "best film of the month" for June.

The review board which selected the picture is composed of examining boards from the following national organizations: General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Council of Jewish Women, National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's University Club, California Congress of Parents and Teachers and the National Society of New England Women.

Allied Drops Its Production Plans

The inability of Allied States exhibitors to deliver sufficient buying power to meet the requirements of independent producers willing to finance a picture program for the organization was reported last week to explain Allied's decision to abandon the production plan discussed earlier in the season. The decision was reported to have been reached at conclusion of the meeting of Allied directors in New York on Friday.

Allied members are to be urged by the directors to refrain from contracting for producer-made trailers and to report any instances of attempted linking of feature contracts with trailer sales when the new season selling begins.

Allied will make no effort to obtain an increase in the cancellation percentage as established in the code, but is endorsing the Darrow review board's report on block booking. It was also indicated during the directors' meetings that the organization will "withdraw quietly" from cooperation with the Motion Picture Research Council, with which friendly relations were established last fall.

U. A. Forms New Distributing Firm

Mundus Pictures, a United Artists' distributing subsidiary shortly to be organized, will include foreign pictures other than British, and some independent American product, Joseph M. Schenck, United Artists president, said last week.

"There are some pictures which we feel do not measure up to the United Artists standard," he explained, "yet they are worthy of release. Our deals with circuits also had a bearing on our decision to form Mundus. For instance, the Loew circuit will take 18 from United Artists while we may be distributing 24. Immediately the six which do not play Loew time are hurt with other exhibitors, who assume the product is inferior. By handling that type of picture through a separate distributing company, we hope the situation will be met from our point of view."

Mr. Schenck left for Europe last week to concentrate headquarters activities of United Artists abroad in London under Maurice Silverstone, managing director of United Artists Corporation, Ltd. Paris now is the operating base for Continental activities.

No General Ban On Double Bills

No general ban on double feature bills appears likely to be imposed by major companies through 1934-35 contract restrictions. Some distributors will decide each situation separately, according to local conditions and depending upon whether the practice as used by subsequent runs is hurting prior runs.

The MPTOA, analyzing major distributors' failure to take prohibitive action by a contract clause, conjectured that the distributors feared the possibility of losing sales.

Gradwell Sears, western and southern sales manager for Warner Bros., told the regional sales meeting in San Francisco Tuesday that the company will launch a nationwide campaign for complete elimination of double feature bills and will campaign for a general increase in admission prices.

George J. Schaefer, Paramount vice-president and general manager, at the sales convention in Los Angeles Monday, made clear that Paramount's new service contract will rule out double-featuring or 10-cent admissions or both where the practice by subsequent runs is demonstrated to injure prior runs.

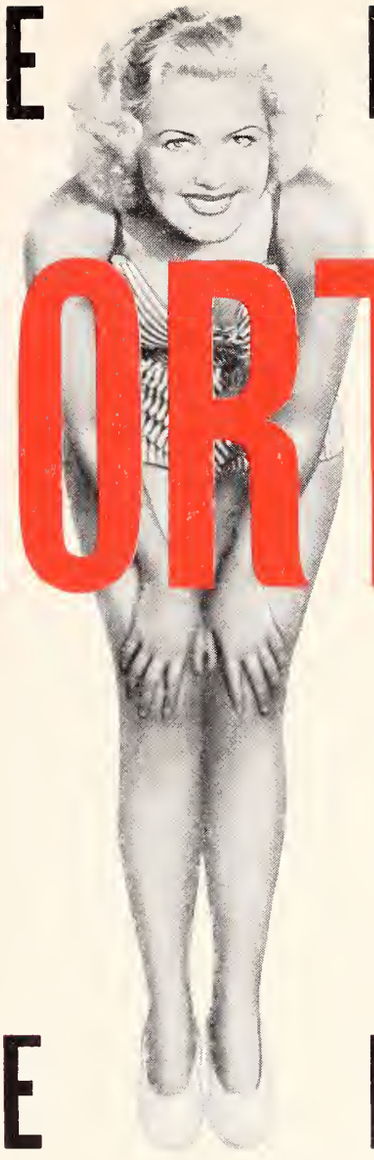
In the field, reports indicated that in many situations duals might be prohibited. In Chicago the Federal Trade Commission inquiry is still being pushed.

In Cleveland, Leopold Friedman for Loew's and Joseph Bernhard for Warner signed an agreement seeking to eliminate duals, effective July 8.

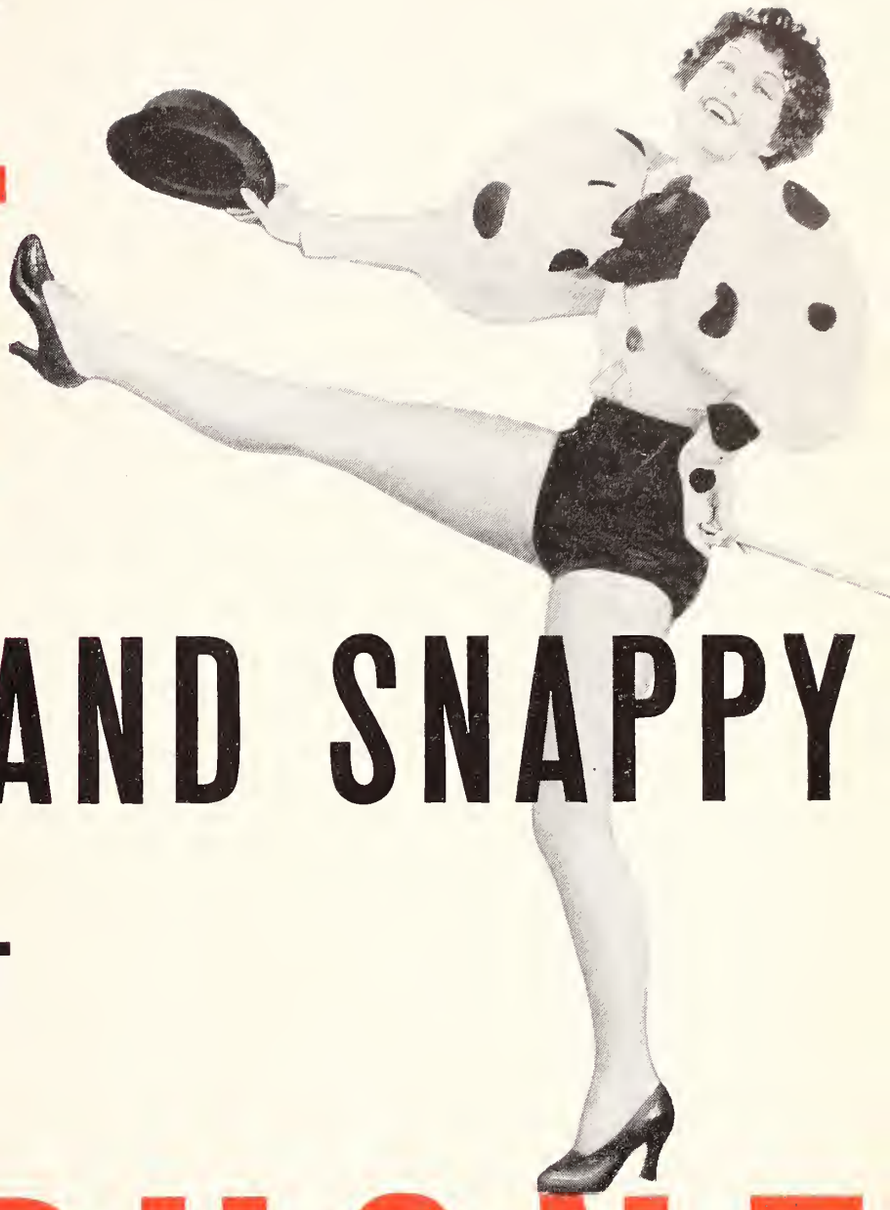
Denver theatres using double feature programs are to be penalized, exchanges are granted the right to sell previous runs to theatres in the same price class, and houses having low matinee or low balcony admission prices after 1 P. M. are given less clearance than if their entire house sold at top main floor price, according to the Denver Clearance and Zoning Board. The board has made a rule that "any theatre, regardless of classification, using double features on the same program, will lose one-half of its admission price classification." Many exhibitors feel the board exceeded its authority.

The new season may find an end to the double feature in the Los Angeles territory, entirely dependent upon adoption of the zoning schedule completed by the clearance board on Monday after eight weeks of intensive work and setting back availability dates on double feature houses to 182 days.

Horne Names Gottlieb U. A. Advertising Head



Alexander Gottlieb, former assistant to Hal Horne, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, has been promoted to advertising manager, under the supervision of Mr. Horne. Kenneth O'Brien, formerly of the publicity department, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Gottlieb as assistant to Mr. Horne.



Drop Stockholders' Meeting

The annual stockholders' meeting of Safety-Sentry Company in Philadelphia was not held as scheduled last week because of lack of a quorum. No session will be held until next year, and the present officers and directors will continue until then.

NEW PERCENTAGE DEAL FOR EXHIBITORS
THIRTEEN FILMS LAUNCHED IN WEEK
DR. GIANNINI URGES EASIER CREDIT
BERMAN ASSIGNED TO 13 PICTURES

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

THAT a movement will soon be launched to give showmen a "new deal" on percentage bookings, is the information that comes from a thoroughly trustworthy source.

Experienced exhibitors, our informant says, have too long felt that percentage bookings have been a one-sided proposition with the distributing company getting more than an even break.

Percentage pictures that return a profit to exhibitor and distributor will not come up for discussion in the near future, but percentage pictures that show losses to the showmen with a reasonable return to distributors will be the bone of contention.

The plan now crystallizing will call for a showndown on all percentage pictures played, with a possible plan submitted whereby percentage films would be lumped as a group over the season's playing time.

At the end of the period, those pictures showing a profit would be held up against those showing a loss. The "new deal" would be argued on the balance struck between profit and loss pictures—and not on profit films alone.

Showmen, it is pointed out, have protested they get the short-end on the present method and their demands will be for "block booking" of percentage pictures over a yearly period, so the distributor and producer will share losses as well as profits in the same way that he does.

If, and when, the idea comes up for discussion, fireworks may be the order of the day. It is understood producers would fight it on the basis that such an arrangement would give them no incentive to make percentage pictures.

Thirteen Pictures Start

Major studio production took a big upswing during the June 8 to 15 period. Thirteen pictures, all of which look good, were started. During the same time, five features were completed. A recapitulation of the new activity credits Warner with three, MGM and Fox with two each, and one respectively at Reliance, Columbia, Universal, Goldwyn, Paramount and Radio.

Of the newly finished pictures, MGM has two, Universal, Warner and Monogram one each.

The Warner starting trio are "Flirtation Walk," featuring Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and Pat O'Brien; "A Lady Surrenders," teaming Jean Muir and George Brent and "Lost Lady," in which Barbara Stanwyck and Frank Morgan and Phillip Reed will be seen.

At Fox Will Rogers started in "Judge Priest"; the supporting cast includes Glenda Fowler, Rochelle Hudson, Tom Brown, Anita Louise and Stepin Fetchit. "Wanted" also started, with Rosemary Ames, Nils Asther, Russell Hardie, Pert Kelton and Victor Jory in the principal roles.

The new MGM pair are "The Hideout," featuring Robert Montgomery, Loretta Young and Muriel Evans, and "Four Walls" which teams Franchot Tone and Mae Clarke.

Reliance (United Artists release) started "Transatlantic Showboat" with a big star cast, incuding Nancy Carroll, Gene Raymond, Wera Engels, Helen Morgan, the Four Mills Brothers and Jack Benny. Goldwyn Productions, also United Artists release, started the second Anna Sten picture, "We Live Again," in which Fredric March is co-starred.

Columbia's new feature is "Broadway Bill," featuring Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy and Lynne Overman. Universal started "Romance in the Rain," with Roger Pryor, Heather Angel and Victor Moore heading the cast. Paramount's contribution is "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," presenting Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor.

Radio began shooting on "The Fountain," in which Ann Harding and Brian Aherne have the principal roles and Paul Lukas, Jean Hersholt, Violet Kemble-Cooper and Ralph Forbes appear in the supporting cast.

MGM's two completed pictures are "The Green Hat" (title to be changed), starring Constance Bennett and Herbert Marshall, and "Stamboul Quest," featuring Myrna Loy, George Brent, Lionel Atwill and C. Henry Gordon.

"There's Always Tomorrow," in which Frank Morgan, Binnie Barnes and Lois Wilson appear, was finished at Universal.

Warner wound up shooting on "British Agent," which offers Leslie Howard, Kay Francis, William Gargan and Phillip Reed in the cast.

Monogram completed "Tomorrow's Youth," in which Martha Sleeper, John Miljan and Dickie Moore have the principal roles.

Dr. A. H. Giannini of the Bank of America, speaking before the annual convention of the National Credit Association here, urged easier credit to business as an aid to the nation. He said: "A shrewd and daring search for sound credit openings by our credit agencies and the ready extension of credit are more essential to a recovery program, to the restoration of the morale of business, and to the salvage of our economic institutions than any other service which may be reasonably demanded of us."

Sam Briskin, chairman of the Academy Research council, held a conference with local representatives of Bell and Howell, Debrie and Mitchell camera companies and solicited their cooperation in standardizing a practical silent camera. Hoping to duplicate the spontaneous rise to stardom of Margaret Sullavan, Carl Laemmle, Jr., believes he can do the same for Binnie Barnes, recently brought here from England for featured parts. This decision was made as the result of her first screen work for that company in "There's Always Tomorrow." The star tryout will be her next work in "Bread Upon the Waters."

Believing the unit production system to be the best, B. B. Kahane last week reorganized the general production set-up of Radio studios by relieving Pandro Berman of full responsibility for all production and assigning him to be responsible for producing a series of 13 pictures for the new program. Other producers are to be selected and assigned following the convention.

DICTATOR, 75, SAYS FILMS KEEP HIM WELL

The best way to keep young is to see a motion picture every night, take it from General Juan Vicente Gomez, 75-year-old dictator of Venezuela, who is in perfect health. That was the answer obtained by William F. Schuler, assistant traffic manager of the Red D Line, when he was sent to Venezuela to investigate a report General Gomez had died.

NYE RESUMES ATTACK ON CODE 'MONOPOLY'

First Court Action Resulting from Local Board Hearing Filed at Atlanta; Code Authority Swamped with Appeals

The National Recovery Administration on Saturday celebrated its first birthday in the midst of controversy. In the face of what General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA Administrator, termed the complaints of the "calamity howlers," the NRA formally issued a statement enumerating these improved conditions:

1. Employment has been increased by 3,000,000.

2. Child labor has been abolished.

3. The aggregate of factory payrolls has advanced 72 per cent.

4. The number of employees in manufacturing lines has risen 37 per cent.

5. Production in manufacturing industries has gained nearly 50 per cent.

6. Sales by department stores are up by 46 per cent.

7. Production of automobiles has increased 184.8 per cent.

8. The cost of living has risen only 9 per cent.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, the final session of the Seventy-third Congress saw various legislators, through Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, returning to their attack upon the Motion Picture Code branding it one of the most iniquitous of all codes, an agreement under which small independent interests are being annihilated and the public forced to pay higher prices for entertainment deteriorating in quality.

"The independents in the moving picture field not only have their backs to the wall, but they are actually being driven through the wall as the Blue Eagle claws at their faces, sinks its talons into their vitals, and screeches its song of victory for monopoly," Senator Nye declared.

Charges "Shady Background"

Alleging that the code has an "extremely shady background" and that there was "at least ethical crookedness" in its drawing, the Senator attacked Division Administrator Rosenblatt, referring to his connection with Nathan Burkan, New York attorney, and asking:

"Did Mr. Burkan, intimate associate of Will Hays, movie czar, actually pull the strings from behind the scenes as Rosenblatt wielded the hammer which was to destroy the living-making power of many honest American citizens?

"Mr. Rosenblatt went directly from his association with Nathan Burkan to his association with General Johnson, and to the place of supreme designator of what the Movie Trust could or could not do."

"The record shows," declared the Senator, "that he threw the gates wide open, figuratively told the trust to do as it pleased, gave them everything they wanted, fought their battles, and reported to them personally in New York rather than to his own Federal Government superiors.

"Thus in this industry, where there are hundreds of independent theatres not part of the trust, some of them costing half a million dollars, the trust gang had their own man make the code, has their own man as Government representative on the Code Authority, and has eight of its own gang on the movie Code Authority of 10 men.

"The independents are led to the scaffold by a blue eagle screeching raucously of victorious oppression—and it is a scaffold they are forced by administration of Federal laws to help construct and help pay for."

Names Members of Authority

Naming the members of the Code Authority one by one, Senator Nye cited their connections, declaring Sidney R. Kent to have been a heavy contributor to the Democratic campaign fund and asserting that Ed Kuykendall was not an independent. The only true independent on the Code Authority, he said, is W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures.

"Truly," Mr. Nye commented, "the independent under this code must let his enemies write the law he is to obey, interpret that law, draw the indictment against him, prosecute the case, act as judge, render their own decision and enforce their own punishment.

"There is nothing in American history so contrary to every fundamental principle of decency, fairness, honesty and the square deal guaranteed by the Constitution and promised in the present 'New Deal.'

"The 'New Deal' under this code is simply a shuffle into annihilation through legal means for those not in with the trust."

Citing the testimony of Russell Hardy, special assistant to the Attorney General, before the Darrow Review Board, Senator Nye declared that "we can not charge that the blue eagle laid this egg (of block booking). But it can be shown that the blue eagle carefully hatched it, nurtured the young vulture that came forth and shelters with protecting wings of legalization what all hoped would be wiped off the movie map under the promised 'New Deal' of the NRA."

"I doubt if there is any industry in the nation where such damnable collusion by a small group of pirates exists or where such extreme oppression is possible under the guidance and with the sanction of NRA as a result of its codes and administration of them," Senator Nye said after reviewing the testimony of review board witnesses who claimed inability to buy except en bloc, or who claimed they could not buy at all.

"At no time in history has the little fellow been so friendless, so helpless, so unable to defend himself, so certain of complete destruction as since the blue eagle first soared from the mind of monopoly to become a vulture, a bird of prey, sinking its beak and its talons into the hearts of honest men.

"Truly, had I had a part in making that code, in sanctioning it, my days would be uneasy, my nights well nigh sleepless."

Representatives of actors and writers who will negotiate with producers on fair practice provisions to govern relations between these groups, as provided under the code, were named Tuesday by Division Administrator Rosenblatt as follows:

Actors: Kenneth Thomson, Ann Harding, alternate; Ralph Morgan, Chester Morris, alternate; Richard Tucker, Pat O'Brien, alternate; Robert Montgomery, Paul Muni, alternate; Claude King, Mary Astor, alternate.

Writers: Ralph Block, Gladys Lehman, alternate; John Emerson, Rupert Hughes, alternate; James Gleason, John F. Natteford, alternate; Dudley Nichols, Seton Miller, alternate; Waldemar Young, Courtney Terrett, alternate.

Court Action Follows Ruling

In the field, what probably was the first court action to develop directly from operations of the code appeared in Atlanta late last week when John Gillooly, operator of the Capitol, St. Petersburg, Fla., filed a suit for $450,000 against E. J. Sparks' Enterprises, operating about 60 Florida theatres, charging restraint of trade. The suit is said to have resulted directly from evidence introduced at clearance and zoning hearings in Atlanta. Mr. Gillooly's complaint charges the Sparks company is restraining trade by reason of buying first and second-run pictures, running them for first-run and closing many theatres for the summer months; by not running them second-run for many months, thus causing such pictures to be outmoded and obsolete when they reach Mr. Gillooly's theatre by reason of a clause in his contract which reads "subsequent to Sparks."

Edwin Wick, of the Buffalo Majestic, will withdraw from the supreme court his suit for an injunction to restrain the grievance board from interfering with deliveries of film to his theatre. With the case removed from court, Wick was given a hearing on a non-compliance charge.

In New York, the Independent Theatre Owners Association was permitted to withdraw from federal court its petition for an injunction restraining the Code Authority from prohibiting non-signers of the code from filing complaints under it at a hearing in U. S. district court. A new petition, similar in all respects to that withdrawn, was filed Monday in the state supreme court, according to Milton C. Weisman, ITOA attorney. Mr. Weisman said the ITOA felt that the state court had wider jurisdiction over the relief sought.

The Code Authority in New York was "swamped" with appeals from decisions rendered by Local Grievance Boards in the field. Up to June 15, there had been 68 such appeals filed, of which 31 have been heard and decisions made on 22.

The Code Authority was seeking ways and means to expedite its hearings in order that the selling season may get under way without interruption. Because of the 15-day provision in the code, during which time decisions on appeals must be handed down, the Authority has been referring cases heard to individual members for investigation and recommendation. As yet, no decision has been rendered on the United Artists 10 per cent cancellation issue,

Southern Owners Form Association

Independent theatre owners of the territory of Atlanta have organized the G. F. T. A. Independent Theatres' Association, including Georgia, Florida, eastern Tennessee and northern Alabama. A convention will be held in Atlanta July 8 and 9. Before that date organization details will be completed.

The officers of the association are: Ike Katz, Montgomery, president; Earle E. Griggs, secretary; C. A. Coart, Atlanta, treasurer; C. D. Swint, Atlanta; Mrs. Fay Ellis, Miami; N. H. Waters, Birmingham, and Ben Borisky, Chattanooga, vice-presidents. John Gillooly, St. Petersburg; L. J. Duncan, Lanette, Ala.; Sam Borisky, Chattanooga, and Alpha Fowler, Atlanta, are directors, in addition to the officers.

Approximately 70 theatres were represented at the initial meeting. All signers indicated that they were in no way affiliated with producers or distributors.

NVA Members Pledge Support to Association

At the last general meeting of the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., last week in their New York clubhouse on West 46th street, more than 300 players pledged themselves to "carry on" the organization, forced to vacate its quarters. The complicated financial situation which forced the abandonment of the clubhouse was aired in its every phase.

Henry Chesterfield, executive secretary, declared the association would have new quarters shortly, and he sharply took to task the custodians of the NVA Fund, to which motion picture theatre patrons annually are asked to contribute, and demanded an accounting of the money.

Deals on Exploitation Film

Exploitation Pictures, Inc., has sold "Enlighten Thy Daughter" to Big Feature Rights Corporation for the Indiana and Tennessee territory. L. K. Brin has acquired the film for Wisconsin and upper Michigan. Jerry Abrams Film Exchange has taken the film for northern Illinois and parts of Indiana.

Inter-Continent Takes Film

The Inter-Continent Film Corporation has acquired exclusive distribution rights to the feature "Sobre Las Olas" ("Over the Waves"), for all of Europe except Spain and Portugal. L. R. De LaTorre, president, sails shortly to arrange distribution abroad.

U. A. Takes Warner House

United Artists will use the Keith instead of the Aldine as its theatre outlet in Philadelphia for at least half of next season, in accordance with its agreement with Stanley Warner.

Delay Exhibitor Session

The Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association has postponed its annual convention to July 1-3, at Atlanta.

INDUSTRY UNSCATHED DURING 73d CONGRESS

Target of Many Inimical Proposals but None Passed; Patman's Suggestion of Film Commission Alone Before Hearing

The 73rd Congress—Roosevelt's own—passed into history at 11:05 p.m. on Monday, and with its dramatic adjournment the motion picture emerged unscathed after a series of battles in which the industry was the target of many anti-film proposals. Not a single piece of legislation affecting motion pictures passed either the Senate or the House of Representatives, although motion pictures were the subject of discussion in Congressional halls and committee chambers more frequently during this session than ever before.

Most of the measures which would have affected motion picture operations were of a restrictive nature, including, in addition to Congressman Celler's anti block-booking legislation, which is a perennial on Capitol Hill, proposed bills by Representatives Patman, of Texas, and Culking, New York, to establish motion picture commissions to control the business and effect censorship.

There also was offered the annual proposal to repeal the law which prohibits the transportation of crime pictures, this one sponsored by Congressman Cannon, of Missouri. Representative Patman also proposed a Department of Justice investigation of the whole industry. Representative Sirovich, in another bill, asked that Congress itself conduct such an investigation.

Fight Bill Up Again

Congressman Celler attempted to have repealed the present law prohibiting interstate transportation of fight pictures.

Probably the only piece of legislation of those mentioned above to have an open hearing was Mr. Patman's proposed measure to create a motion picture commission, which occupied a short hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission. But that was said to be only a gesture, as members of the committee were reported never to have had the intention of further serious consideration.

The industry also was interested in Representative Luce's bill to have the United States adhere to the Rome copyright convention. Hearings on this were held one month ago.

The Stock Control Measure

The corporate structure of motion pictures was interested in and will be affected by Congressional legislation amending the revenue act, the new reciprocal-tariff bill, the corporate reorganization measure and the bill providing for loans to industry.

Of them all, the tariff bill was the most favorable, since some leaders believe that under it some of the handicaps now affecting U. S. exports of pictures may be eliminated in the making of new trade treaties with foreign governments.

The corporate reorganization measure was utilized quickly by some of the motion picture receiverships as an aid in their realignment.

Financial manipulations of speculators in film stocks, among other securities, will be curbed to some extent by the legislation placing stock markets under federal control, although it was said that the expose during the session of the activities in some of the picture stocks would be a deterrent to sales for some time to come. Figuring prominently in the activities attendant upon the Congressional hearings on stock manipulations was the Chase National Bank, which brought into the limelight the Chase stock operations in Fox Film interests, General Theatres Equipment and others in motion pictures.

While Congress passed no film legislation, the public heard much about motion picture operations during the legislative operations of both the Senate and the House. Through the Senate's Federal Trade Commission survey of salaries of American businesses, they heard the details of salary and bonus payments to motion picture executives, some of whom were listed as receiving higher payments yearly for services than some of the biggest socalled giants of the country's leading industries.

The Senate listened on more than one occasion to Senator Nye's lengthy tirades against conditions in the industry. Using the report of Clarence Darrow's National Recovery Review Board as his text, the North Dakota senator delivered scathing denunciations of the motion picture business, its leaders and NRA officials connected with the Administration and with motion picture code administration. However, Roosevelt leadership in the Senate functioned perfectly and the only response to his attacks was a short defense of the NRA and the code by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas.

Just what the eventual interest of the motion picture business will be in the legislation creating a wire-radio commission was a matter for speculation.

MANY APPEAL LOCAL BOARD RULINGS

although a hearing was held 10 days ago. J. Robert Rubin, investigating the facts, has not yet submitted his recommendations.

The Code Authority this week announced that the following appeals and complaints had been disposed of:

H. M. Popkin, complainant, vs. Abe Levy, D. L. Mitchell and F. L. Titus, all of Los Angeles.

Complaint charged violation of code clause prohibiting an exhibitor from lowering admission prices publicly announced or advertised by giving of rebates in form detailed in the clause, or failing at all times to maintain a minimum admission price specified in all contracts licensing exhibition of pictures. Proof of the charge should have resulted in a determination by the Local Board favorable to the complainant. From the proof the respondent for a long period had publicly announced and advertised an admission price of five cents to their theatres. Complainant charged unfair competition, but Code Authority found there was no proof the admission price specified in any contract licensing the exhibition of any motion picture in the respective theatres of the respondents provided a minimum admission price and the complaint was unanimously dismissed.

John T. Rennie, complainant, vs. Feldstein and Dietrich, respondents:

Complaint of Rennie charged violation of code clause providing it is an unfair trade practice for any person engaged in the motion picture industry to knowingly interfere with pending negotiations between an exhibitor and any other party pertaining to the possession or occupancy of a theatre then actually operated by such exhibitor, or in respect to any renewal of any agreement affecting the same, for the purpose of preventing a consummation of such negotiations. Evidence showed all negotiations were conducted prior to December 7, 1933, the effective date of the Code, and the complaint was rejected by the Code Authority.

Wisconsin Amusement Loses Case

Complainant charges respondent violated provisions of Article V, E, Part 5, Paragraph C, pertaining to advertising of admission prices. The complainant was adjusted in Milwaukee and the Code Authority dismissed the complaint.

Roxy Theatre Corp., New York, complainant, vs. Walter Reade's Mayfair Theatre, respondent:

Complainant charges Mayfair constantly indulges in practice of coupons or throw-away tickets directly or indirectly lowering or tending to lower Mayfair's announced admission prices. The local grievance board had upheld the Roxy's complaint and the Code Authority dismissed the respondent's appeal, upholding the board's decision.

Century Amusement Co., Inc., Luxor Theatre, complainant, vs. Loew's, Inc., Grand Theatre, respondent, both in New York:

Luxor complained the Grand was granted clearance over it and the local board in New York found the complaint to be without merit. The ground of the Luxor complaint was that the distance between the two theatres is so great that for the Grand to bargain for and receive clearance is unfair and unreasonable. The Code Authority upheld the board's decision.

Gwynn Theatre Co., complainant, vs. Frank H. Durkee, Charles Nolte, Walter Pacy, Harry Schwalbe, Calvin Carney and Associates, respondents, all of Washington, D. C.:

Washington Grievance Board called for determination a complaint by an exhibitor that respondents should be restrained from proceeding with the erection of a theatre which, it is alleged, would operate in competition with the theatre of the complainant. The Code Authority determined that, under Article VI, Part 2, Section 4, an extension to a complaint of this character, despite the wording of the clause, is not warranted and dismissed the complaint.

Jurisdiction of Board

An interesting decision made this week by the Code Authority is that when the two parties to a complaint are in different territories, the code board located in the respondents' territory gains jurisdiction. This principle was established by the Authority in referring a clearance action from St. Louis to Kansas City.

An administrative order by General Johnson, adding to the powers and duties of Local Clearance and Zoning Boards under the code, was signed last week, and the boards, in addition to former duties, may now, when so directed by the Code Authority, receive any and all protests from motion picture exhibitors against any existing clearance and zoning as to their respective theatres, alleging that such clearance and zoning is unreasonable in length or area.

A total of $67,164 in assessments had been collected by the Code Authority from 6,266 exhibitors up to June 15. This included amounts received from 59 exhibitors who have not signed an assent to the code but have taken the 10 per cent cancellation privileges. The Code Authority on Friday unanimously approved a plan whereby non-assentors will be given until August 15 to sign, with the provision that two paid-up assentors of the same territory indorse the applicant.

One of the problems under consideration by the Code Authority was the question of whether United Artists pictures are included in the 10 per cent cancellation clause. The company contends they are not on the grounds that each picture is sold separately. The Authority has not yet rendered a decision.

Several new recommendations for posts on local boards were made, among them being the nominations in Kansas City to V. P. Thompson, head of Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co.; Fred Wolfson, attorney, and Robert Greenlease, motor car dealer, as impartial alternates, to serve as substitutes for the originally designated government members. The Kansas City boards are awaiting Code Authority approval. The Authority appointed Samuel Fleishman of the Rex, Portland, Ore., to succeed Philip Blumauer on the Portland Clearance and Zoning Board, filling the unaffiliated subsequent run exhibitor spot vacated by Mr. Blumauer's resignation.

The difficulties of local board machinery and exhibitors and exchanges in adjusting complaints over trade practices continued.

In Cincinnati, the Grievance Board ordered A. Macci to discontinue 10-cent admissions in connection with merchants' tickets at the Wayne, Greenville, O. The regular scale in 25 cents.

Insist on Minimum Being Kept

Two decisions handed down by the Detroit Grievance Board emphasize that body's intention to insist that minimum admissions specified in contracts be observed. In one instance, Arthur E. Koch of the Fedro, filed against Edward Helki of the Perrien. In the second, Julius London of the Arcadia filed against Fox, Paramount, Warner, First National and MGM.

The Kansas City Grievance Board found Fox Midwest guilty of running a picture, "Sons of the Desert," at the Isis for 15 cents in a 25-cent situation.

The Los Angeles grievance board last week awarded Vitagraph the right to hold A. R. Miller to all contracts signed by him for the Baldwin, Baldwin Park, Cal. Vitagraph charged in its complaint that Miller transferred the corporation name to avoid playing its product.

E. Thornton Kelly of the Grant Lee, Fort Lee, N. J., was the second exhibitor in Allied of New Jersey to win a clearance and zoning decision by the New York board. Mr. Kelly complained against 12 theatres situated in and around his territory. The board granted him 14 days' clearance on two competitive situations and 7 on another.

AND THE PATRON IS ALWAYS RIGHT

At the Dubinsky Liberty theatre in Kansas City last week was chalked up some sort of record. It was "one for the books," to say the least.

A patron paid his 15-cent admission, entered the theatre, was entertained for two hours and forty minutes with films and vaudeville, and then demanded that the theatre pay his parking fee of 15 cents because other theatres offer free parking.

What the manager did and said is not recorded. Perhaps it is just as well.

National Labor Board Hears Consolidated Film Difficulty

At a hearing of the National Labor Board in Washington last week, the labor difficulties being encountered by Consolidated Film Industries were considered. The hearing followed inability to obtain a satisfactory settlement between the company and the Printing Pressmen's Union, which instigated a strike of 50 employees in April.

The New York Regional Labor Board originally heard the case, and ruled the strikers should return to work and the dispute arbitrated. An appeal was taken to the national body by the company. Also involved is decision as to whether the company is subject to the graphic arts or film laboratory code.

Wisconsin Unemployment Insurance Effective July 1

The Wisconsin unemployment insurance law becomes effective on employers of 10 or more workers for 18 or more weeks yearly on July 1, the state industrial commission at Madison has announced. The decision is based on a finding that many fewer employers had been covered voluntarily than the 139,000 quota which would have restricted the law to employers who voluntarily came under it.

Employers subject to the law will be required to begin contributing to individual or state unemployment reserve funds on July 1. Benefits to qualified employers, ranging from $5 to $10 weekly will not become payable until July 1, 1935.

Film Transit Head Directs Activity Of Airplane Group

W. C. Smith, president and manager of the Indiana Film Transit Company, Inc., with headquarters in Indianapolis, is president of the Aircraft Owners' Association, an organization of private plane owners, which has leased the Capitol airport in Indianapolis as its operating base.

The association was formed in November, 1933, by five flyers, including Mr. Smith, as a non-profit organization to reduce operating expenses, study flying and promote sociability among plane owners. Mr. Smith has declared the group's program includes air circuses during the summer and an air tour. The association has a membership of 25, all members required to be plane owners.

Mr. Smith has declared he uses his plane in cases of emergency which arise in the transportation of film. He operates a fleet of eight trucks, carrying film throughout Indiana.

New York License Head Plans Actor-Agent Contract Change

New York license commissioner Paul Moss declared last week that he will bring about a radical change in the type of contracts between actors and agents. Those now in use he characterized as unfair to the actor and a violation of the employment agency law.

Mr. Moss made the declaration during a hearing before him on a complaint by John Hickey and Harry Anger, owners of a vaudeville unit. A week's engagement was cancelled by the management of the Hippodrome theatre, Baltimore, on one week's notice, while the two complainants were denied to the right to cancel on the same basis, it was charged. Decision was reserved.

PUBLIC IS FINAL COURT

ONE CRITICISM IN 13 YEARS

To the Editor of the Herald:

I note with growing concern the indictment that the church people are putting up against what they term smut in pictures.

Speaking from the average country town with nine churches in it, population 3,500, the only criticism that has ever come in 13 years of business was from one minister that unfortunately picked "So This Is Africa" to come in on.

Any criticism has come from the sit-by-the-fires that we have never seen in the theatre at any time, and, strange to say, there are a few that this can be said of.

As far as undress is concerned, I have seen more flesh at the bathing beaches than I have ever seen on the scren.

The same people do not criticize art in the nude as it is seen at the art galleries.

The fact remains that the average picture-goer will pass by the cleanest of clean pictures and come to those that have a little spice and smartness in dialogue.

Every exhibitor knows that this is true, the box-office shows it.

I would rather have a child of mine in a theatre than in the beer honky-tonks that are springing up all over the country.

Pictures portray life as it is and not as these dreamers think it is.

After all, the wisecracks go over the heads of the kids and there is nothing the screen can teach the modern sophisticated youth they do not know in this day and age.

And it is my opinion that youth is cleaner minded today than they were in my youth.

What the public supports governs the producers in making pictures, and after all, the theatre-going public should be the court of last resort and not the socalled reform element.

Boycott is an ugly thing in any business.

Pictures will be drab and uninteresting if the reformers have their way, and they are indicting the whole of the industry for perhaps three per cent of the objectionable pictures, and that I will say has been the batting average of the pictures that I have run.

I remember well one picture some time ago, "Fazil," that we ran.

We received a Chicago print that had been censored with what was purported to be a torrid love scene cut out.

This had been advertised by some that saw it in another town. When we ran it it did not have it, and there were plenty of squawks because of this from those that saw it at our home.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TOO VALUABLE TO TRIFLE WITH

To the Editor of the Herald:

Please accept my thanks for Mr. Ramsaye's "No Plants" notice in "What the Picture Did for Me" Department of the Herald of May 26. He is right. That part of your Herald is too valuable to be trifled with.

Also thank Colonel Jenkins for his "tumming" one Barney Glazer. Anyone who thinks that all the talk about "going to have a baby," sex, seductions, bastards and such as we have had too much of, is entertainment is a fool, and not an exhibitor. Have just had a letter from the Bishop of Arkansas explaining the stand of the Catholic Church on certain pictures. I am not a Catholic, but pledged him my support, and assured him every other independent exhibitor in Arkansas would do the same.

Your "Showmen's Reviews" help us a great deal in selecting and rejecting pictures. Please continue to let your reviewers mention the risque situation. McCarthy is your best reviewer. He doesn't waste so much print telling how to put it over.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Arkansas.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 229.—(A) What do you understand by the "critical angle"? (B) Given a clean, perfectly transparent sheet of glass one-eighth of an inch thick, would it be possible to so hold it with relation to a light source that no light would either enter or pass through it? (C) What is chromatic aberration, and what is its effect? (D) Just what is white light?

Answer to Question No. 223

Bluebook School Question No. 223 was: (A) Explain just why moving a projection lens closer to or farther away from the film changes the definition on the screen. (B) Is it practicable to alter the E.F. of a projection lens by changing the distance between its front and rear elements? (C) Just why is it not possible to secure a projection lens to match one you already have, merely by sending the markings on same to dealer or manufacturer? (D) What must you send with the lens if you want accurate matching?

We find the following to have given satisfactory answers: C. Rau and S. Evans, D. Danielson, G. E. Doe, R. DeTotto, J. Wentworth, A. F. Sprafke, R. J. Arntson, H. Edwards, L. Cimikoski, T. Fielder.

The list is short. Summer slack, I suppose. Theatres closing or men enervated by the heat. Too bad, but it is always that way. Well, men, if you feel you must lay off, be sure to come back with cool weather—better stick it through, though.

I must once more warn you to place your name and address at the top of the first page of each answer. Every week someone neglects this, and not infrequently I am obliged to discard a really excellent answer for that reason.

(A) Dale Danielson answers thus: "There is a definite law of relations between distances of lens to film and lens to screen or image. It reads that varying one distance will vary the other in the opposite direction. Therefore, when distance lens to object is altered, distance lens to image plane will also be changed, so that since the screen is stationary, the image will focus either ahead of, or back of it, as the case may be.

"Under such condition the image loses sharpness for the reason that the rays have either not reached their point of focus if the screen be too near the lens, or have reached their point of focus, crossed each other and started to diverge if it be too far away."

Evans and Rau answer thus: "Since the film and the screen are the two conjugate foci points of the lens, moving it (the lens) closer to or farther away from one such point, must automatically alter the distance to the other. Therefore if the screen position be not at the forward conjugate foci point, the image cannot be in sharp definition."

G. E. Doe says, "There are two points known as conjugate foci points, one of which is the film. When the film is a certain distance from the optical center of a projection lens, the other conjugate point, where the image will be formed in as sharp definition as the lens is capable of giving, will be automatically fixed at a certain point, where the screen is presumed to and must be if the image is to have maximum sharpness. This front conjugate foci point is where the rays focus. Before that point is reached the rays are approaching each other. When it has been passed the rays have met, crossed and start to diverge. At the latter point the image would appear, as illustrated in figure 36D, page 146, volume 1 of our Bluebook."

(B) T. Van Vaulkenburg replies thus: "That would depend upon what definition we give to 'practicable.' It is not practicable to do this without some injury to results. Any alteration of distances between the two elements would upset corrections more or less for one thing. Each lens element is accurately ground to fit each other element in a certain, definite relation to that other element in the matter of distances. Disturb these distances by alteration and you work injury to results."

(C) R. DeTotto says, "Because the E.F., if marked thereon, is not sufficiently accurate, hence the manufacturer must have the lens it is desired to match for accurate matching."

H. Edwards answers, "Lens manufacturers allow certain small tolerances of error, hence even though the markings be on the lens (not always the case) they may not be depended upon for absolute accuracy. Either the lens itself, or precise width of aperture distance, front surface of lens to screen, and exact width of undistorted picture, must be sent if exact results are demanded."

(D) D. Danielson says, "One sure way is to send the lens you want matched. Or one may send accurate measurements, as follows: (1) Aperture width in thousandths of an inch. (2) Exact distance longtitudinal center of lens (between its elements) to center of screen (exact width of white light on screen with no film in)."

To all of which must be added the exact projection angle, if any, if exact results are desired. As a matter of fact I don't believe measurements would serve very well where there is projection angle. Better make certain and send the lens itself.

Owner Sues Sparks and Nine Distributors for Restraint

John J. Gillody, independent theatre owner of St. Petersburg, Fla., has filed suit for $500,000 damages in Atlanta court, against F. J. Sparks, Florida circuit operator, and nine distributing companies. Mr. Gillody claims restraint of trade and a monopoly, and contends the defendants forced him out of business in Florida.

"CORKING TITLE," BUT—

DeCasseres Sees Only 55 Per Cent Picture Value in "While Parents Sleep"; Other Plays Diagnosed

By BENJAMIN DE CASSERES

WHILE PARENTS SLEEP

English humor on the screen and stage is dreary stuff. From the number of screen and stage flops of American farces and comedies in England, I suppose the same is true of us over there. That is because nothing is more characteristic of and peculiar to a people than its sense of humor: a Swede and a Chinaman, for instance.

So, then, "While Parents Sleep" (a corking picture title), by Anthony Kimmins—William A. Brady producing—made the Britishers ha! ha! their bloomin' 'eads off for two years; but it proved to be the dreariest and tritest slice of farcical fare that we have had here in a long time.

It seems, among other things, that the words "lousy" and "whoopee" have just got current in England—and "While Parents Sleep" works these two words to a fare-you-well. The second-act curtain is actually dropped on Lady Cattering (Ilka Chase) and Colonel Hammond (Lionel Pape) both agreeing that something or other is "lousy." Haw-haw! My word!

Colonel Hammond and Mrs. Hammond are somewhat Victorian. They have two sons. One, Neville, a shy, handsome guy, has on his string Lady Cattering, wife of an Ambassador (he's off-stage; but would suggest a Henry Stephenson part).

The other fellow, Jerry, is a naval officer who picks up Bubbles Thompson, a Brixton girl, who doesn't care a hootinhell about titles and positions. She is a vulgar delight, a mouse dropped in the Victorian Yorkshire pudding.

Well, there's a party somewhere. All four return late by separate entrances. The climax comes in the discovery by Jerry and Bubbles of Neville and his Lady hidden in a lounge, with the Lady wearing nothing but her panties. And then in come the parents.

All this was done, as Lloyd George and I recall, back in about 1875.

There are still some laughs in the naughty mess, and with a good cast an amusing fill-in program picture might be jazzed out of it by transposing the locale to, say, Glen Cove. The dialogue is putrid.

THE ONLY GIRL

This is the Victor Herbert-Henry Blossom musical comedy of twenty years ago, and in spite of heroic attempts to modernize it with references to Gershwin and Monsieur Minsky the story (which is an adaptation of the stage play, "Our Wives") remains dull and stiff in the ankles.

But there is the Herbert music, as fresh and as delightful as ever, especially the now almost immortal "When You're Away," and the still bubbling "Personality."

It would take a lot of snap to fix "The Only Girl" up for screen material; but with the Herbertian score a neat, snoozy, high-class picture of comic marriage infelicity and tomfoolery might be evolved.

The plot is as thin as the shadow of a ghost, mainly about a boy and a girl collaborating on a musical comedy. Around these two circle a painter, a broker, a valet and a ritzy crowd of the Yawn-and-Yellow Set.

It flip-flopped in quick order in spite of a competent cast of singers.

CAVIAR

A great raft of people had a hand in this musical comedy, "Caviar." But in spite of some exotic and hot-cha dances and some really superb singing by Nanette Guilford and George Houston, the thing doesn't spruce up even for summer fare.

The book contains little that is new for Hollywood digging.

There is a famous Russian singer. There is also a royal-looking street singer (Venice, of course).

Now the famous warbler wants to be a princess (Russian preferred). Believe it or not, the street warbler is a Russian prince.

The Prince "can be had," and a swap is made. He goes through the ceremony blindfolded. When the bandage is removed he sees the fair lady who has evoked his song. Before the honeymoon begins they are pried apart by a former lover.

There are several songs that are tuny. But it's all pretty threadbare stuff even for the Hog-Calling Picture Circuit.

FURNISHED ROOMS

Ragnhilde Bruland wrote this three acts of sosh.

Scene: a cheap lodging-house. Ann Hadley comes to the Big Cit. to get a yob. Rose, one of the roomers in this buggy dump, comes to her help. Did Ann need it? I can't answer you. I'm just telling you.

Rose has had an affair with Frank Foster, inn-keeper. Now, Rose looks as husky as Maggie Cline when she threw down McCloskey. But I'm only telling you.

Frank now makes a play at Ann. The girl (she's a Clean Thing, whose brother is no doubt in the navy and whose Mother Was a Lady, as Paddy the Pig used to sing it—remember?)—the girl, as I said, faints dead away.

Although Foster runs a dump like this, his son is just out of a college as a civil engineer. He was a diamond when he entered Yale. He now comes out a pebble.

Son gives pop hell (leetle gun-play) and shoos the old man off of Ann.

So what? You guess—I'm only telling you.

Community Honors Midwest Showman

A display of community cooperation, said by Midwest film and theatre men to be extremely rare in the industry, was accorded John W. Davis, exhibitor at Higginsville, Mo., when he recently opened his new theatre, the Davis. Prior to the opening, civic leaders and church people formed a committee with a minister as chairman and sold out the entire house, which has a capacity of 750, at $1 a seat. All tickets were disposed of by noon of the opening day.

Ceremonies on the stage prior to the initial performance were made the occasion for an elaborate eulogy of Mr. Davis for his civic-mindedness and his willingness to support local projects and organizations during the five years he has been an exhibitor in Higginsville. The chairman of the ticket-selling campaign gave a check for $750, representing the proceeds, to the mayor of the town, who in turn presented it to Mr. Davis, saying that the check represented only a small part of what the community owed him for his cooperation on its behalf. Many film and theatre men from Kansas City attended the opening.

STAMBOUL QUEST

MGM

This is a drama of Love and the Great War. It's not a war story. War, its danger, adventure, symbolically accentuates the motivating love story. The original story and screen play are by Leo Birinski, author of "Mata Hari." The director, Sam Wood, is credited with many hits, including "Hold Your Man," "The Barbarian" and "Christopher Bean."

Myrna Loy has the leading role. Her recent appearance in "Men in White," "The Thin Man" and, because of the recent fistic debacle in New York, "Prize Fighter and the Lady," have given her a real box office value. The opposite lead role is taken by George Brent, long absent from the screen but previously in several Warner pictures. Supporting players list three of the most colorful heavy menaces of the screen, Lionel Atwill, C. Henry Gordon and Douglass Dumbrille. Others in the cast of importance are Christian Rub, Rudolph Amendt, Robert Glerkler, Reginald Barlow, Leo Carroll (a newcomer) and Judith Voselli.

Timed to 1915, the locales being Berlin, the Near East and Stamboul, the yarn is an adventure in love and danger. Miss Loy is a spy, clever and resourceful, trusted and feared, a price on her head, watched continually by friend and foe alike. Under her exotic spell comes a young American, Brent, a doctor, yet a playboy ready for fun or fight. Colored by the alluring atmosphere of semi-oriental life, the thrill of danger continually present, it builds to gripping situations. Here and there are thrilling bits of conflict action, roaring guns, soldiers marching to death, but it always comes back to its basic premise of a dangerous woman whose presence is perilous to every one with whom she comes in contact.

The story promises plenty of thrill; likewise it indicates much that is new with which to sell it. It offers the advantage of quality material to entertain and names of value on which to base an intriguing, colorful advance showmanship campaign.

THE FOUNTAIN

Radio

This is an idyllic love story, told against the stark panorama of World War hatreds, distrusts, and the havoc of conflict. It is based on Charles Morgan's widely read novel of the same title. The screen play is by Jane Murfin, whose experience with "Silver Cord," "Ann Vickers" and "Double Harness" should prove valuable in this connection, and by Samuel Hoffenstein, who adapted "Song of Songs" and "Love Me Tonight," pictures which have a relative romantic dramatic parallel to "The Fountain." The director is John Cromwell, who made "Double Harness," "Spitfire" and "Of Human Bondage."

In the picture is Ann Harding. Brian Aherne, who previously appeared on the screen in "Song of Songs," has the opposite lead role. The supporting cast includes many valuable box office names, such as Paul Lukas, recently in "Affairs of a Gentleman" and "I Give My Love;" Jean Hersholt, currently in "Men in White;" Violet Kemble-Cooper, who was seen in "Our Betters"; Ralph Forbes, Sara Haden, Barbara Barondess, Rudolph Amendt, currently in "Stamboul Quest," and Betty Alden.

Emotion-stirring human interest motivates the dramatic love story. The locale is a palace in Holland. Aherne, interned British aviator, is paroled to the palace. There he finds Ann Harding, his childhood sweetheart, is married to Lukas, a German officer. Much as they fight against it, their old love is reawakened. Because of conflicting sympathies for and against the warring nations, the affair is loaded with dynamite for the two English lovers. It builds to powerful drama as Lukas, brought home wounded, stirs every wifely devotion. Yet at the same time, a bond of affection is welded between him and Aherne that creates such an atmosphere that no one can guess what will happen until Lukas' wounds, proving fatal, remove him from the earthly turmoil after commending Miss Harding and Aherne to each other.

Having the elements of quality entertainment, this picture is of the type to exploit as class and mass attraction.

Warner

Here is a love drama which, because of the historical events against which it is played and the ability of the two principal artists who play it, looms as the type of showmanship picture that comes once in a blue moon. It is based on a biographical novel by H. Bruce Lockhart which had a wide circulation. The screen play is by Laird Doyle. Direction is by Michael Curtiz, whose most recent picture is "The Key."

Leslie Howard and Kay Francis are the leading players. Other important actors are William Gargan, Phillip Reed, Irving Pichel, Walter Byron, Halliwell Hobbes, J. Carol Naish, Doris Lloyd and Paul Porcasi.

The locale is Moscow. The time is that of the outbreak of the Russian Revolution. The occasion for the thrilling drama and romance is the effort which the Allied Powers exerted to prevent the Soviets making a separate peace treaty with Germany. As familiar historical figures and events flash across the screen, Kay Francis is an aristocrat, a modern Joan of Arc dedicated to the cause of the workers and peasants. She meets Leslie Howard, British agent, sent by his government to prevent the menace to the Allied Cause. With him Miss Francis falls in passionate love. One minute she is all Red, then his enemy, next she is his burning lover, then she betrays him. Romantic and dramatic conflict builds to an attempt on Lenin's life and Howard is suspected. His whereabouts revealed to the terrorizing Cheka by Miss Francis, she joins him in what seems to be a rendezvous with death only to have Lenin's recovery firmly establish the Soviet Republic and making it possible for Howard to take Miss Francis back to England with him.

Produced in authentic and convincing fashion, dealing in a timely motivating topic, this appears to be the kind of gripping entertainment that justifies powerful and sensational showmanship of unlimited diversification.

STUDENT TOUR

MGM

There's much of interest to think about in this picture. Its title suggests something light, sparkling, gay and merry—collegiate capers and campus Romeos and Juliets, and trips in intriguing places. That's what it is. But it's also unusual experiment. Two different kinds of comics, Charles Butterworth and Jimmy Durante, represent the marquee value names. Although, looking down the list of characters, Monte Blue is there and the name Florine McKinney has a familiar sound. But all the rest are new. Maxine Doyle has a local reputation in Washington, D. C., where she was mistress of ceremonies in a theatre for several seasons. The others, save track athlete Herman Brix, are unknown. Phil Regan, Doug Fowley, Betty Grable, Fay McKenzie, Bobby Gordon, Mary Loos and Pauline Brooks are listed.

The idea of the story is this: A college crew wins a regatta. The boys, together with the coeds, are sent off on a tour. Durante is the assistant coach, Butterworth the professorial chaperon. The trip takes them to China and India, its travel spectacle being climaxed by a lively swimming carnival in the pool that rests in front of the famous Taj Mahal.

The original story and screen play are by Arthur Block and George Seaton. Direction is by Charles Riesner, who recently made "The Showoff," "The Chief" and "You Can't Buy Everything." It is being produced by Monta Bell. Music and lyrics are by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed.

It appears that entertainment will be the showmanship of this show. Coming from MGM, it is almost sure to have plenty of novel, lively and colorful production value. Logically the young folk are the principal showmanship objectives which call for that exciting night-before-a-big-game brand of exploitation.

THE DRAGON MURDER CASE

Warner

In this bizarre mystery murder thriller, the Philo Vance of "The Kennel Murder Case," "The Bishop Murder Case" and "The Canary Murder Case" is brought back with Warren William in the leading role. The story is by S. S. Van Dine. The screen play is by F. Hugh Herbert, who recently did "By Candlelight" and "Journal of Crime," and by Robert M. Lee, who did "Kennel Murder Case," "Fog Over Frisco" and "Return of the Terror." Adaptation is by Rian James. The director, H. Bruce Humberstone, will be remembered for this type of picture in connection with "The Crooked Circle" and more recently for "Merry Wives of Reno" and "Goodbye, Love."

The players supporting William in the principal roles are all well known screen names, such as Margaret Lindsay, in many recent Warner pictures, Lyle Talbot, Robert Barrat, Eugene Pallette, Robert McWade, Helen Lowell, Dorothy Tree, George E. Stone.

A blood-curdling thriller from first to last, the story is also full of that brand of contrasting situation comedy that has made the Van Dine such popular mass reading and screen entertainment. While drama and mystery naturally are the sustaining elements, romance peculiar to the type of story is not lacking. It concerns a series of mysterious disappearances and murders on the estate of an enigmatic explorer. All are attributed to a fearsome flying dragon which lurks in the swimming pool. It's natural to know just how William will go about solving the crimes as it is to anticipate the comedy contributed by the amazed authorities Pallette and McWade, just as it is to suspicion who the menace is and why.

It's the kind of yarn that opens the door for a rescue of all the crime, mystery, thrill gags of any of the Van Dine's and also makes possible the adaptation of some new ones to convince the public that the picture is entirely different.

MEXICAN FIELD SEEN IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Own Producers Make Only 4 Per Cent of the 600 Pictures Shown Annually in Mexico, Campaign Committee Finds

Mexico City Correspondent

Mexican motion picture makers are urged to exert the greatest efforts toward becoming a dominant factor in domestic film entertainment and taking advantage of a "brilliant opportunity" they have in Central America, in an open letter sent by General Rafael E. Melgar, chairman of the central nationalistic campaign committee, to the National Motion Picture Production Company, Mexico's pioneer talking picture producer. General Melgar had just returned from Central America, where he went as a member of the excursion of Mexican business men organized by the Confederation of Mexican Chambers of Commerce for the purpose of increasing Mexico's trade with her sister republics.

General Melgar advises Mexican producers to become more nationalistic, to eliminate English titles in their productions and company names and to do their own distributing in Central America. Salient features of his message are:

Demand More Mexican Product

"Mexican-made motion pictures enjoy the greatest prestige in all Central American countries. They score an instant success wherever they are exhibited, and Central American exhibitors have but one complaint about our pictures—they cannot get enough of them to meet the demand.

"It is absolutely indispensable that Mexican producers refuse to place their productions in the hands of foreign distributors. By distributing themselves, they will avoid ruinous competition, which results from the activities of two distributors, a thing that is now the case in Salvador. It would be to the advantage of Mexican producers to appoint a general distributor for Guatemala, Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaraugua and Panama.

Urges Use of Spanish Names

"Titles in English must be eliminated at all cost from Mexican-made pictures, as such titles inspire unfavorable comments in Central America, when they are encountered in films produced in Mexico. Our producers can and should avail themselves of a profitable subsidiary production, the making of short subjects, such as newsreels and scenic revues. These will make Mexico, her landscapes, cities, customs, etc., better known abroad, especially in Central America. Producers should include varied short subjects in consignments of full length features shipped to the sister republics to the south. It would be best to have these shorts in sound, especially with typically Mexican music."

General Melgar urged that Mexican producers exercise the utmost care in making pictures with historical background so that people abroad may gain accurate knowledge of Mexico's history and the psychology of Mexicans.

"I strongly recommend that all Mexican producing companies adopt purely Spanish names," he said. "We have such companies as La Aguila Films, Alfa Films, Aspa Films de Mexico, Consolidada Films, Film Exchange and Mexico Films. There is no reason why Mexican producing companies should be known by foreign names. There are but two Mexican producers that have completely Spanish names, La Mexicana Elaboradora de Peliculas (Mexican Motion Picture Elaboration Co.) and La Nacional Productora de Peliculas (National Motion Picture Production Co.).

"As the central nationalistic campaign committee has ascertained that approximately 600 motion pictures are exhibited in Mexico each year and that Mexican producers account for but 4 per cent of these pictures, and as pictures made in this country are finding ready acceptance at home and abroad, I suggest that the producers take immediate steps toward increasing their output in an endeavor to fill domestic demands as much as is possible."

The Mexican-made talker, "La Llorona" ("The Wailing Woman"), a socalled "shocker," based upon an old legend, is eminently successful in Central America, the Ministry of Foreign Relations learned from the Mexican charge d'affaires in Panama. This picture was produced by the Central Cinematographica Co. and did well in Mexico.

Stench Bomb Causes Small Damage in Missouri House

A smoke and stench bomb was exploded in the La May theatre, Luxemburg, Mo., last week, causing little property damage and injuring none of the 400 people in the theatre at the time. Theatre employees quickly extinguished a small blaze resulting from the explosion. The theatre was destroyed by fire following a similar explosion in 1932. It is operated with non-union projectionists, by Leo Lau and members of his family.

Wins Picketing Verdict

Jack Barden, owner of the La Reta theatre, Toronto, was awarded a jury verdict of $200 last week in his suit against five members of Local 173 of the projectionists' union, charging them with directing patronage away from his theatre during picketing.

Allow Cornwell Estate Claims

Claims totaling $410,748 have been allowed against the estate of Frederick L. Cornwell, real estate operator, attorney and former theatre owner of St. Louis, who died in February, 1933. Claimants were bondholders on theatre property he had built in Moline, Ill.

MPPDA Lists 6,200 Players

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Hollywood branch, planning its own directories of available Hollywood players, has listed a total of 6,200 performers living permanently in the production center and gaining a livelihood from the motion picture. The directories are to be published in cooperation with the eight major studios which are members of the MPPDA.

One of the directories, already published, contains the names of 1,500 players most frequently used in important supporting roles, classified in 55 different sections. The second directory, not yet issued, will contain the names of 4,700 now working in "bits." A third directory will include the photographs of most of the players listed.

She Learned About Sailors

(Fox - John Stone)

Comedy Romance

Built for laughs, this roisterous comedy romance has that colorful entertaining quality ordinarily so appealing to the masses. Fast moving, catchy and zippy without being sexy, it's a lively story of rollicking battleship jack-tars, also the story of a girl who didn't want to fall in love but did and then almost lost her man. It is tuned to the zestful pitch of carefree youth, contrasting its basic romantic premise with hilarious hokum comedy, tinging both with a musical touch as Miss Faye sings "Here's the Key to My Heart" and the continuation of the theme song, "She Learned About Sailors."

Atmosphere of the U. S. Navy prevails, with locales of the action an Asiatic port, a battleship and the environs of the Los Angeles naval base. Following the axiom that a sailor must have a sweetheart in every port, Larry falls head over heels in love with Jean, star entertainer at the Mandalay Club. Music girl glamour and colorful dancing shots accentuating the romantic setup, the sailor, finding that he's getting nowhere fast, decides that his relations with her should be purely platonic. But Cupid's darts have severely wounded Jean and when she gets excited about the new boy friend, in a situation which becomes comically complicated by the efforts of Rubenstein to sign her up for his Buenos Aires night club, Larry decides that he's getting into hot water.

Faking a note that marriage is no career for a roving gob, Larry entrusts it delivery to his two pals, Peanuts and Eddie. Instead, they compose a burning epistle which more than throws a monkey wrench into Larry's fade-out plans. Thus the stage is set for the hectic finale, a wild fistic melee and a smartly arranged marriage ceremony.

The show has plenty of merit to interest the regular run of the mill theatre goers. There's enough novelty about it to set it distinctly apart from the regular light comedy idea. There is a full quota of readily adaptable showmanship, which should be put across in the same gay and lively spirit that motivates the picture. Ingenious and thoughtful publicity should convey the idea that it's all-around satisfying entertainment for the whole family.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Fox. A John Stone production. Directed by George Marshall. Screen play by William Conselman and Henry Johnson. Music by Richard Whiting. Lyrics by Sidney Clare. Dances by Sammy Lee. Photographed by Harry Jackson. Running time, 80 minutes. Release date, July 6, 1934.

His Greatest Gamble

Dramatic Romance

The demand for something new is graphically answered in this picture. A dramatic love story, it does not, however, come within the common meaning of that term. It's a story of fatherly love and sacrifice. Making him a gay, a lovable hero, it makes his ex-wife and the child's mother an iron-hearted villainness. It is well acted and directed so that the full value of the dramatic premise is attained. As it is one of those year-covering shows, it is rather slowly tempoed; an element that accentuates its impressiveness. At times lively and gay, yet continually holding to its serious motif, it carries a deep human interest appeal, thus being the kind of story with peculiar appeal for the more mature contingents of the patronage. Yet it has color and punch for the younger folk. Certainly it's a woman's picture, with many opportunities to wipe away a few tears.

There are two locales; the Mediterranean Riviera and later suburban New York. Philip has stolen his little daughter Alice (here convincingly played by Edith Fellows) from his ex-wife, Florence. An unlucky gambler, the pair tread a rocky road, but a happy one so made by the great love for each other. When the mother attempts to recover the child, Philip accidentally creates a situation that results in the death of Bernice by asphyxiation. Arrested, parted from the child in dramatic situations, he makes her promise that she will write to him every week during his sentence of 15 years. The girl grows up, and because she never hears from her father, together with the love stultifying influences of her mother, comes to believe that she has been forgotten.

With only a few more years to serve, Philip learns from Jenny that Alice is in America and because of the mental cruelties of her mother has become an invalid. Escaping jail, he makes his way to America. Invading Florence's home to be immediately recognized by her, but identifying himself to Alice (Dorothy Wilson) as her Uncle John. So powerful have been the mother's influences that the girl believes herself unable to walk. Consequently she is deprived of every joy in life, the most tragic of which has been the maternally wrecked romance between Alice and Stephen. Stephen and Philip getting together along with the Butler provides a comedy relief through which Philip learns the whole story. Then, dramatically, he chides, berates and in almost hypnotic manner excites the girl to take a step. But the law is catching up with the escaped convict. It only remains for the girl to assert her rights, for Stephen to claim his own love; for Florence to be confounded and for detectives to take the willing-to-go Philip back to the little French jail.

Where something novelly different is desired, here is a picture very much out of the rut of common-place. It carries a definite and sincere charm. Because it is different it requires a different method of selling. Old stock phrases hardly will fill the bill. The entertainment interest of the story should be uniquely emphasized. A drive directed at mothers and daughters, and fathers, too, should be the central factor in a business building campaign. Get over the fact that this picture is heart-touching human interest entertainment, a quality picture in caliber.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Most Precious Thing in Life

(Columbia)

Drama

This is a serious drama of mother love keyed to stir the emotions and concentrate sympathy on the central feminine character. Realistic and heart-quickening, it is essentially a human interest show, the kind ordinarily most appealing to women. As there is an element of sacrifice about it which depicts a mother's love as the greatest force for good and justice in the world, it is a picture that demands attention from start to finish. Thus, even though there is a definite youthful color all the way through this story of two generations, its appeal is mostly to the more mature portions of audiences.

The major locale is a college town. Bob Kelsey, rich athletic hero, loves and marries Waitress Ellen and is the father of her child. The inevitable conflict of different social strata ensuing, Bob's parents force a divorce. Years pass. Young Chris, more or less a snob, following in his father's footsteps comes to the same college where Ellen is working as the dormitory "biddy." She knows the boy, but conceals her identity from him. Athletic hero that he is, he gives all the evidences of a spoiled son of wealth, even to repeating his father's falling in love with a poor girl, Patty.

Following that familiar motherly inspiration, the boy goes out to great deeds on the gridiron. Then comes the revelation when Father Bob finds Chris in love with Patty. As conflict ensues between Bob and his ex-wife, Ellen pointing out the tragedy that was wrought on their lives when others interfered with the course of true love, and convinces Bob that Chris' happiness will be best assured by letting him marry Patty.

The picture should be sold on its merits, with emphasis devoted to the entertainment values of its moral and social lessons in which particular attention is paid to the title intent.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Comedy

The entertainment in this picture is its showmanship. It's clean, wholesome, almost farcical comedy premised on a now familiar situation. Natural and easy dialogue is balanced by action that at times becomes hectic. While fun is the main objective, the sustaining romantic angle is given an odd twist as an interloping country cousin runs off with the bridegroom that was being stalked by the entire Page family.

As acceptable entertainment, whatever lack there is in outstanding name value to the cast is compensated by the quality of the amusement. Contrary to usual production technique, the punch of the show is not confined to a few lead characters. In this, all the players have a chance to bask in the spotlight. To attain this, it occasionally looks as if the script was ignored and as a result Edna May Oliver's antics are almost completely apart from the story and some of the most hilarious bits in the picture are provided by the Japanese butler.

The picture is modern, gay and lively. No attempt is made to preach a moral or teach a lesson. It merely is light amusement. Based on the familiar rich who have come into poor station, the Page family is bravely trying to keep up a front with the idea that if they can marry daughter Carolyn off to a wealthy Britisher, Booky, its fortunes will be recouped. Quartered in swanky Santa Barbara, Pa and Ma Page (Grant Mitchell and Billie Burke) have many things to think of, not the least of which is their effort to convince Grandma Maude that gadding about in a polo costume and riding the ponies is something that she shouldn't do. Into the set-up comes a wild and woolly Texas cousin, Arabella, living to the motto "Be Good, Sweet Maid, and Let Who Will Be Clever." Here the eccentric fun starts, as sensing the situation she connives to restore the lost Page wealth by suggesting investments that go down rather than up. While the Pollyanna, she wears the bride's clothes and also manages to crash her way into the affections of Booky, who was being staked out for Joan, and marries him for herself after an exciting elopement.

While all this is going on, Erp and Victoria, who have been dashing in and out in bathing suits, with him hardly saying a word, manage to get married themselves and everything turns out grand for the elder Pages as it develops that Erp has more money than he knows what to do with.

An advance campaign that takes advantage of the psychology of the title, hinting just enough at the theme of the story but not revealing too much, looks to be the most effective way of selling the picture. It's a natural for topical tieups with all kinds of commercial houses. By making the picture a sort of civic, business-boosting affair, it's easily possible to make it the basis for contacts with Chambers of Commerce and merchants' associations for a new buying season. In that way, the doors can be opened to interest stimulating publicity that otherwise would be unavailable.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by RKO Radio. Producer, Glendon Allvine. Directed by William Seiter. From the play by Alden Nash. Screen play by Ray Harris. Photographed by Nick Musuraca. Running time, 75 minutes. Release date, July 20, 1934.

Western

Cut to the usual and popular pattern, this western presents John Wayne, one of the favorites of the western films, and his beautiful white horse. All the anticipated action is there, as Wayne, under suspicion as a bandit and a bad man, makes effective use of an assisted escape from prison to track down the gang which is guilty of the crime for which he was held.

In support of Wayne are such old-timers among western players as George Hayes, Yakima Canutt and others, while Alberta Vaughn supplies, with Wayne, the romantic interest. The exhibitor has little opportunity to sell the film in any but the usual manner for western material, but that, with the Wayne name, and played at the proper time, should be sufficient.

Wayne, riding through the hills, comes upon a roadside restaurant and saloon containing a player piano in lively action, several dead men, each with a gun clutched in a hand, and a rifled safe. A posse, headed by the sheriff and a man who is apparently hunch-backed and dumb, though able to hear, finds Wayne and he is arrested as one of the gang. The niece of the owner, who had been hiding and saw the proceedings, releases Wayne from jail when he promises her to find the gang, and permits him to escape. It is learned that the gang who committed the crime was headed by George Hayes, as Black Marvin, a notorious bandit, who is at the same time Matt the Mute. Wayne meets Miss Vaughn at the saloon, but the posse is in pursuit and Wayne is forced to make a hurried departure, leaping from his horse into a river to escape the posse. Swimming into a rapids, he finds himself under a waterfall, behind which is the hideout of Hayes and his gang. He is forced to remain with them, and Miss Vaughn is brought in. Hayes is after the property which came into her possession at the death of her uncle. She refuses and is locked in a room. Wayne, arousing her at night, gets from her the key to the hidden strong box in the saloon, and making good his escape, takes the money and replaces it with dynamite.

Riding back to town, he attracts the attention of the posse and the sheriff, and permits them to pursue him to the hideout of the gang. As they are captured, Wayne goes after Hayes. He and the posse arrive in time to see Hayes blow himself to bits when he tries to open the strong box. Wayne reveals himself as an express agent, and he and Miss Vaughn complete the picture on the expected romantic note.

For the youngsters, of all ages, who have a flair for the western, there is action and entertainment in this typical western effort. Play it at the weekend.—Aaronson, New York.

Evergreen

Comedy Romance with Music

There are plenty of entertainment angles in this adaptation of Jessie Matthews' Cochran-produced Adelphi stage show. It is about the biggest British musical to date, yet it is not strictly a musical, inasmuch as there is a story which has film values apart from those provided by big ballet spectacle, some fine dancing and a liberal supply of snappy song numbers. The comedy, inherent in the story instead of being tacked on, is another selling feature. Altogether, this is as good entertainment, meaning by that enjoyment, as Britain has yet sent to America.

There is "period" appeal in the opening scenes, set in 1909. Harriet Green, music hall star, is engaged to marry the Marquis of Staines and makes a goodbye appearance at the old Tivoli. (There's an excellent replica of this famous variety house, now replaced by a supercinema.) An old lover reappearing with intent to blackmail Harriet because of the existence of their illegitimate daughter, the marriage is off. Harriet disappears, leaving Harriet junior in the care of her "dresser."

In due course Harriet II is due to make her stage debut, and an ingenious publicity man thinks it would be great to pass her off as her own mother. The makeup is so good that Staines really thinks he is meeting his old flame—and that the publicity boy is a grownup version of the baby who caused all the trouble. To keep the publicity pot boiling they have to pretend to live as mother and son in a house provided by the benevolent Staines. Incidentally they pay hush-money to the first Harriet's disreputable lover.

Finally Harret finds it too much to bear and astonishes the public, who have come to see the first night of the "aged" star's new production, by kicking off her old garments and dancing as no 60-year-old ever did. The conclusion, burlesque, shows her court acquittal of a charge of defrauding the public.

Jessie Matthews has better opportunities in the film than she had in even the stage version. Her individual dancing is delightful and the ensemble scenes support her talent with some fine screen pictures.

Exploitation aspects are the mother-daughter, son-lover complications; the musical and spectacular values; the interest of the pre-War London shots; the backstage atmosphere. The British origin here, too, should be an asset. It is a production of a stage hit from an historic London theatre, with the theatre star.—Allan, London.

Grand Canary

(Fox - Jesse Lasky)

Drama

Because of its theme, the appeal of this picture is necessarily limited. In story and manner of presentation there is but little potential sock showmanship with which to kindle quick mass interest. Essentially it's a drama of an odd regeneration. That quality is accompanied by an equally odd romantic situation. Keyed as an emotional sympathy-stirring human interest show, it creates a strange paradox as audience sympathies concentrate themselves on a supporting player rather than either of the leads. As an impressive pitch is aimed at, action is necessarily slow and much dialogue required. There being no gripping situations, fusing audience attention and creating a patronage for the picture resolves itself into a thorough understanding of the story, consolidating the appealing elements and applying knowledge of local dislikes and likes in preparing an interest stimulating advance.

As it's far too deep for all but the older adolescents, salesmanship should be directed at the adults. While advantage is taken of name values in cast and production credits, references to the picture should carry a sincere and serious note, care being taken, however, to point up entertainment values, even though there is no hooplah in the show.

Stripped of the "no value" details, here's the story: Victim of inflamed publicity because his serums have failed to cure, Dr. Leith, branded a murderer, leaves London determined that death via the liquor route is the only salvation. On the boat a romantic situation is created between him, Susan Tranter, a nurse, and the married Lady Mary. He is loved by Susan, in love with Lady Mary. The boat reaches Santa Cruz, Canary Islands. A yellow fever epidemic is raging. Goaded by Susan, Leith realizes his duty to humanity as a doctor. Quartered in eccentric Marquesa's home, Lady Mary learns from Robert Tranter the Doctor's whereabouts. Going to him, she is stricken by the pestilence. Dramatic conflict ensues as Leith applies his serums to cure the woman he loves, while the nurse who loves him faithfully aids, though the woman stands in her pathway to love. The serums prove effective, Lady Mary is saved, only to have her husband arrive and take her away. One hope dashed, Leith and Susan plunge into the infested interior and symbolically are portrayed as conquering the scourge.

In the anti-climax, realizing that the saving of Lady Mary's life forever parted her from the Doctor, Susan and her brother happily establish a little social welfare center and the finale has Leith back in London being acclaimed as a heroic medical scientist by those who had condemned him and a cable from Lady Mary saying that she has explained everything to her husband and that she soon will join him to consummate their great love.

It appears that the successful selling of this show can best be accomplished via the printed page. Exploitation possibilities are meager, and if attempted should be carefully handled lest an adverse impression be created. The contrast which this picture represents in relation to the current trend should also be emphasized, and while effort is made to hold the interest of the regular theatre-goers, special attention should be given to those who ordinarily respond to a more serious attraction.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Let's Talk It Over

(Universal)

Comedy-Drama

The recent appearance in the waters of the Hudson River at New York of the entire United States fleet imparts to this story of the tough sailor who was browbeaten by society an opportunity for active selling. The unusual interest aroused in the east by the presence of the fleet must surely have spread, at least to a certain extent, to other sections of the country.

It is a lively and entertaining piece, chiefly by reason of the active performance presented by Chester Morris, as Mike McCann, the roughneck from the fleet, who takes a licking from New York's young bluebloods, but returns the compliment eventually. There is, however, comparatively little of the Navy in the film, the greater part of it being concerned with Mike's frantic efforts to get around to the mental state of the "400," and his final effort, successful, in making over at least one member of that carefree and moneyed group. That this one is a girl brings romance into the picture and the life of Mike, which should open the way for an appeal to the feminine element of the patronage.

Beside Morris the cast is bulwarked by Mae Clarke, as the society girl in the case, Frank Craven, who, as the understanding uncle of the girl, offers an unusually natural and easy performance; John Warburton, as Miss Clarke's fiance, and Andy Devine, in rather a minor role, as a sailor buddy of Mike, who provides a measure of comedy.

Mike, off on shore leave in New York with his two buddies, "rescues" Miss Clarke at the beach, when she cries for help for the fun of it, after Warburton had left her in the water. Mike takes advantage of his opportunity to get in with the "swell gang" whether he is wanted or not, presuming on his heroism in the matter of the "rescue." His boastful, swaggering manner makes him an amusing thing for the bluebloods, and he is tolerated. So impressed is he that he promises Miss Clarke he will quit the Navy and go where the big money is. He does and dresses in civilian clothes the like of which the wealthy young people have never known before.

Miss Clarke bets with Warburton that she can make over Mike in a given period. She finds him a job in her uncle's brokerage firm, and in a short time Mike walks and talks and dresses not very differently from others of the group with whom he associates. Miss Clarke goes away, Morris is unable to find her and he is miserable. Her uncle, disapproving the manner in which she secretly makes sport of the former sailor, and actually liking Mike, reads her a lecture concerning her attitude toward him. Mike suddenly learns of the bet and the manner in which he has been a standing joke for all his "friends." Slightly intoxicated, he drives thunderously to the mountain camp where she is staying, denounces her, the friends, knocks out Warburton and is seriously hurt in a breakneck dash down the mountainside on his return. As Miss Clarke nurses him back to health, she comes to the realization that she is in love with him.

With the Navy and the swaggering sailor angle for the men, and the romance complication for the women, the exhibitor has entertainment to sell here.—Aaronson, New York.

Life of Vergie Winters

(RKO Radio)

Drama

Here is a production which combines a strong romantic interest with the always powerful mother-love theme in a picture which has been unstintingly produced on an elaborate scale. An adult attraction, it essentially possesses those thematic elements which are "naturals" for the women.

Of genuine importance to the exhibitor in the selling of the picture is its origin, an adaptation of the story of the same title by Louis Bromfield, who is among the more widely read novelists of the country. In the advertising the title should be definitely tied in with the name of the author of the original story, thus taking full advantage of any attraction which the Bromfield name might have.

The strong cast is headed by the attractive Ann Harding, whose ability and popularity are selling assets. In support of her are John Boles, Helen Vinson and Betty Furness in particular.

Centering about a problem of illicit love, which carries its sting and heartache for one woman over a period of 20 years, the film is characterized by a note of heavy drama, almost tragedy, which hangs over the life of the heroine almost continuously. There is an illegitimate child.

The film opens as Vergie Winters, appearing old and haggard, looks down from her small town prison cell room at the elaborate funeral for John Shadwell, important political figure. In flashback is told the story of the events of 20 years which brought her to that place. Vergie Winters, estranged from her embittered father, operates a small millinery shop. To the town with his bride returns John Shadwell, played by Boles, a budding and ambitious politician. Quickly it is established that he and Vergie had loved each other, and that his departure had been by reason of a lie her father told him many months before.

The two carry on their love, he staying with her during every spare moment that he is in the town of his birth, she living only for those moments. She leaves the shop, goes to a large city, has a child, and Boles adopts it, telling his phlegmatic wife, Miss Vinson, that it is the child of an old friend. Vergie returns to her shop and carries on as before, but now the breath of scandal, her name linked with that of the rapidly progressing Boles, comes to disturb them both. Eventually when the child, Miss Furness, reaches the age of 19, and is engaged, Boles warns his wife he wants a divorce. Then Miss Vinson tells Miss Furness for the first time that she is adopted, and reveals to Boles that she has long known of the affair with Vergie Winters. Boles goes to her, Miss Vinson follows and kills Boles. Escaping, she leaves Miss Harding with the body and her arrest follows. The tragic ending is partially offset by a pardon for Miss Harding and her return to her daughter, who knows the truth, and the daughter's young husband.—Aaronson, New York.

Produced and distributed by RKO Radio. Directed by Alfred Santell. From the story by Louis Bromfield. Screen play by Jane Murfin. Edited by George Hively. Photographed by Lucien Andriot. Recorded by D. A. Cutler. Release date, June 22, 1934. Running time, 82 minutes.

Are We Civilized?

(Raspin)

Drama

Although nowhere in the film is the name Germany either spoken or printed, this entire production is obviously propaganda directed in opposition to the present regime and the current Nazi activity of Hitler and his henchmen in Germany.

The picture at the same time brings back to the screen William Farnum, in the role of the wise old teacher of the misguided leaders of Germany, who calls upon history to indicate that such policies as are being pursued are leading the country to ruin and the world into another World War. As his lecture in defense of human rights progresses, the flashback method is utilized to portray the several most significant milestones of civilization, from Moses on the Mount to the World War.

The selling possibilities of the film are difficult to estimate. On the one hand the material smacks of pictorial record and not sufficiently of straight drama. On the other hand, the subject with which it deals, and the terrifically vital query which its title poses, are points which are at the moment stirring the mind of the public of the world to seek an answer. It is this fact which must be the exhibitor's focal selling point. Newspaper headlines, day to day, are in themselves a tieup with the material with which the picture is concerned. The exhibitor should not overlook the fact that Farnum is the principal player. His years of experience as an actor of note are reflected in the performance he renders. The other players are not especially familiar to the regular run of screen audience.

Farnum, head of an international news agency, comes from America to the land of his birth to find a strict censorship about the country like a hangman's noose encircling the neck of a condemned man. His son, Leroy Mason, active head of the agency in the country, is engaged to Anita Louise, daughter of Frank McGlynn, who is the chief of the censorship bureau. When telegraphic copy from Farnum's agency is held up by the censor, Farnum and McGlynn argue the matter, but McGlynn is adamant. At a banquet in his honor, Farnum, despite McGlynn's warning that he guard his remarks, launches into a decisive denunciation of the freedom-destroying activity of the leaders of the government. He is taken home by his son, and meanwhile soldiers are set to ransacking private homes for books condemned by the censor, which are burned in the street. The Farnum office is wrecked, and the son hurt in attempting to protect his property. At Farnum's home the soldiers are momentarily stopped by Farnum. McGlynn enters, and Farnum begins a lengthy plea for abandonment of the censorship activities.

He reviews history, and in flashback are seen Moses, Budda, Confucius, Caesar, Christ, Mohammed, Columbus, Washington, Lincoln, Napoleon and the events with which each was concerned. Farnum goes into the street, refusing to retract his remarks, and is stoned by the mob. He dies, but he has wrought a change in the stone-cold McGlynn and won his son's promise to carry on the fight.—AARONSON, New York.

Comedy-Drama

There is light and lively entertainment in this production, which concerns the successful attempt of the nervy young reporter to get his story, block the plan of large financial interests to ruin a former rival, and complete a romance with the daughter of the man he saved from great financial loss. There is considerable comedy spotted throughout the film, and that plus the romance and the bits of considerably motive action, serve to make the picture satisfactory entertainment.

The title, rather meaningless, is lacking in any quality of marquee enticement, and the players are but fairly well known, so that the exhibitor is rather under the necessity of concentrating in his selling on the story itself and the romantic and comedy elements involved. The cast is headed by Frank Craven, who, as the big railroad man, presents a performance which for freshness and naturalness would be difficult to equal. Though his name may be unknown, the exhibitor should do no less than bill him well, since the audience will not be disappointed and the buildup may be of real value in future appearances of the player. In addition are Ray Walker, as the reporter; Sally Blane, as Craven's daughter, and Claude Gillingwater, as the rival financier.

The idea of the wealthy railroad president who is besieged on the one hand by indigestion, and on the other by an elderly old-maid sister whose constant concern is with the health and stomach of her brother, easily may be worked into good copy which should be attractive to both men and women.

Craven, in a stock market battle, wins control of a rival railroad and Walker is sent by his paper to find out what it is all about. He, and the other reporters, are refused admission to his office despite the exercise of all the wiles at Walker's command. At Craven's home, when the other reporters are denied entrance, Walker, who has learned the name of Craven's physician, arms himself with a pair of spectacles and a bag, carries a business card indicating himself as the doctor's assistant, and proceeds to ply Craven with questions and thump his chest. Miss Blane recognizes him for a reporter, warns her father, and Craven invites the doctor to attend him on a short vacation. Walker, thinking he will get the story he wants, agrees to meet Craven at his private car.

Next morning he discovers Craven has deliberately given him the wrong starting time, and pursuing the train in his car, finally catches it. Craven accidentally falls off the train, is picked up by two tramps and has the time of his life eating what he pleases and sleeping on the ground, while Walker, the sister and Miss Blane are looking frantically for him. The rival railroad men, seeing their opportunity, go to work on the stock and Craven is in danger of losing control of his railroad, not realizing his "disappearance." Through a picture in the paper and a posted reward, Walker discovers where Craven is, and despite the effort of Gillingwater's employees to prevent his return, he reaches town in time to save his control in the road. Walker and Miss Blane complete their romance, and Craven invites the two tramps to a lawn dinner at his mansion.

The film is perhaps best adapted to a midweek playing position.—AARONSON, New York.

Speaking of Relations

(MGM - Hal Roach)

Irvin Cobb on Screen

Of showmanship interest because it introduces Irvin Cobb, noted short story writer, as a screen personality, this short can be publicized to a greater degree than the ordinary featurette. Motivated by gags, rather slow moving because of repetition, the yarn concerns itself with a retired river boat captain. Addicted to the little brown jug, with a lazy inclination to spend his time fishing in the company of Frank Darien, Cobb is harassed by a nagging sister, Kathryn Ward, and pestered by a prank playing nephew, but takes it all with philosophical stoicism. Finally escaping his bedeviling relations, he goes fishing, only to have nephew Benny Baker tag along, get the pair in trouble with the game warden and set the stage for the buxom sister to be pushed into the river. It is clean and wholesome, and has its share of laughs. Hal Yates directed. In the cast also are Kathryn Clare Ward, Benny Baker, Frank Darien and Snowflake. Running time, 18 minutes.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Mickey's Steamroller

Good

There is lively entertainment of the cartoon variety in this Mickey Mouse number, in which Mickey, operating a steamroller, meets his sweetheart, a nursemaid, and stops for a chat. The two infants board the machine and start on a wild trip. Mickey is in pursuit at first, then is pursued by the animated mechanism, while the youngsters enjoy themselves. It all winds up in a crash through a building. It is an amusing subject.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Oliver the Eighth

(MGM)

Good Comedy

Laurel and Hardy, in another of their amusing comedies, this time as partners in a barber shop, manage to develop numerous laughs. Hardy answers the matrimonial letter of Mae Busch, wealthy widow, and the double-crossed Laurel goes after him. They discover the butler to be more than a little eccentric, and learn that Miss Busch plans to cut Oliver's throat, he being the eighth Oliver who has fallen into her clutches. As she finally gets to him, after amusing complications, Hardy suddenly awakens, in the barber chair, being shaved by Laurel. An amusing subject, and the team is popular.—Running time, 28 minutes.

Corn on the Cop

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

There are amusing moments in this comedy, as Harry Gribbon and Shemp Howard, as a pair of tramps, attempt to make some money and run into difficulty with a policeman. Tossed off a freight, they try to sell axle grease as corn cure, with Howard using a cellar window and a sledge hammer to induce business. By mistake they enter the wrong house, are taken for expected visitors, and are having a chummy time with the woman of the house, when her husband, a policeman with whom the boys had had a run-in, arrives to end the subject in a crash.—Running time, 20 minutes.

A Good Scout

Fair

There is only a fair amount of entertainment in this rather far-fetched comedy story, in which Tom Howard affords what amusement there is. He and George Shelton are promised $50 for each Indian they kill by a prospector who has sworn to get all the Indians he could find. With a bludgeon, a washboiler lid and a fish horn the pair waylay the Indians frightened in their direction by their employer. When he refuses to pay they handle him as they have the Indians.—Running time, 18 minutes.

The Song of Fame

(Vitaphone)

Entertaining

Miss Ruth Etting, who has attained and maintains a certain popularity on the radio as a vocalist, renders several popular numbers in pleasant and effective fashion. Woven through is a mild story which finds Miss Etting, a singing cigarette girl in a restaurant, trying to get her chance with the big producer. Her ineffectual agent finally corners the producer in a barber shop, she catches his attention, and appearing in his show, offers an opportunity for a bit of girl dance routine. A mildly entertaining subject.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Pathe Review

Of Interest

Interesting material of a general nature is presented in this, number five of the Review series. Seen are a cleverly handled photographic study of a rabbit in a child's nursery; views of tulip time in the land of that flower, Holland; Carson Robison and his Buckaroos singing a cowboy number, and an interesting study of the birth of the moon and the probable eventuality of the movements of the planets in their paths, thousands of years hence. An interesting subject.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Story Conference

(Vitaphone)

Fair

Satirizing the haphazard concoction of stories by the film studios, this subject features Lillian Roth, notable radio and stage singer, and turns out to be fair entertainment, chiefly by reason of the vocal efforts of Miss Roth. As the studio writers' group makes a valiant attempt to visualize a story for Miss Roth at less than a moment's notice, their ideas are enacted on the screen, each giving Miss Roth an opportunity to sing, with a girl chorus background, which she does in a pleasant and attractive manner.—Running time, 20 minutes.

J. C. Jenkins--His Colyum

DEAR HERALD:

You probably already know it, but there are always two sides to every question, a right side and a wrong side. Those who are on the wrong side pretty generally believe that they are right, while those on the right side know that they are right. In either case they are apt to believe that those who don't agree with them are only a few rows of radishes away from insanity.

The question of dirty, sexy pictures has bobbed up again and we are informed by the press that the Catholic people of New York (and other filling stations) have organized themselves into an association known as The Legion of Decency, having for its main object the boycotting of dirty films. We don't believe in the boycott, for it is unlawful, but it's a helluva weapon to bring home the bacon, and, according to the Legion of Decency, we are all pretty short on bacon right now.

Some of 'Em Need Fixin'

We are not one of those who believe that all of Hollywood is bad, we know some very excellent people out there, and we believe that Hollywood is not much different from hundreds of other communities, but a certain percentage of 'em need fixin' and we believe also that there are certain producers out there who should be shown that two drops of black ink will color a whole pail of pure water and that the good of the industry demands that they remove the inkbottle. (That inkbottle has been upset a lot of times that we know of.) The boycott system is a dangerous system and results should be obtained in some other manner. It is also a twin sister to censorship, and a censor board has no more moral right to say what, or what not, the other 120,000,000 residents shall see in their entertainment than it would to say that they shouldn't eat strawberry shortcake, and pretty nearly all of 'em like shortcake; at least we do.

We have been told that an edict has gone forth that any theatre not displaying the blue eagle will be denied service by the producing companies. We don't believe that, but if it is true it comes about as near to universal censorship as Hitler ever thought of.

That "Public Demand" Argument

We have heard the argument that dirt and filth and sex and wisecracks are put in pictures because of the public demand until this alibi has been worn threadbare, and only those use it who have heard somebody else say it. Had we not traveled for nine years and met thousands of theatremen and mingled with hundreds of theatre-going audiences and got their reaction to dirty pictures, that old chestnut, "the public demands it" might have had some weight with us, but when they undertake to tell us what William H. Public and his family want in pictures they are taking on some contract, even though we do live out in the wide open spaces.

It may be that The Legion of Decency will remove the inkbottle. We hope so, and we hope also that while they are doing it they will not spill ink on their own fingers, which we feel pretty sure they will not do. We have seen some who pretended to be reformers who had so much ink on their hands that they couldn't scour it off with saniflush, but that was before The Legion of Decency was organized. We are for them in any legal act they undertake and we hope they bring results, but you will recall that there used to be a guy called "Doubting Thomas." He was our uncle. And then there's another thing, as Andy Gump said to Min.

Circuits Started Dual Bills

The starting of playing double features on one bill can't be charged to the independent exhibitor. His skirts are clear, but as we see it from the top rail of the bullpen the lunacy was started by the producers owning circuit theatres, with two objects in view, one supposedly to increase receipts at the box office of their theatres, but with the main object of freezing out the little fellow and getting control of the entire exhibition field. Both objects had a flat tire and the carburetor was on the bum. It's an old saying that "competition is the life of trade," but some circuit operators have not heard of it yet. The playing of two features on one bill is evidence of one of two things, either the operator is gasping for his financial breath or he thinks it takes both features to make a decent evening's entertainment. We never liked to chance seeing a double feature bill for fear the latter viewpoint might be right. We may be altogether wrong; that's what a girl said to us once when we suggested that she ought to be kissed, but anyhow it won't hurt you to think it over.

Yesterday a fellow called us on the phone and asked us if we knew who it was talking. We told him we didn't and so he told us to guess. We guessed Tugwell, Rosenblatt, Babe Ruth or possibly Lydia E. Pinkham, but he said we were wrong, that he was from Hollywood, and so we guessed that he was Clark Gable, Raymond Hatton, Victor Shapiro or Polly Moran. Then he said, "Oh, come on down here, you don't know any more than you used to," so we went downtown and found our old friend Frank Zanuck, who used to live here. He's the father of Darryl Zanuck, who is vice-president of 20th Century Pictures Corporation.

Visitors from Hollywood

Frank was riding with Orville Stewart, who is the location manager for 20th Century. They had been to Chicago to visit the World's Fair and they came this way so that Frank could visit his old home and friends. We had a delightful visit with them which was broken up by altogether too short a stay. Mr. Stewart impressed us as a mighty fine young man and one of the main ties that holds Hollywood together. We wished we could have seen more of him as well as of Frank, but you know that a little cross-roads town like this with only one filling station can't hold the boys for long from the bright lights. Frank looked just like he did when we used to steal watermelons together from old man Merrit, and Stewart told us he would call on our friends out in Hollywood, Leo Meehan, Doug Hodges, Lin Bonner, Carlisle Jones, Chic Sale, Louise Fazenda, Joe Brown, Ralph Bellamy, Jeanette Meehan and Mildred Early. The latter two, we told him, could be found in our Hollywood office in the Pacific States Life Building.

We are sorry we asked him to call on Jeanette and Mildred because he's a pretty nifty looking guy and no telling how hard they might fall when there was no one around to protect them. We always make fool mistakes that way, but then maybe Victor Shapiro, our office manager and being a Polander from County Cork, will look after the girls for us, he's so handy that way and so accommodating. Well, anyhow, we had a dandy visit with the boys.

Rain at Last!

It may be of interest to you to know that the long drought spell has been broken here in Nebraska, but rain came too late to save the wheat and oats crop. Our pastures are shot and farmers are pasturing their own cows along the highways where there is a little grass. They are so short, in fact, that the other day we saw a couple of old bull grasshoppers fighting for possession of a dandelion leaf. Our corn looks fine and this makes the farmers feel pretty good, since corn is the main crop, but our wheat and oats will be a minus quantity and our hay crop will be less than that, but Charlie, you ought to see South Dakota.

Some of these farmers out here feel a whole lot like we felt back in Indiana. We had a girl back there and she had red hair, was freckle-faced, had lost three of her front teeth, had a wart on her chin and she weighed 266 in her B. V. D.'s. We went away one day and when we came back that night we found she had eloped with the garbage man, which goes to show how fickle women are. It's no wonder these farmers are blue. Doggone the luck anyhow.

We'll betcha that John Piller of the Piller Grand theatre at Valley City, North Dakota, is shoveling a snowbank away from the front of his theatre right now. The north wind we are getting feels like it was coming off a snowbank, but maybe it will kill their grasshoppers. We hope it does; nothing else seems to do it. John says that if he could get those hoppers in his theatre on nights when he was playing certain pictures—but then John never did have consideration for dumb animals anyhow.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
1790 Broadway, New York

Chesterfield

IN THE MONEY: Lois Wilson, Richard "Skeets" Gallagher—Program comedy-drama. A weak sister for box-office draw.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. General patronage.

Columbia

FIGHTING RANGER, THE: Buck Jones—As usual a good action picture. Buck always gets his man and the gal. This was a good one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FOG: Mary Brian, Reginald Denny—Very pleasing picture. A little dark, of course, but mystery pictures have to be, it seems. Running time, 69 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

HELL BENT FOR LOVE: Tim McCoy—Very good action picture. Good stuff for kids as well as adults. Play it. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 8-9.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

NINTH GUEST, THE: Donald Cook, Genevieve Tobin—I heard no adverse criticism and I liked it myself. Mystery, tragedy, romance and suspense stalked throughout this picture with tragedy in the lead. But the ones killed off were charter members of that fast growing organization, Public Enemies No. 1. Those seeking relaxation for tired nerves were not soundly relaxed, but those who enjoy a mystery picture well directed (as I do), got what they were looking for. Played June 7.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

VOICE IN THE NIGHT: Tim McCoy—Just fair. The old story of a rival corporation trying to gum the works. Running time, 59 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

First Division

ROAD TO RUIN: Helen Foster, Paul Page—Broke all house records for Sunday and Monday. Advertised "No Children Under 16 Allowed" and it brought the S.R.O. sign, which hasn't been used for a long time. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 3-4.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

CONVENTION CITY: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—One of the very best comedies this year. Step on it.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

DARK HAZARD: Edward G. Robinson—Fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FASHIONS OF 1934: William Powell—Not as good as other Warner Brothers' musicals. Did not draw very well.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FEMALE: Ruth Chatterton—The best Chatterton picture for a long time. Fine drama which will please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HAVANA WIDOWS: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell—Good comedy drama. Only fair business. These stars not very well known here yet.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

JOURNAL OF A CRIME: Ruth Chatterton—Not very good entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MANDALAY: Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—A mighty good program picture. Story interesting. Star as usual fine and balance of cast good. Gave good satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MASSACRE: Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak—Very good Indian story.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—A few weeks ago one of my country patrons remarked that he'd come and bring a truck load if we'd have another picture with that big mouth fellow. Brown made a real hit in "You Said a Mouthful," several months ago. "Son of a Sailor" is a typical Brown picture and it certainly pleased. And yes—the fellow came and brought a truck load and I gave him a free pass.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SON OF A SAILOR: Joe E. Brown—Joe Brown always pleases the youngsters and grownups, too, with his funny antics. This will please. Good clean fun.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TWENTY MILLION SWEETHEARTS: Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Pat O'Brien, Mills Brothers—Very good picture. It has plenty of comedy, music and action. Chalk up another hit for Warner. A musical which is entirely different. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 10-11-12.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—The poorest Joe E. Brown picture to date. Business fair. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 23-24.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—A good funny picture but Joe has made lots of better pictures. I call it good acting and a poor story. After the first show, a poor crowd, and that's that. Played June 3-4.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greeneville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

VERY HONORABLE GUY, A: Joe E. Brown—Shame on you, Joe. You never got a smile in this one. Brown is a favorite here and up until now he has never missed but this "Honorable Guy" is just a waste of time. Sorry I can't give this one much. Guess we better forgive you, Joe; everyone has an off day.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD: Frankie Darro—Played this double feature with "Cross Country Cruise." A splendid picture that held up the weak feature very nicely. Many fine comments from the men but a little too rough for the ladies. Running time, 68 minues. Played June 1-2.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

WONDER BAR: Al Jolson, Dick Powell, Ricardo Cortez, Dolores Del Rio—Another good Warner Brothers' musical. Spectacular numbers.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Fox

AS HUSBANDS GO: Warner Baxter—Just a programer. Not up to Warner Baxter's standard. Played June 5-6.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—A beautiful picture that was well liked by all. Business good. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 18-19.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—Good clean entertainment for the family. For some reason or other this did not draw like the other Gaynor pictures.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAROLINA: Janet Gaynor—Nice clean picture. Will do extra business at box-office. Personally thought this one a little weak for this star.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. General patronage.

COMING OUT PARTY: Frances Dee, Gene Raymond—A very interesting picture that pleased those who saw it. Business below average. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 16-17.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—The answer to the small town exhibitor's prayer. A dandy picture to good business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 25-26.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

DAVID HARUM: Will Rogers—Our local newspaper came out with a special write-up after we played "David Harum," stressing the point about its being clean, wholesome entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DEVIL TIGER: Kane Richmond, Marion Burns—All right for a serial night. Played May 4.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: George O'Brien—A fine Saturday show. Played May 26.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, Alice Faye—I saw this picture through four times and did not tire of it. A swell show. People want music and laughter. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 9-10.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS: Rudy Vallee, Alice Faye—Fair musical. Hollywood insists on spoiling good pictures by smutty scenes. How much longer must we stand for this.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn—Not big but pleased my patrons, so what more could you ask.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT GIRL: James Dunn—Will please the young folks, although there are quite a few pretty risky wisecracks.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LIFE IN THE RAW: George O'Brien—Very good western Zane Grey story.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OLSON'S BIG MOMENT: El Brendel—Poor picture and poor business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 9-10.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

SAILOR'S LUCK: Sally Eilers, James Dunn—Many real comments. Played this on Bargain Night and did a neat business. Several came back the second night to see it. Played May 30-31.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

SMOKY: Victor Jory, Irene Bentley—If you have any people that care for horses at all they will certainly go for this one. I could see it several times and not tire of it. Running time, 69 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

Mayfair

MGM

CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Ramon Novarro, Jeanette MacDonald—Good singing by Novarro and MacDonald, but very poor story.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAT AND THE FIDDLE, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Ramon Novarro—A delightful musical romance, holds your interest from start to finish. Drawing power below what the picture deserved.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—Very good and very educational.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ESKIMO: Native Cast—It's a great picture but at least two reels too long. We got the men folks but the ladies just would not come to see it. No cast to draw them in. I tried every way possible to put this picture over but couldn't do it and lost plenty of hard earned dough, due to excessively high film rental. There is no question but what this has more entertainment than its mate, "Dinner at Eight," but it has no draw. Some of the scenes are the best I have ever seen, and it is a masterpiece of its kind and a wonderful education. It has its romance, its thrills, its heart throbs, action and a great story, but it just does not draw big enough to justify the price we paid. Buy it right and run it. It's a credit to any house even if you lose money. Pictures of this kind are made only once in a blue moon and it's a great relief to get away from gangs and mushy pictures. My only fault with the picture is the price I had to pay but I am glad I ran it and I take pleasure in recommending it to my exhibitor friends. Played June 3-4-5.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

FUGITIVE LOVERS: Robert Montgomery—Thrills, comedy, romance on a cross country bus. Very good entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—Very good musical. Will please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GOING HOLLYWOOD: Marion Davies, Bing Crosby—A very good musical. They will all like Bing's songs. Should go over big. Running time, 75 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

LAUGHING BOY: Ramon Novarro, Lupe Velez—More good stars and film wasted on a poor show. The picture just isn't there, that's all. It's not bad and it's not good, it's just a film. Novarro looks like an Indian like a hot dog looks like an eskimo pie.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA: Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—An exceptionally fine picture. All the cast do fine work and it's a good story. Gable does his best work and Powell perfect. It holds your attention every minute.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable—A fine production liked by masses and classes alike. No exaggerations that insult the intelligence, such as in "Riptide." Pictures of this high standard will in time bring back those long lost patrons who have stayed away since real pictures are so rare. Played May 28-29.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MEN IN WHITE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—A splendid production with Gable taking his part of a young doctor and doing it to perfection. Lots will not like the sad ending.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery—Failed to draw. Picture not so good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 5.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo—Well acted and produced. Wonderful sets. It will please most audiences.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert—A wonderful picture and masterpiece whatever angle you view it from, acting, settings, support, locale, etc., all perfect, but that "but" means the difference between profit and loss. These heavy dramatic costume plays mean nothing to us at the box-office and Garbo is no draw in a working class neighborhood. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 21-22.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

QUEEN CHRISTINA: Greta Garbo, John Gilbert—A marvelous production. Money was poured out like water. Greta Garbo does all that is expected of her. The surprise to me was John Gilbert's fine work. He acquits himself with credit as the lover. His voice is better than in any of his former talking pictures. The picture holds interest all the way. The daring sex angle where the two spend the night at the inn is handled with delicacy. But there is one unpardonable blunder, the unhappy ending. In this the ending is so uncalled for. It looks as if they went out of their way for an unhappy ending. They may argue that it is history but many liberties are taken with historical subjects and no doubt liberties have been taken with the actual history of "Queen Christina" in this version. Why this ending was used to permit the villain to kill the hero and have the villain go unharmed when it did not serve to bring the Queen back to her throne will forever remain a mystery to me. Drawing power just that of an average program.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—Not quite as bad perhaps as that nauseating Shearer vehicle, "Private Lives," but still bad enough to make the intelligent type of patrons hold their noses shut. Shearer is nice to look at and all that, but why must she act so simple silly. Business terrible the second day. An elaborate production in every sense but only wasted effort at real honest-to-goodness entertainment. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 7-8.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—An adult attraction. We hope that the churches will make the Hollywood producers understand that what theatres want is good clean pictures to show on our screens.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RIPTIDE: Norma Shearer—The first Norma Shearer picture I ever ran and to me and my patrons a disappointment. One may say that it is not a small town picture and I agree with them. I also agree that it is not a big town picture because it does not please there either. The fault lies both in the story and the dialect. All the cast except Montgomery speak with a London accent. People in the U. S. A. want plain old American talk. I saw this picture in Los Angeles, where it was held over for an extended run, as was the case in most cities. I asked many, both men and women, what they thought of the picture and eight out of every ten did not care for it. Of course, they will see it, because it's Norma Shearer, and her work is first class. The English talk and the ordinary story are the weak spots. We have a right to expect more from the combination that made this picture. Miss Shearer's voice does not record so well and she speaks very low, which makes the other members of the cast appear too loud. One feels no sympathy for Miss Shearer in the picture because of her weakness in continually returning to Montgomery instead of staying with her husband. Again I say it's a poor story. Played May 6-7-8.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weismuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Great entertainment for the kids and those who enjoy the animals, linked to an impossible, rather ridiculous story. Business above average for this time of the year. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 30-31.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is the best Tarzan to date. Wonderful picture and a money maker. Real money was spent on this one and it's worth it. Run it as soon as possible and "give it the works."—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN: Lionel Barrymore—Good picture, full of human interest. Will please everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

VIVA VILLA: Wallace Beery—MGM gives me the poorest recording. Either their process is at fault or their sound engineers should be fired. The mob scenes bring deafening sound and several reels call for the most volume that my equipment can give. I'm on the job and I know poor, uneven recording. The picture deserves praise. There are thrilling moments and Beery always has the sympathy of the audience. A worthwhile production, although possibly a little bit too rough for a portion of the patrons that you will have in your theatre. Nevertheless it's a big picture and you need not be fearful of advertising it as such. Business not so good owing to rain. Running time, 115 minutes. Played June 9-10-11.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

VIVA VILLA: Wallace Beery—This will please the men mostly. It is a big production but the revolution parts are a bit too tough for the ladies.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WOMEN IN HIS LIFE, THE: Otto Kruger—Ran this on a Family Night and pleased well. Kruger is a fine actor. Running time, 74 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING: Lewis Stone, May Robson—Very good entertainment. Excellent acting by May Robson and Lewis Stone. Good, clean picture for the family.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

A LETTER TO BOB OUELLETTE

Mr. Bob Ouellette
Dixie Theatre
Brooksville, Fla.

Dear Sir:

If your blood pressure was up playing "Berkeley Square," "What the Picture Did for Me" June 9, get "Doctor Bull."

Respectfully yours,
M. MELZ,
Melz-Arcade Theatre,
Ferriday, La.

Monogram

AVENGER, THE: Ralph Forbes, Adrienne Ames—Just a program picture played on a double bill and they got quantity anyway. After they sit through two pictures they are too tired to know whether they are pleased or not but have got their money's worth and that is what Saturday nighters want—value.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

BLUE STEEL: John Wayne—This is a very good action picture. Will satisfy any crowd that likes this type of entertainment. This man Wayne is mighty good in these shoot-'em up pictures, and the natives that are judges of westerns say so.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FUGITIVE, THE: Rex Bell—This was sent me as a substitute for "Trailing North." I believe they brand this as an action melodrama, but if there was any action in this they must have used a slow motion camera when shooting it. Played June 2.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Charlotte Henry—A kid picture and only good for the kids.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ALL OF ME: George Raft, Carole Lombard—A very strong, well acted drama, holds the interest throughout. Appeals to adult audiences most, very little in it for children. Makes a good midweek bill or Sunday in the States. They liked it here although we only did average business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 23-24.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft—Just so so. Can't see where they get the class "A" rating.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft, Carole Lombard—Good business the first night; second night about average. I don't think this pleased generally. Dancing by Raft and Lombard was splendid. Running time, 84 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOLERO: George Raft—A fair program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H General patronage.

COME ON MARINES: Richard Arlen—Good comedy-drama with plenty of action.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CRADLE SONG: Dorothea Wieck, Kent Taylor—A good picture of its kind but a very poor kind for our town. Slow and draggy. Business poor. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 16-17.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY: Fredric March, Evelyn Venable—Splendid picture with plenty of thought behind it. Of course, there were a few that were disgruntled but you have to expect that. Sound is exceptionally fine also. Running time, 78 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, William Gargan, Mary Boland—Race Night drew the small crowd. DeMille is serving what he wants to give the public, but not what the public wants. His name is getting to be poison here. A gruesome, dull picture that mildly entertained. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 30-31.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE: Mary Boland, Claudette Colbert—Terrible. Sorry I played it. Running time, 95 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

GOOD DAME: Fredric March, Sylvia Sidney—Did about average business for a Saturday night. I thought it much better than lots of reports would have it, although, of course, these two stars are capable of lots better stuff. Running time, 75 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

GOOD DAME: Fredric March—I advise all those who have not played this picture to keep away from it. It's a shame to put such an actor as March in a story like "Good Dame."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott—A good Zane Grey story with music.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LAST ROUND-UP, THE: Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie—You managers that are looking for

real entertainment better look this over as the biggest picture of its kind since "The Covered Wagon." This house shows westerns on weekends but we set this opening on Sunday for four days to packed houses for the entire run against the strongest summer competition, and "Nana" in the opposition house. The performance of all the cast is well worth mentioning and I want to say Monte Blue comes back with a bang. I am of the opinion the paying customers of the movies like this sort of picture for a change. Another thing I forgot to mention that may be helpful to you, we raised our admission from regular 15 cents to 25 cents, both matinee and night.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

MAMA LOVES PAPA: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland—Although this is an old show, it went over in great style. House was in uproar over Charlie's antics. Just the name of Charlie Ruggles brings back a flash of the picture where he played the drunken reporter, my patrons tell me. Anyhow he's liked in my town, which means something. Played May 23-24.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Ann Sothern—Clever comedy-drama with just enough singing to make it interesting. Pleased. Both Lanny and Miss Sothern did fine work with Ruggles and Miss Boland supplying the comedy. Played June 3-4.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Charles Ruggles the whole show.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

MELODY IN SPRING: Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles—If Ruggles hadn't been in it to supply some comedy this picture would have been an awful flop. As it was business was below average. Lanny Ross has a wonderful voice but will need lots of training to become an actor. Running time, 76 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Alice Brady, Dorothea Wieck—Business very low as title was against it. However, the picture was fine and it pleased. Running time, 69 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Tbeatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN: Dorothea Wieck—After lambasting Paramount and all concerned in the production of "Design for Living" it is a distinct pleasure to sing the praises of this clean, heart-touching drama, and I am led to wonder how the company who produced this could have been guilty of sponsoring the other. And also to wonder how the author of "Cavalcade" could also write such trash as "Design for Living." Both of these stories may be children of the same brain but they are not twins in the sense that they resemble one another in the least. Here is a story without a vestige of romance, except as it continued to live in the hearts of the widow and child of the husband and father who does not appear at all. Now, I'm sorta hardboiled (having been in hot water so often) but a lump that was not caused by being out the night before came in my throat at times, while Alice Brady and Spanky brought a smile to my lips, with their own brand of comedy. Good old Alice (excuse me, Alice, I'm older'n you are). She almost stole the show like the kidnapers stole the baby. No cleaner nor more entertaining picture was ever made. If you are in any doubt as to how I regard this offering, write me personally, enclosing three three-cent stamps and I will reply if I don't forget it. Played May 27-28.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

MURDER AT THE VANITIES: Carl Brisson, Kitty Carlisle—I call it a good picture. It's entirely different than any musical you ever saw. Beautiful girls and a real mystery picture. It's okay.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

NO MORE WOMEN: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Buster Crabbe, Ida Lupino—Good Saturday picture with considerable comedy. Running time, 75 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SEARCH FOR BEAUTY: Buster Crabbe, Ida Lupino—The few who saw it liked this picture very much. It did not draw very many. It was a good clean comedy and clean pictures are scarce. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 27-28-29.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE MADE HER BED: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen—Okay for Saturday and business good. Running time, 71 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SITTING PRETTY: Jack Oakie—A good program picture that will satisfy. Jack Oakie is well liked here. Drew better than average.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Tbeatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, W. C. Fields—Played this pretty old and it did not draw so well but it is a good comedy for midweek, although it has a tendency to drag a little in spots. Played May 31.—B. J. Vanderby, Palace Theatre, Doland, S. D. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: W. C. Fields—A disappointment as a comedy as I expected more from the cast. Some parts were funny, though, especially where Fields is playing pool. Running time, 62 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SIX OF A KIND: W. C. Fields—Good comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIRTY DAY PRINCESS: Sylvia Sidney, Cary Grant—Clever little picture that pleased.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING HERD, THE: Randolph Scott—Fine western. We have never been disappointed in a Zane Grey western. Paramount makes the finest westerns on the market. Drew exceptionally well and pleased all. Played May 18-19.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby—Good entertainment. Average business.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

WE'RE NOT DRESSING: Bing Crosby—Very good. Pleased all who saw it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WHARF ANGEL: Victor McLaglen, Dorothy Dell—Story of Frisco water front. Too much sordid atmosphere to suit some of our people. Played June 1-2.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE TELLING ME: W. C. Fields, Joan Marsh—An absolute knockout. This combination pleases 100 per cent. It's a great comedy. Here is money for you.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

RKO

ACE OF ACES: Richard Dix, Ralph Bellamy—If an exhibitor would report on pictures played merely from the box-office angle, he'd "damm them with faint praise" indeed. But I prefer to take a broader view than that and consider their potential value. In other words, it is fairer to report what the picture could have done for me, than to charge it with what the patrons failed to do for me or the picture either. It received 100 per cent approval from my patrons, but said 100 per cent equalled about 10 per cent of what the picture deserved. RKO produced the picture, but the public did not produce the patronage. And that's that. Played May 29.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

CRIME DOCTOR: Otto Kruger, Karen Morley—Interesting tale of detective who planned the perfect crime. Has surprise ending. Played May 25-26.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

FLYING DOWN TO RIO: Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Fred Astaire—A different musical and a very good entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HIPS, HIPS, HOORAY: Wheeler and Woolsey—Barely grossed expenses on a three-day run. The picture itself is all right, one of the best ever made, but my folks just didn't come out to see it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IF I WERE FREE: Irene Dunne, Clive Brook—Used this for a Sunday-Monday picture and it went over very nicely, holding up on Monday night to fair business. It is all dialogue but holds interest and Miss Dunne's admirers will be satisfied.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Walter Huston, Frances Dee—There is something to this picture and it deserves a kind word. It's clean, has a plausible story and holds the interest to the end. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 8.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING: Walter Huston, Frances Dee—We used this Memorial Day and it was an ideal program picture for the day. Actual locale Fort Myers, with a bit of World War. Played May 30-31.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—One of the very best pictures ever made. Appeals especially to women. Drew well and pleased nearly all. Any theatre should be proud to run this fine production. Played May 6-7.—Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, Ideal Theatre, Burns, Ore. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—A good picture with limited appeal and not so limited rental. While this had the reputation of "sweeping the country," it was not exactly a sweeping disaster here. The gross was not startling enough to get excited about, nor was the audience reaction such as would create a desire for a repeat date. A great many of my young patrons were not living in 1869, when this novel was published, which probably accounts in part for the lack of, shall we say, spontaneous enthusiasm manifested. Once upon a time, Wilkie Collins said there were two great classes of books: one was universally read and seldom respected and the other was universally respected but seldom read. I personally think that the above picture and "Flying Down to Rio," by the same company, pretty well expresses what I'm trying to say. One was morally perfect, the other not so moral, but pleasantly disturbing. In short, several sat through "Flying Down to Rio" twice, while I heard of none who did that with "Little Women." Played May 13-14.—Peter Bylsma, Victory Theatre, Napoleonville, La. Small town patronage.

LITTLE WOMEN: Katharine Hepburn—Just the type of good, clean picture we all look for but seldom get.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LONG LOST FATHER: John Barrymore—Whenever I show Barrymore I have the half-dozen admirers in to see him but not one more. Played May 14-15.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

LOST PATROL, THE: Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff—Not bad for a serial night. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 25.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN OF TWO WORLDS: Francis Lederer, Elissa Landi—Patterned after "Eskimo," but the box-office was sick instead of happy as was the case with "Eskimo." Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 2-3.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN OF TWO WORLDS: Francis Lederer, Elissa Landi—This is a big picture and well acted. Story a little overdrawn, but it is good entertainment and all liked it.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: El Brendel—I am naming El Brendel as the star because he is the one that brought my business above average, not the others in the cast, but El Brendel alone drew them in. If I could have Roscoe Ates, El Brendel, Laurel and Hardy, the producers could take all their socalled specials, hang them around their necks and jump into the river. The time is coming when we will pick the pictures that suit our individual needs. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 19.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts, El Brendel—A good comedy. Running time, seven reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton—Very poor. Why do they put stars like they did in this picture. A very trashy production witbout sense or reason. Running time, 62 minutes. Played Apr. 26-27-28.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

MEANEST GAL IN TOWN, THE: Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, El Brendel, James Gleason—Was pleasantly surprised by the business this one did after the unfavorable reports I had read. No adverse comments. Running time, 62 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts—This is the best crow yet. Had to refund the admission to some of my patrons. Running time, seven reels.—Bob Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

SING AND LIKE IT: Zasu Pitts—I have no fault to find with this one. It's funny. Had it as a benefit for the Alumni Association and heard no adverse criticism. However, with a house-to-bouse canvass they were unable to make the desired amount of money. The committee gave the picture kind praise. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 5-6.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

SPITFIRE: Katharine Hepburn—I got behind this picture in a way that seldom happens. I personally endorsed it and recommended it to the members of the different churches. I was influenced by the recommendation of the Motion Picture Producers review. After seeing the picture I wished I had not done this. I don't want to say that the picture is not all right, but there are other pictures far better both in moral and entertainment value. Played May 21-22.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS MAN IS MINE: Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy—This proved to be a well liked picture for us. Picked up the second night. If you want smart comedy drama this will fill the bill exactly.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TWO ALONE: Jean Parker, Tom Brown—This one will get by, but it is depressing, although I liked it. Business very poor. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 12.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Not liked by anybody. RKO has no right to push this down the throats of the patrons as the main fare of entertainment. If it had been released as a Frank Buck series of adventures, two reels each, there would have been no kick, but as the main film fare, well, it gave me the poorest Saturday business I had for a long, long time. Possibly it holds that enviable record. Cancel this one of the exorbitant rental and be happy instead of poorer. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 2-3-4.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Interesting picture showing how Buck captures his wild animals. Did not draw as well as "Bring 'Em Back Alive." Played May 27-28-29.—P. G. Estee, S. T. Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WILD CARGO: Frank Buck—Good adventure film, with thrills galore. Family entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

State Rights

BACK TO NATURE: Here is a nudist picture. I just want to say that I broke a six-months' record with this one. It's box-office plus. They came for 100 miles in every direction to see it. There is nothing to offend and it's a great education. I got the surprise of my life on this one because it beat every big picture I have had in many months. Be sure to double bill it. It will not draw or please itself but put some good picture with it and watch your banker smile when you take the deposit down and make a payment on the past due note. It's a box-office honey.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

United Artists

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN: Lee Tracy—A very smart picture that was well liked and drew fair business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 4-5.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

BOWERY, THE: Wallace Beery—Rough and boisterous but pleased the men.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY THRU A KEYHOLE: Constance Cummings—Fair musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

EMPEROR JONES: Paul Robeson—Did not please my crowd.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GALLANT LADY: Ann Harding, Clive Brook—Wonderful drama, wonderful acting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

KID FROM SPAIN, THE: Eddie Cantor—Played this one awfully late, and found the print none too good, as the recording seemed to be partly washed out. However, it is a great show and proved to be a good drawing card. If you haven't played it, get it and ask for a good print. It is a dandy picture. —L. E. Mahoney, New Columbus Theatre, Columbus, N. D. General patronage. This report appeared in the April 28th issue above the name of J. C. Darst, Dante Theatre, Dante, Va.

MASQUERADER, THE: Ronald Colman, Elissa Landi—A good picture. Very clever photography, well liked and business fair. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 28-29-30.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett—Pleased most everyone. Half musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NANA: Anna Sten, Lionel Atwill—Quite a few walkouts on this one. While the theme is an old one I personally liked the picture because I think Anna Sten is very pleasing to the eye. Business not so good. Running time, 85 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII, THE: Charles Laughton—After seeing so many praises about "The Private Life of Henry VIII" we were all very disappointed in the picture. Too vulgar. I call it very, very poor entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—A dandy picture that pleased 95 per cent and had good box-office draw. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Apr. 23-24-25.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—I was of the opinion that Eddie might lose his popularity by his constant appearance on the radio, but I was all wet. Not a hilarious comedy, but amusing. Running time, 85 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—Quite good entertainment with exception of quite a few vulgar scenes.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT: Lew Ayres—A re-issue that pleased 100 per cent. Queer ending is only criticism.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW: John Barrymore—One of the best pieces of work Barrymore has done for some time, in the respect that it was not too heavy and dramatic, nor was it over the heads of the average patrons, which was the trouble with most of his heavy dramatic roles. This went over big with the patrons, although the weather was too warm for big grosses. Running time, 81 minutes. Played May 18-19.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE: Lew Ayres, Alice White—Played this double feature. A fair program picture that did a fair business but I believe that the second feature drew them in. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 1-2.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO: Ken Maynard, Gloria Shea—Fairly good western but not up to Ken's standard. Drew only fair business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GLAMOUR: Paul Lukas, Constance Cummings—A fairly good dramatic picture but it's just another sleeper to our dear old public. Please, Mr. Laemmle, the people want more comedy in their pictures and less sob stuff. Remember: "Laugh and the world laughs with you." The public wants comedy and action. If they want to sleep they'll go to bed. It's much more convenient. No hard feelings, Mr. Laemmle. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 13-14-15.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

GUN JUSTICE: Ken Maynard—An average western that will satisfy your Saturday crowd. Played June 9.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Tex. Small town and rural patronage.

GUN JUSTICE: Ken Maynard—Not as good as most of the Maynard pictures but drew very well.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville—A hokum comedy. First part better than last.—C. M. Hartman. Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

HORSE PLAY: Slim Summerville, Andy Devine—Really funny. Went over better than the average Summerville comedy. Kept the patrons laughing all through the showing. Practically free from questionable wisecracks. Just clean fun and comedy situations. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 18-19.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—Here is another typical Tracy picture that is full of action, wisecracks and romance. It is a newspaper story with Tracy in his most popular role as a reporter and Roger Pryor as his most dangerous rival together with beautiful Gloria Stuart. This should be a great business-getter wherever Tracy is liked. We played it on Saturday to a very good business and pleased all. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 2.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

I'LL TELL THE WORLD: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart—A breezy comedy-drama with Lee Tracy at his best. Drew slightly below average Sunday-Monday business, but pleased everyone. Played May 20-21.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains—One of the better socalled horror pictures. Very clever and well put on. Business fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Apr. 19-20-21.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN, THE: Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart—Played "Three Little Pigs" with it so naturally a good draw. Picture is not terrifying at all, but is quite pleasing. Running time, 70 minutes.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

KING FOR A NIGHT: Chester Morris, Alice White—Must give Universal credit for this one. Had lots of favorable comments on it. Running time, eight reels.—Bob Schwall, State Theatre, Ipswich, S. D. Small town patronage.

LET'S BE RITZY: Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis—A good program picture. Story entertaining. All we got in to see it liked the show. Played June 5-6.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

LOVE BIRDS, THE: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—These two stars seem to be dying out in my town, although some of my older patrons seem to enjoy them. This one seemed to be liked better than their former one. Business below average. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 2.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

LOVE, HONOR, AND OH, BABY: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—The usual entertainment that this pair can give. Always good. Running time, 60 minutes.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

LOVE, HONOR AND OH, BABY!: Slim Summerville, Zasu Pitts—This drew just about half what "They Had to Get Married" did.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT: O. P. Heggie, Sidney Fox—Well, about this one I can't say it is a wow. It looked like a mighty good bunch of actors trying to make something out of nothing. They did their best but it did not hit here.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

POOR RICH, THE: Edna May Oliver, Edward Everett Horton—If you do play this picture, if you are having business at all, some of 'em will come in but don't be misled, they won't stay it out. Simply will not keep your patrons interested in this hot weather. Average business three days.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir, Donald Woods—A splendid picture that pleased all who saw it. Something different and well acted. Business fair. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 3-4-5. —Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and country patronage.

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir—Congratulations to Warner and Jean Muir. This is the finest picture I have played for some time. Received very many fine compliments and some of my patrons went so far as to tell me it was the best show they had ever seen. This Jean Muir is a honey. Let's have her in some more shows of the same type. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 25-26-27.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and country patronage.

AS THE EARTH TURNS: Jean Muir, Donald Woods—It's a great picture, well acted and one that will build up every day. Our patrons liked it very much. Just watch this girl Jean Muir, she does some mighty fine work in this one.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

EVER IN MY HEART: Barbara Stanwyck—Fair program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOOTLIGHT PARADE: James Cagney, Joan Blondell—Very good. Waterfall number worth price of admission. Will please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck—Boys, here's one that you can get behind and push. Barbara Stanwyck's work in this unexcelled. Get them in your theatre and the picture will do the rest. Played June 3-4.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

HI, NELLIE!: Paul Muni—Very good, clean attraction. Will please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

JIMMY THE GENT: James Cagney—Ran this on my Bargain Night to a nice business. Throughout the show roars of laughter confirmed my report that Jimmy Cagney's popularity is going up in my town. Come on, Jim, let's have another one like this. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 6-7.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

JIMMY THE GENT: James Cagney—This boy Cagney knocks 'em for a row of pins. If your patrons crave action you can rest assured that you will please them with this one. Played midweek.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MERRY WIVES OF RENO: Glenda Farrell, Margaret Lindsay—This is a real comedy. Story great and acted by a very funny bunch of comedians. They were all good and the direction is perfect, not a dull moment. I call it the best comedy we have played yet. A little risque in spots but not enough to hurt anyone's morals. Played June 10-11.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MERRY WIVES OF RENO: Glenda Farrell, Guy Kibbee, Frank McHugh, Hugh Herbert—Another comedy knockout from the producer who really knows what the public wants. Keep it up, Warner. The public wants comedy, comedy and more comedy with plenty of action and thrills. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 3-4-5.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

MERRY WIVES OF RENO: Glenda Farrell, Margaret Lindsay—Well, fellows, here is a laugh. The best comedy I have seen in many months and good for any house or any date. My opinion is that it will please every man, woman and child. Played June 6-7.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

UPPER WORLD: Warren William, Mary Astor—A darn good picture for any day or any place. Right up to Warner's standard. My patrons liked it and told me so.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

Columbia

MICKEY'S TENT SHOW: Mickey McGuire—A very funny comedy. Well directed.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

Educational

BIG MEOW, THE: Tom Howard—Very good comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

CANYON OF ROMANCE: Romantic Journeys—These travelogues are very interesting and educational. Too bad the masses show so little interest in them. Running time, nine minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

EXPECTANT FATHER, THE: Ernest Truex—A very funny comedy from beginning to finish. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GIMME MY QUARTERBACK: Baby Burlesks—This will prove tiresome wherever shown. I won't play any more of this series. Running time, nine minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GOING SPANISH: Musical Comedies—A rough, loud attempt at comedy. Running time, 19 minutes. —A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

HULA HONEYMOON: Treasure Chest—Beautiful Hawaiian music sung by natives. Had many compliments on it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANAGED MONEY: Frolics of Youth—A sad attempt. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MANAGED MONEY: Frolics of Youth—We surely do like these two youngsters in this series. This one is not as funny as "Pardon My Pups" but it is just as good every other way. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—Now here is where I want to shout that this cartoon is almost as good as "Three Little Pigs" and that is giving it the highest recommendation it is possible for me to give. I am repeating this one, just bet your boots on that. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

CONQUEST OF THE AIR!: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—This series is misleading. All it consists of is the assembling of stale newsreels. Running time, nine minute.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL FROM THE COUNTRY, THE: Movie Tintype Series—It seems the younger folks cannot see the point in these throwbacks of yesteryear. They do not prove popular here. Running time, nine minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

KRAKATOA: A real novelty. Teacher brought class the second night and she said it taught them more science than a week in the schoolroom.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SCOURING THE SEVEN SEAS!: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Interesting and thrilling scenes of sea events. Well liked. Running time, nine minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WITH THE NAVIES OF THE WORLD: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Only the scenes of old newsreels reissued. Running time, 10 minutes. —A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MGM

CROOK'S TOUR: All-Star Series—Very funny.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

FOUR PARTS: Charley Chase—A great two reel comedy. Better than the average. If you haven't bought it buy it and show it. They will like it.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES: Pretty fair.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

I'LL TAKE VANILLA: Charley Chase—Pretty good comedy. Charlie still brings in the music which is a good feature of his comedies. The only sour note is the dumb cop; he is so silly that he is not even funny. Running time, 19 minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

I'LL TAKE VANILLA: Charley Chase—Charley Chase is always welcome in my theatre. A dandy comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JAILBIRDS OF PARADISE: Musical Revues—Good comedy done all in color. Some very good dances here besides catchy songs. The stooges or one of Ted Healey's gang works in it, if that is anything. Running time, 17 minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

MENU: Oddities—A one-reel cooking lesson in beautiful colors. Not a comedy and no good for anything but a cooking school. Running time, one reel. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT PATROL: Laurel and Hardy—Got a few laughs, but these guys are too silly in most of their comedies.—H. B. Wood, Wood Theatre, Calico Rock, Ark. Small town, rural and C. C. C. Camp patronage.

MUSICALS: Fine.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

OVER THE COUNTER: Musical Revnues—This is one of the finest shorts we have ever exhibited. A very drawing card in itself. It makes a perfect introduction to a high class program.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage PLAY BALL: Willie Whopper—A very timely cartoon on baseball that kept everyone interested and laughing.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

SOUP AND FISH: Todd and Kelly—This team seems to please in my town. Personally, I think it a better hookup than Pitts and Todd. Seems to have more pep. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WILLIE WHOPPER CARTOONS: Dandy cartoons. Hope they make several more colored ones. —Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ANIMAL ANTICS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Polar bears, Arabian ponies and lion cubs provide the pleasing entertainment in this reel. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BLOW ME DOWN: Popeye the Sailor—Of course, it's good. We have not had a poor Popeye yet.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DOWN BY THE OLD MILL STREAM: Screen Songs—Very good. Our patrons seem to appreciate this kind of music instead of Jazz. Running time, seven minutes.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FATAL GLASS OF BEER: W. C. Fields—Sound not so good on this, story not so good, and not very funny. The scenes of the north were very interesting but they alone did not make this a good comedy.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

GOLD NUGGETS: Walter Catlett—Terrible. Paramount should either make good comedies or else quit making them altogether. Running time, 18 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

HA! HA! HA!: Betty Boop—About average of this series. Consider them good any place you can use them.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre, Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

I EATS MY SPINACH: Popeye the Sailor—This is one of the best cartoons I have ever seen. If you want a good comedy, just book this one and listen to your patrons laugh. These are better drawing shorts than Mickey Mouse and I personally think they are much better. Let's have more of these. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LAZYBONES: Borrah Minnevitch—Good one-reeler with the Harmonica Rascals.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre. Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LET'S YOU AND HIM FIGHT: Popeye Cartoon—A good cartoon.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LET'S YOU AND HIM FIGHT: Popeye the Sailor—Not as good as those preceding this.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric Theatre. Harrison, Ark. Small town patronage.

LET'S YOU AND HIM FIGHT: Popeye the Sailor—Here is another great cartoon featuring the one and only Popeye, the greatest of all comics. Too much cannot be said about these shorts, they are all good and please all of my patrons. I hope Paramount will continue making these and wish them success. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

LITTLE BROADCAST, THE: Donald Novis, Arthur Tracy—Very good. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD BUGLER, THE: Chic Sale—Chic Sale as the old war veteran and a little boy and a dog that he is taking care of provide the fun for one of the outstanding comedies in this series. We had any number of compliments on it. It's ideal for Sunday or Saturday. Running time, 21 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

ONE AWFUL NIGHT: Pallette and Catlett—Funny comedy spoiled by poor recording. Running time, 21 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR CARTOONS: You can't beat them.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROOKIE, THE: Tom Howard—Could not see much point to this one and did not hear many laughs Quite a disappointment.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

RKO

AUTOBUYOGRAPHY: Leon Errol—Not our idea of a comedy. Too talky, no action, so proved very dull. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DERBY DECADE: Ruth Etting—Very pleasing in every way. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

FITS IN A FIDDLE: Clark and McCullough—This pair are getting worse and worse.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

GRIN AND BEAR IT: Edgar Kennedy—By far the best one this star has made.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

HIZZONER: Bert Lahr—Another of RKO's so-called Musical Comedies with no music. The one plain fact is Bert Lahr trying to imitate Joe E. Brown. If you bought them for musical comedies, cancel them. I'm telling you. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

IN THE DEVIL DOG HOUSE: Clark and McCullough—This comedy team has the goods but RKO always hands out a poor story. The above comedy gets by and has laughs in it. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JEST OF HONOR: Soglow's "The King" Cartoons—My reports would not be complete without giving these King cartoons the smack in the face that they deserve. You can't squeeze a titter from the whole series. Shame on RKO for handling the world's worst attempt at animated cartoons. Running time, nine minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE ON A LADDER: Edgar Kennedy—Not a poor comedy by any means.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

RASSLIN' MATCH, THE: Amos 'n Andy—This is one of the best cartoons I have ever seen. There is only one mistake, the cartoon is entirely too crude, but will probably improve. Amos and Andy do the talking and just like the radio. This caused much comment here and was well liked. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

SPANISH TWIST: Tom and Jerry—Good cartoon.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

RUTH ETTING MUSICALS: Good music, but I wish they wouldn't take closeups of Miss Etting because it detracts from the music.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

STRANGE CASE OF HENNESSY: Cliff Edwards—I would never have believed that a producer would have the guts to offer such junk under the heading of musical comedies. Cliff Edwards sang about a half of a song and from then on not even a chord. The comedy is about a crazy man, if you can call such a sad affliction funny. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

TORCH TANGO: Ruth Etting—Ruth Etting has a very pleasing voice. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

GRASSHOPPER AND THE ANT, THE: Silly Symphonies—One reel and it is great.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MICKEY'S PAL PLUTO: Mickey Mouse—Fair enough cartoon. Print had a lot of rain in it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PIED PIPER: Silly Symphonies—Beautiful cartoon, pretty music, but they have ceased to draw any extra business for us. Popeye seems to have eased them out. Running time, seven minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PIED PIPER: Silly Symphonies—As usual there is a pretty good story to these cartoons. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

PLAYFUL PLUTO: Mickey Mouse—One of the funniest ever made.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

PUPPY LOVE: Mickey Mouse—The biggest thing about this one is the rental.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

STEEPLE CHASE: Mickey Mouse—Let me repeat, the biggest thing in this cartoon is the rental. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. H. Edwards, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BROADWAY VARIETIES: Mentone No. 7.—A good two reel subject. Some very clever acts.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MEETING MAZIE: Sterling Holloway—A good comedy which drew a lot of laughs but one of the poorest prints we have ever received. Patches, splices, joints, etc. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PIE FOR TWO: James Gleason—This is a fair comedy. It got by on Saturday. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE DAYS: Mentone No. 8—A very good musical short. A 20-minute stage show which everybody enjoyed. Give us more like this, Uncle Laemmle.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

Warner Vitaphone

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST: Merrie Melody—Very good colored cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

BIG CITY FANTASY, A: Melody Masters—Not so hot. A good orchestra but entirely without novelty numbers. Step on it, Warner, you can do better than this. With a little effort you could have made a hit short. Make them like you used to. Running time, nine minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

BOSKO THE SHEEP-HERDER: Looney Tunes—This cartoon pleased 100 per cent. Warners deserve a medal for the music background of their comedies and the lambs dancing among the flowers was clever and amusing.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

BOSKO THE SPEED KING: Looney Tunes—Very good. A timely subject on automobile racing. Played on Decoration Day with the automobile race going on in Indianapolis. Running time, seven minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

BUDDY AND TOWSER: Looney Tunes—Here is a real good cartoon comedy featuring Buddy and Towser at their best. One of the best of this series and many told us that. Vitaphone certainly has the shorts that make a weak picture go over good. Here's hoping they continue. Running time, eight minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

BUDDY'S TROLLEY TROUBLES: Looney Tunes—Took very well. Music catchy.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

BUSINESS IS A PLEASURE: Broadway Brevities—This is a splendid musical in color. I wish Warner's big V Comedies were as funny as this series is delightful. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BUSINESS IS A PLEASURE: Broadway Brevities—Very good. Running time, two reels.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

CASTILIAN GARDEN, A: Marimba Band—A delightful number featuring a Spanish dance and a harp solo. Excellent for Sunday. Running time, ten minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

COME TO DINNER: Broadway Brevities—To To those who had seen the picture "Dinner at Eigh" this was okay. To those who hadn't it was just plain silly. Running time, two reels.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

CORN ON THE COP: Harry Gribbon—Oh me, Oh my, why can't we get some funny comedies. Even the kids couldn't get a laugh out of this one.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES FLOSSIE: Ben Blue—This was terrible. Why doesn't Warner stick to making the Broadway Brevity series and forget the Big V Comedies. This one was terribly silly. Running time, 18 minutes.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

HOT COMPETITION: Melody Masters—This one got by.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S. D. Family and general patronage.

JACK DENNY AND BAND: Melody Masters—A nice clean comedy. Music good.—H. M. Johnson, Unique Theatre, Bricelyn, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

JOE PENNER COMEDIES: Lots of laughs.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

LET'S PLAY POST OFFICE: Broadway Brevities This is a crackerjack. Some very clever tap dancing. Will please anywhere.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE GIRL WITH BIG IDEAS, A: Broadway Brevities—One of the best we ever played. Running time, two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING: Broadway Brevities—Very good musical short based on the play "Sally." The music and scenes are very good. Running time, 28 minutes.—J. E. Ross, Jr., Strand Theatre, St. George, S. C. Small town patronage.

LOOK FOR THE SILVER LINING: Broadway Brevities—Warner charged me extra for this because it was an extra reel in length and it's not nearly so good as most of their two-reelers. Running time, three reels.—Henry Sparks, Grand Theatre, Cooper, Texas. Small town and rural patronage.

MASKS AND MEMORIES: Lillian Roth—The producers slipped on this one. Too much singing and not enough to do. The public wants more action. Every time someone wanted to express themselves or think, they would start to sing and the crowd went to sleep. The big dance number was very good. A few more like this and the Brevities will do a big nosedive. Running time, 30 minutes.—Herbert Mueller, Texas Theatre, Seguin, Texas. General patronage.

MUSIC TO OUR EARS: Jack Denny's Band—Another outstanding band number that pleased us. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

NERVOUS HANDS: Ben Blue—This is a comedy that is full of laughs and of the slapstick variety. It is one of the best of this series and many patrons commented on it. Vitaphone has the shorts and personally I always look forward to running their product as I know it is good. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. J. Medford, Orpheum Theatre, Oxford, N. C. General patronage.

NOT TO NIGHT JOSEPHINE: Broadway Brevities—Brevity and a mighty good one. Running time, two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

SITTING ON A BACK YARD FENCE: Merrie Melodies—A very good musical cartoon comedy that both young and old liked. Laughable and musical. Fits in anywhere. Running time, seven minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Broadway Brevities—Very pretty, all colored musical comedy, with some good song and dance numbers. These are becoming better than ever and find a welcome spot on our program. Running time, 18 minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

'TIS SPRING: Allen Jenkins—A color subject that pleased our audience very much. Comedy, dancing and singing above average. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TUNE DETECTIVE, THE: Sigmund Spaeth—A good musical short served up different. Has good classical singing and jazz and one of the best dance numbers I have ever had the pleasure of witnessing. Whoever the dance team were I do not know but they were par excellence. Running time, 10 minutes.—William A. Crute, Victoria Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. Neighborhood patronage.

20,000 CHEERS FOR THE CHAIN GANG: Broadway Brevities—A parody on "Im Am A Fugitive From a Chain Gang." The poorest Vitaphone musical I have exhibited, as they are usually excellent. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOUNG AND HEALTHY: Merry Melories—Not so good. We did not show this one after the Sunday matinee, it was so pointless. Thought we wouldn't bore our evening audiences.—Erma L. Raeburn, Arcade Theatre, Newell, S D. Family and general patronage.

Serials

Mascot

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: John Wayne, Ruth Hall—A very poor serial. The only thing to it was John Wayne. He couldn't put it over by himself. Running time, 12 chapters.—L. D. Brown, Queen Theatre, Brownwood, Texas. General patronage.

Principal

TARZAN, THE FEARLESS: Buster Grabbe—Played the first chapter and business above average and appreciated by entire audience. Oh, but the prints are bad. Wish I could get a decent print from the Louisville exchange. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

Universal

LOST SPECIAL: Frank Albertson—On second episode. It's a little old but plenty good. Running time, two reels each chapter.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

PERILS OF PUALINE: Evalyn Knapp. Robert Allen—This serial started out with a lot of action and gradually dribbled away to nothing. It got to be a custom of a good number of our regular Saturday audience to go out in the lounge and smoke until it blew over.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

PIRATE TREASURE: Richard Talmadge. Lucille Lund—Each chapter increases the number of thrills. The audience just eats it up. Universal serials are great. Good acting, excellent directing and first class box-office. Runing time. 20 minutes each chapter.—Edward L. Ornstein, Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

SO LIKE AN OSTRICH

It must be admitted that there are theatremen who through a mistaken sense of personal caution, do not overly extend themselves in encouraging the ambitions of the lesser members of their house staffs. But in spite of the parlous state in which today the average manager finds himself, we doubt the logic of this attitude as a means of permanent job protection.

Mr. J. J. Fitzgibbons, director of the far flung Famous Players Canadian circuit and its affiliated companies, presents his views masterfully upon this important subject in a bulletin to all the circuit theatre managers and district supervisors, from which we take the liberty of quoting as follows:

"The best managers are those who surround themselves with the best informed employees. Helping other employees to get information and improve themselves is bound to push you forward. Outside of actual dollars profit, you can make no greater contribution to the success of this circuit than from time to time being able to give us some young man or woman who can be promoted to a better and more important position."

The perfectly functioning theatre organization is most always headed by a level headed manager who knows that by helping others of his staff to widen their horizons, he is advancing his own cause. Mr. Fitzgibbons' advice in this respect is therefore sound and timely. It is offered for immediate and frequent reading to those theatremen it concerns who, ostrich like, bury their heads in the sand of silence.

ANOTHER LANGUAGE

One of the old time ballyhoo publicity experts visited with us some days back, and in course of conversation deplored the present day shrinkage of red meat exploitation. This lack of advertising vitality he blamed upon the indifference of outside influences now in control of the industry, stating that through their limited knowledge of publicity modus operandi, the bankers were unfamiliar with the language of theatre exploitation. Further, this able exploiteer was of the opinion that the newcomers viewed the high powered publicity man as a commodity purchasable in the market at all times, to be called upon at infrequent intervals. He stated these executives disregarded the fact that the proper circusing of pictures is as necessary to the health of the box office as the making of the product itself.

Alarming, if true. For today more so than ever before, the motion picture industry needs the constant services of the skilled showman. The value of ballyhoo is being proven on every hand by national advertisers who have adopted with great enthusiasm, and for greater profits, this present stepchild of show-business.

We hold, however, that the bankers are not solely to blame for this seeming neglect. The discouragement of old time exploitation may also be traced to the doorstep of picture executives, formerly firm believers in the Big Bally, who through too close contacts with the new elements are learning another language at the expense of the old.

"THEY'RE TELLING US?"

Under the heading "Advertising Copy Must Be Cleaned Up," Advertising Age reports the recent convention of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, where the past president declared that advertising as is now being practiced is losing public confidence. Another speaker made a statement to the effect that adjectives were being handled so carelessly, it was becoming increasingly difficult to distinguish copy advertising the same product.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? Seems the agency men are discovering that superlatives and wild claims are not selling merchandise. But to find that out, they could have saved a lot of time, carfare, and wear and tear on the tonsils by merely phoning any picture company's advertising department.

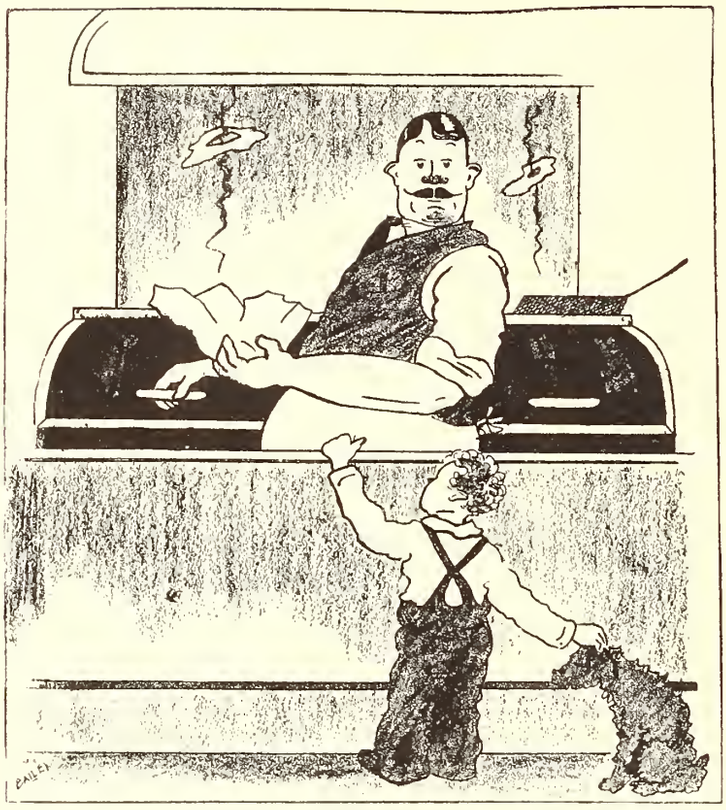
THOSE FUNNY FUNNIES

For the seekers of something real fancy in exploitation, we recommend the Scripps-Howard syndicate strip, "Freckles and His Friends." Here only recently a continuity was created that ran for a number of weeks around the misadventures of a jeweler who had become involved in what was supposed to be an elaborate stunt to put over a picture.



And who do you think came to town to put over the gag? Well, none other than the star himself, appearing incognito but in person, no doubt much to the surprise, if not the amazement of the manager who seems to have had nothing at all to do with the campaign build-up.

As we live, we learn. And not the least part of this learning is, in addition to being good for the box office, exploitation is also good for a laugh—perhaps in the above case a much heartier laugh than the comic stripper ever intended.

Stein Builds Up Polish Trade on "Earth Turns"

A smart drive for the local Polish trade highlighted Manager Louis Stein's "As the Earth Turns" campaign at the Ritz, Newark, N. J. Stressing the fact that the hero of the picture was the son of Polish immigrants, Louis invited their leaders to a preview, wrote personally to the various societies, thus drumming up extra business.

Managers situated likewise will no doubt take advantage of this angle, and the Warner Theatres' exploitation bulletin suggests that this be kept in mind for exploitation on "The Key," which has an Irish background and therefore should be of interest to patrons originating from the Emerald Isle.

Poag Prints Theatre Congratulatory Card

P. J. Poag, managing the Princess and Strand Theatres in Del Rio, Texas, informs us his houses have their own printing plant, which got plenty of play recently when he got out neat looking congratulatory cards in gilt and mailed them to the high school graduating class with an invitation to come as Poag's guest to see the show.

Once a month he gets out an eight page leaflet in the form of a program listing his forthcoming attractions for the ensuing month, while weekly "P. J." issues a little handy three by four program for what he calls his "hometowners." The eight pager is mailed out to a list covering box-holders in all nearby towns and he tells us these are held onto as a ready reference when his patrons feel the urge to attend.

Evens Promotes Realtors On "Rothschild" Contest

Manager H. W. Evens, Loew's State, St. Louis, Mo., promoted a telegram from George Arliss in which that star highly endorsed the possibilities of the present day real estate market for investors who would follow the "Rothschild" example. With this, Evens went before the local real estate exchange and sold the membership on the idea of a contest with $100 in prizes and tickets to "House of Rothschild" offered for the best answers in 200 words or less to the question, "Why invest now in real estate?"

An extensive newspaper campaign was put behind this with three full pages by the realtors in which the picture and theatre were mentioned prominently. Many feature stories and cuts on the contest were also carried, and heralds paid for by the exchange were distributed at the theatre.

Other highlights of the campaign were co-op ads by leading banks, serialization in the local Jewish Record, grocery windows on the Maxwell House tea tiein, Western Union jumbo telegram hookin and book displays in the leading stores.

In keeping with his uniformly good work, Ed Finney, Monogram ad and publicity head, has created an attractive announcement book on the coming season's Monogram product. Messages from President W. Doc Lee Hits Hard On 'Revolt' Opening

Arthur Mayer, operator of the Rialto, New York City, tore loose on "World in Revolt" with a campaign engineered by the dynamic "Doctor" Joe Lee that included complete coverage in the city and suburbs and among numerous foreign language elements to whom the exploitation was also directed.

Over 125 suburban newspapers were contacted in addition to the metropolitan press, Joe reporting 110 of the outlying publications running stories, the editors of which were allowed the usual courtesies. To further insure the spotting of this publicity a line to this effect was carried at the head of the copy which aided in obtaining the desired coverage.

As the picture deals with scenes and events in all parts of the world, effective cooperation was secured from the metropolitan and suburban foreign language papers, over 60 carrying special stories and cuts. Radio tieups were made on various German, Italian and Jewish hours, and a dinner party was thrown for editors of the foreign press and the more prominent of their group leaders, all of whom aided in spreading the word among their countrymen.

Joe Also Goes Chinese

Lee's heralds were circusy and informative. They were distributed in every foreign section, different copy and art appealing to each group of nationals, stressing the events and scenes in the picture which would be of interest to each different element. This was carried out vigorously in the Chinese sections, where pictorial displays were used in addition to advertising in Chinese papers.

As the Rialto is at one of the world's busiest corners, Joe concentrated on a flash front, the accompanying photo showing what was used to stop the crowds. Over 650 stills were reported to have been posted. The roof sign was in keeping with the front flash, the giant board measuring 125 feet long by 55 deep.

Knowing his Rialto audience, Lee dug up the old line, "Owing to the sensational nature of the picture, children under 16 will not be admitted," using this in all his copy. However, he realizes that the less sanguinary angles the picture contains will no doubt be used effectively in other spots, not so cosmopolitan, where the background of the story will be plugged from other, and more peaceful slants.

MANAGERS BATTLE FOR SIXTH QUIGLEY AWARD

June Marks Half-Way Point in 1934 Quigley Competition; Montreal Ceremony Honors the Winners of May Plaque

Six months ago, on January 1, 1934, the Motion Picture Herald, through the Managers' Round Table Club, inaugurated the Martin Quigley Awards—silver plaques, given monthly to the theatre manager turning in the campaign selected by the judges as the most meritorious of all those received during the month.

Five months have come and gone, four theatremen have already received this distinct honor, and the fifth Quigley Award was to be presented to Manager Gene Curtis and Exploiteer Ken Finlay of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, on Wednesday, at a luncheon given in their honor by the Montreal Advertising Club, according to word from the Arrangements Committee, as this department goes to press.

The Mayor of Montreal was to take a leading part in the ceremonies, and other civic prominent Canadian leaders were also to attend. Full details and photo will be carried in next issue.

The month of June, the sixth of the Quigley project, marks the half way point in the 1934 Round Table competition to encourage the efforts of able theatremen, and to win them fitting recognition for their endeavors from the leaders of the industry. That the latter has been obtained is indicated by the long list of judges, representing the executive heads of various distribution, exhibition and advertising departments. Many of these leaders have already served upon the monthly judging committees, and others await to be called upon.

Managers in every part of the world are invited to participate in the Quigley Awards competition. All campaigns on all product are eligible for the monthly prizes, and equal consideration will be given every entry, big or small. This means that the neighborhood theatre has as much chance to win as the big de luxers, and this is proven by the winners of the previous months, who in most cases are managers of theatres in small towns.

To illustrate: the January Award went to Ken Grimes, of Morgantown, West Va., the February prize to Howard Sweet, of East Lansing, Mich., the March plaque to Nevin McCord, of Boise, Idaho. Jacksonville, Fla., finished first in April, through Walter Golden's efforts, and the May story is told above.

The rules are few and easy to follow. We reprint them in the next column for the information of those unfamiliar with the regulations. Read these instructions, and prepare to send in a campaign this month. You stand as good a chance to win as the next fellow.—MIKE.

Rules and Information

A QUIGLEY AWARD—a silver plaque, is presented each month during 1934 for the theatre exploitation campaign selected by the judges as possessing the highest merit of all those submitted to the Managers' Round Table Club on pictures played between the first and last days of that month. . . .

Hiehle Makes Regular Four Star Hookup

Edward J. Hiehle, Midland Theatre, Newark, Ohio, has a stunt that he pulls on all pictures that rate four stars in the Liberty Magazine.

Special hand bills are printed stressing the four star rating and these are distributed house to house by the Liberty boys (see photo) who ring doorbells and hand in the bill with the remark "The Liberty Magazine of blank date gives blank picture a four star rating. May I bring you a copy?"

After this distribution has been made, a theatre party is given to all the magazine carriers, who march to the theatre with banners bearing copy and playdates. Incidentally, that's Ed standing at the right of photo.

Bernstein Makes Wire Tieup on "Rothschild"

Jules Bernstein at the Loew Theatre in Toronto, Canada, effected a tie-up with the Canadian National Telegraph Company on his "House of Rothschild" date by having teletype machine installed in lobby and distributing plug telegrams to patrons run off on the apparatus. Wire was from Arliss reading that it was the finest thing the star had ever done and regretting his inability to be present at the opening. Special window displays were promoted in thirty telegraph branches.

A very neat front (see photo) was turned out by Bernstein and part of his newspaper campaign consisted of a serialization of the story in one of the leading evening papers that ran two weeks in advance of opening and during engagement. Stickers in Hebrew were pasted on the front page of all daily Hebrew publications and a special story was run by the editorial service covering forty-eight dailies throughout Canada before opening of the picture.

Bill Hendricks Suggests Effective Broadcasting Gags

In Howard Waugh's Warner Theatre Southern zone managers' manual, Bill Hendricks suggests a few radio ideas on "20 Million Sweethearts" which of course can be used on other attractions. The first is a synthetic broadcasting station effected by placing a P. A. system in a vacant window with loudspeakers outside, the broadcasting to be presented by local talent.

The second is a tieup with radio dealer whereby a radio is placed on sidewalk in lobby or in front of theatre. A microphone is concealed in the display, or a dynamic speaker will serve the same purpose. The mike is connected with another concealed radio some distance away to which also a microphone is attached and connected to the lobby flash.

Patrons are then requested to ask questions of the "mystic radio," the replies forthcoming from the concealed microphone. Queries can be planted regarding the attraction being advertised, players in same, etc., in addition to the legitimate questions that will no doubt be asked.

Joe Says Goodby With "Tarzan" Swim Contest

Before Joe Rosenfield left the Paramount in Omaha, Neb., for the Music Hall in Seattle, he put over a campaign on "Tarzan and His Mate" that, from all accounts went over to excellent results. Joe arranged a Weissmuller swimming contest with the Y.M.C.A. with winners receiving prize tickets to see "Tarzan." All "Y" members were notified of the contest which took place on the Saturday afternoon of the picture's run.

A forty-foot truck was promoted by Rosenfield and rigged up as a float with a cage planted on it in which was a baby cub and monkeys (see photo), truck touring the city. Eight negroes dressed in garb of jungle hunters lolled around the truck striking ferocious attitudes.

Lobby was dressed with foliage and greens and a background of painted jungle with 24-sheet cut outs of Weissmuller and O'Sullivan attracted due notice. A tie-up with a bread company netted several thousand stickers distributed with the bread. Window displays on "Tarzan" books and sweaters were also effected as was a contest on coloring a line drawing photograph of "Tarzan" in one of the weekly papers.

On the outer edge of Kassis' vertical sign, which measures four feet wide by twenty-five high, palm leaves were placed to further carry out the jungle effect. Other stunts that were put on were displays in all beauty shops and drug stores; six sheets placed at business intersections and one sheet and window cards in surrounding towns.

Elmer Brient's Procedure On Plug 'Phone Calls

Members are sitting up nights to devise ways and means of perfecting the unsolicited house-to-house phone calls so as not to antagonize busy housewives called away from their duties to hear that a certain picture is playing at a certain theatre.

Manager Elmer Brient of Loew's Theatre, Richmond, Va., has worked out the following procedure which he states has brought no unfavorable kickbacks. Elmer engages two experienced operators who call numbers in the conventional manner, and their pitch is along these lines:

"Dear, instead of going to Blank's this afternoon, wouldn't you rather see Clark Gable in 'Manhattan Melodrama' at Loew's? Every one says it's a very good picture and I'd like to go. Wouldn't you?"

The party on the other end naturally assumes a wrong number has been called, and thus the usual resentment is avoided, while Brient's object has been attained—to sell his attractions and date. The idea sounds good enough for duplication for a now and then use. Operators to put over the "act," however, must be carefully selected.

Klinger Illuminates "Viva Villa" Front

When Paul O. Klingler, Rialto Theatre, Lewistown, Pa., played "Viva Villa" he turned out a mighty good looking front, night scene illustrated herewith. Three baby spots played on the giant head of Beery directly over the marquee and the title in over-sized letters on Beery's hat was illuminated with 50 10-watt lights that flashed on and off. At top of building can be seen the theatre name in flasher lights.

Laby Dresses Girls and Staff for "Men in White"

George Laby, Victory Theatre, Holyoke, Mass., pays up his club dues by sending along his campaign for "Men in White" with some good stunts, one of which was to station girls dressed in nurses' uniforms in the lobby distributing "health cards." These cards were three by five gotten up in prescription form and carried a red circle with directions to blow on the spot and if it turned blue to see a doctor. Of course, it didn't turn and that's why the stunt went over so well. George said many of the customers stopped to get extra cards.

Topping his "nurse" gag, Laby dressed the service staff (see photo) as internes for a week in advance with ribbon across their chests reading "Men in White." On opening day these boys made a house to house canvass, advising all mothers to see the picture and left the red-spotted cards as a gentle reminder. These health cards were also placed in dentists' and doctors' waiting rooms.

Jules did a nice piece of work on "Wild Cargo" by tying up with his local school shoe fund, the members of which sold 4,000 tickets, collecting a percentage for the fund to buy shoes for underprivileged children. Addison's Crew Costumes Barker on "Viva" Bally

Art Catlin, assistant to H. M. Addison, Division manager of Loew's in Cleveland, Ohio, sends along the campaign put over with Milt Harris and Addie's State Theatre crew when they played "Viva Villa." The Mexican atmosphere in front of the theatre was carried out by a barker in costume (see photo) and special tabloid newspapers were distributed in homes and office buildings by young ladies attired in Mexican dress.

Mexican and American menus in hotels and restaurants bore theatre and playdates. Some further highlights were dramatization of "Viva" over radio, spot announcements on stations and street car hangers. The boys added a light touch to the campaign by having the girls give away Mexican jumping beans.

"Viva Villa" coins were distributed to patrons and school children and Mexican hats were given to the kiddies.

A Beery drawing contest was held two days in advance; Sunday paper carried Beery life story with laughing head and the foreign papers were also promoted for three notices. Restaurants, night clubs and hotels had special four star "Villa" dishes clipped to regular menus with the recommendation that the patrons after enjoying their eats at the Blank restaurant, go see the picture—theatre and playdates, included in copy.

Wally inserted free ads in the hotel guest guides which were placed in all apartment and residential hotels in the city.

THE FAN MAGAZINE DISCUSSION

HERMAN G. WEINBERG,

Managing Director
Little Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

It seems to me obvious that an appreciable increase in fan magazine circulation should have a favorable effect in boosting box office receipts, as it must seem to any one. There is no question that the influence of the motion picture fan periodicals exerts a tremendous influence on the potential movie-goer. These magazines, with their semi-erotic illustrations, their glamorous recounting of the "private lives" of the stars, the almost legendary aura with which they surround even the most banal of movie lights (not to mention even the transfiguration from an earthly to a divine being that such major lights as a Garbo undergo at the hands of the shrewd publicity experts) cannot help but make even the more sophisticated film fan eager to see "what all the shouting is about." Indeed, there is probably no other single species of trade publication so shrewdly calculated to seduce the mind into purchasing a commodity than the fan magazines, and, whether they recognize it or no, the exhibitors throughout America owe as much to their widespread influence as to any other single influence. Offhand, I should say that I cannot think of any one influence that can scarcely be compared to them save, possibly, for the narcotic effect of the pictures themselves which induce a state of susceptibility to further pictures of that ilk through the hypnotic power of suggestion.

HERMAN WEINBERG

Endorses Publisher Cooperation

The methods of affecting a 100 per cent increase in fan magazine circulation, suggested by Mr. Bassin, seem practical and sane and by no means fantastic. Certainly, publishers should be more than willing to offer reduced subscription rates to "doctors, dentists, beauty parlors, barbers," etc. (Mr. Bassin's own selection—and a good one) where "time hangs heavy" on the customer's hands. The first two, especially, who more likely than not offer their waiting clients such diverting literature as the Medical Journal of August, 1906, the Dentists' Manual of February, 1921, a copy of the Saturday Evening Post, the Elks' magazine and the new issue of the Physicians' Supplies Catalogue.

Every one, high-brow, middle-brow and low-brow alike, does not mind perusing a fan magazine. Since it is among the most agreeable forms of stimulating the eye (and since every one goes to movies on some occasion or other) you have a greater potential increase in subscribers (or at least readers) for fan magazines than for any other type of periodical.

Ergo—I think it's a good idea and exhibitors should get behind it at once. They have nothing to lose and everything to gain. By no means can the fan magazines be regarded as any sort of "menace." The percentage of pannings that they mete out to films is almost negligible, since they are tied up so much with advertising. On the contrary, fan magazines have come to the point where they are to be regarded almost as "house organs" of the major film companies. Films are more likely to be over-praised than under-praised, so the exhibitor has nothing to fear from that score.

If the exhibitors make a concerted effort to increase the circulation of the fan magazines, one can very well imagine that the publishers will have no objection certainly, and if it becomes a question of "understanding" each other on the issue, I am sure they can come together without any trouble.

MEMBERS ACCEPT OUR INVITATION

In the issue of June 9, Charley Bassin spoke his piece on the benefits of cooperation with the fan magazines. This Round Tabler urged that theatremen get behind the circulation of the fan publications for the general purpose of building grosses, stating that showmen's efforts in this direction would make more readers picture minded and picture conscious.

The suggestion evidently has started something, and on this page are a few of the reactions, for and agin', from various members. Additional letters will be run in the next issue, and of course our columns are wide open to the opinions of others of our readers on this subject. —MIKE

EDWARD J. HIEHLE, Manager

Midland, Newark, Ohio

Place my vote in favor of Mr. Bassin's plan.

At the same time, why not endeavor to have the so-called critics discard the star system of estimating screenplay values as entertainment?

The fact that the critics sell the idea that their individual opinion, signified by three and four star ratings, is the last and final judgment of entertainment value for his or her fan magazine readers, impairs the drawing power of every two and three-star picture.

Most reviewers by star method rate two stars as good, three as excellent, four as extraordinary. A two-star picture therefore should be good entertainment for the vast majority of film fans, with three and four greater in proportion. However, today readers of magazine movie ratings have the idea that unless a picture is awarded four stars, it is not worth bothering about. I heard a recent comment from one of our patrons stating, "Liberty only gave it three stars." What do they want? Not interested in visiting the theatre because Liberty only gave it an excellent rating—"Hell's Fire."

Why not sell the critics the idea of giving the picture audience values as entertainment instead of picking at flaws which 99 out of every 100 fail to notice?

Maybe this is an impossible situation, but theatres throughout the land lose many ticket buyers because of star ratings. And the dreadful part of it all is that the same 99 out of every 100 would get real honest-to-goodness enjoyment out of the very picture given one and two-star ratings, if they would only take the time and trouble to go see it.

How many movie fans have said "And to think I almost missed seeing this most enjoyable picture, because Miss or Mr. So-and-So only gave it two stars!"

JOE SALMON, Manager

Riverside, New York City

My attitude is against the plan of Charlie Bassin for these reasons:

If the criticism of the owners or critics in the various fan magazines would be constructive and unbiased, then it is a foregone conclusion that three out of every five pictures would receive unfavorable criticism. So the result of this would be that the majority of these anticipated 30,000,000 readers would attend those pictures receiving good publicity and taboo those productions receiving unfavorable publicity. This the movie magnates and producers of pictures would certainly not stand for. What would be the natural step for them to pursue? First, they would threaten the movie magazines to withdraw their paid advertising. Second, they would endeavor to purchase a controlling interest in this or that magazine. Eventually, the magazines would be subsidized directly or indirectly and then the criticism of the magazines would be worthless. When this condition arises, that powerful good is ended.

JOE SALMON

Does Not Favor Plan

The writer has always believed that pictures would either succeed or fail on their own merits or demerits. We must remember that the fan magazines are dependent on the reading public for their financial support and it is more to their interest to cater to the motion picture public than to offend them by untrue and biased criticisms. Personally, I cannot see much benefit to devote so much energy, thought and time to increase the circulation of the movie magazines of the country and feel that if they continue in their own efforts to increase their circulation and work out their own salvation, in the end it will be much better for all concerned.

We have enough problems at the present time without branching out into the publication field.

ADDITIONAL POSTER IDEAS

South Dakota Artist Gives Some Poster Suggestions on the Uses of Composition, Colors and Oils

by C. M. GRIEPENBURG

Even though posters differ in some respects to the other branches of art, the same art fundamentals apply such as composition, perspective, figure, color, etc. Every theatre poster artist should know the principle of perspective, know the color wheel, composition and know just where the eyes, nose and mouth are located on a correctly drawn face. A good poster consists of a well drawn head or figure, good composition, good coloring and good lettering. If any of the above are neglected, the effect of the whole poster suffers.

Composition is the proper arrangement of elements with good balance and the idea of the poster brought out in a pleasing manner. There are no hardfast rules for composition, but the finest of posters are of feeling and trained judgment. The excellence of poster work is measured by the artist's feeling for relations. He must have the ability to arrange and place so that the final result will be harmonious.

Usually a good poster does not have fine detail. Detail will not make a poster if there is no arrangement. Equal spaces are monotonous. All spaces should be unequal in size and shape. Use big shapes so that the poster will be well balanced. Try to bring the light masses into the dark and the dark into the light. It is obvious that the art in your composition will lie in placing these shapes in good relation to each other.

A good way to develop the feeling of good composition is to draw shapes in a haphazard way. Add other shapes and study whether they look well with the first one. You will find that one combination will look well, while another will look awkward.

Subordination

Subordination is another great constructive idea in posters. This is produced when all parts of the poster are related to one dominating element which determines the character of the whole poster.

While several books could be written on color, I am going to write just a few suggestions about color as applied to theatre poster work.

A complementary color scheme is a color it complements and the direct neighbor of one or both. An analogous scheme is a color scheme of three or four successive colors on the color wheel.

Yellow, blue and red are the primary colors. Intermediate colors are yellow green, blue green, blue violet, red orange and yellow orange. Exciting colors are deep orange, scarlet, yellow and crimson.

Subduing colors are violets and blue. A few emotional values of colors are: red—passion, danger, excitement; orange—heat; yellow—gaiety, warmth, lividness; green—neutral, spring, cool, peace; blue—truth, love, cool; violet—rich, royalty; white—purity; black—death, mystery.

A color when used with its complement gives brilliancy. To grey a color mix with its complement. If you are painting a head in bright yellow, using the complementary scheme, grey your violet for background so that the head will stand out.

Oil Painting

In building a house, a carpenter does not build the roof first. He starts with a foundation and then a shell. The same principle applies to painting in oils. Build the painting up by first putting in the big masses of dark and light, gradually working up to the detail. Squint your eyes at the object you are to paint and you will see these large masses. Do not try to see how prettily you can blend the shadows. If you build the painting up in this way, the finished work will be blended when viewed from a distance.

As Lionel Barrymore is famous for his character roles, I think it best to always portray him in the role he represents in the picture. In my poster of "Strangers Return," I used a head of Barrymore with the beard. In the backround, I used a country scene done in the manner of a design. I used fresh, clean coloring, suggestive of country life. I used a more appropriate style of lettering which was heavier.

For "Queen Christina" I made oil paintings for the smaller posters. On this picture I made a display which proved to be an eye-catcher. I used a cutout of Garbo which stood out two inches from the background. As Garbo is a true blonde, my basic color on this head was yellow. The background was a rich blue violet foil paper. The letters "Garbo" were 12 inches high by 8 inches deep, faced in silver. The title was on a white cutout of a crown and lions.

For "Bolero" I used black, red, orange yellow and yellow for the heads and figures. The background was in blues suggestive of the background of a night club.

I do not deem it wise to always use a complementary scheme. Monotones, analogous, black and white are just as adaptable to certain pictures.

Stein Seizes Opportunity

Henry O'Neill, one of the Warner character stars, recently visited Orange, N. J., which allowed Manager Jack Stein of the Embassy, in that spot, an opportunity to sell this artist on the idea of making personal appearances at the theatre. O'Neill did so, giving interesting sidelights on Hollywood life. Jack built up the date for a week ahead and reported some satisfactory box office increase for his efforts.

Reese's Merchant Tie-Up

Reese Puts On Shaving Cream Giveaway

Working on the box-office premise that the men should get a break as well as the women, Horace Reese, Spruce Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., tied up with a shaving cream company to give away a tube of their product to every man attending.

A display was placed in the lobby (see photo) for a week in advance and Horace plugged, in throw-aways and on his screen, the fact that it was the men's turn to get something for nothing.

certainly needs no introduction since he was one of the winners of the Quigley Awards. However, since every member must be formally introduced to the Club through this page, we take pleasure in welcoming him. Nevin is manager of the Granada Theatre in Boise, Idaho and was born in Santa Fe, New Mexico. He started in showbusiness when he was thirteen and has managed theatres in Rockford, Ill.; Davenport, Ia., and Chicago. A pretty active young man, and he's going to be more active in our section.

owns the Casino Theatre in Marshalltown, Ia., the house that Olson manages. Roskopf has only managed his own theatres, having started in showbusiness at the age of twenty-six in a house he had purchased. Between you and your manager, we'll be very much disappointed if we're not kept posted on your activities.

manages the Strand Theatre in Sulligent, Ala., the first member from that town to join the Club, and, as we always tell our boys from towns that haven't been represented on our pages, it's up to you to keep us informed of what's doing. In addition to managing the house, Gene owns it, so he must know what it's all about.

is the advertising manager of the State Theatre in Barnesville, Ohio. He tells us that he has been in various fields, vaudeville, and now the picture end, and every week he finds something of interest in our pages. He's got the right idea, too, because he says he believes everyone in any profession should work in harmony with all others in the same line of work. Do you know that our Club slogan is "One for All and All for one," Bob? Now that you have your pin and have been formally admitted to the organization we're hoping you'll prove to be one of our most active contributors.

comes from Aransas Pass, Texas, where he is the assistant manager of the Rialto Theatre and is not to be confused with our other member by the same name from up in Canada. Listen, Jack, you'd better send some stuff in to us so that the two Nelson's can be represented. No relation to the other Jack, are you?

is out in St. Louis, Mo., at the Aubert Theatre which he manages. That makes the St. Louis Amusement Co. just about 100% Round Table. We had a visit the other day from Al Zimbalist, too bad you couldn't have come along with him. Burke entered theatre business when he was nineteen years old and has been at it ever since. Suppose you start a little lively competition in your circuit and we'll give you the breaks in the pages.

WILLIAM BERNFIELD

is no stranger to our pages, but we have to give him this formal introduction nonetheless. Bernie is the United Artists exploiteer in Kansas City, Mo., and we are waiting for his visit to New York which he tells us will be some time in July. You can't come too soon, Bernie, we are always delighted to meet our members. Why don't you bring Jake with you? Bernie apparently knows showbusiness from every angle, for he owned his own house, was in amateur theatricals, booked and reviewed vaudeville acts, he's an oldtimer in the business, having started in it and is still holding his own.

acts as assistant manager of the Poli Theatre in New Haven, Conn., that makes the Poli 100% Round Table with Bob's application for membership. He's done plenty of m.c'ing; having been with Vaughn De Leath at New Haven and done considerable announcing for radio stars during personal appearances. He was also responsible for instituting the service staff at the Fox Poli Theatre in Meriden. With your fine start, Bob, we'll be willing to gamble that you are going places and will be heard from.

who is the manager of the Warner Hawthorne Theatre in Newark, N. J., joins the Club in proper fashion. He sends along his application for membership together with his subscription to the HERALD. We've been trying our best to get over to Jersey to pay you boys a visit, but so far haven't had much luck. However, we'll try our darndest to make it soon and if in the meantime you get over here, be sure to come in and get acquainted. We know most of the Warner Jersey boys and a new addition is always welcome.

assistant manager of the Arena Theatre in New York City, is certainly close enough to Club headquarters to pay us a visit occasionally. Remember, Rollin, the welcome mat is brushed up and we shall await your visit with anticipation. Shall we see you soon?

is the manager and owner of the Uptown Theatre in Strong City, Kansas. Well, Charlie, you're the first member we have from Strong City, so the responsibility of keeping us posted on what's what in your territory will have to be on your shoulders. Can we count on you?

is the owner-manager of the Piedmont Theatre in Piedmont, Mo. "A.B." took an electrical engineering course and has always been interested in projection. As a matter of fact, he is so sold on showbusiness that he wishes he had entered it fifteen years sooner than he did. You ought to be able to keep us informed of your doings, Jeffris, which we imagine would be of interest to the entire membership.

joins the Club from Bell, Cal., where he manages the Fox Alcazar Theatre. We've had members from your fair city before, Harry, so you have something to live up to. Remember, Harry, your Club dues consist of sending in your exploitation stunts, so we're hoping you'll pay up your membership soon. We haven't heard anything from you yet, but we're sure it won't be long before we hear from you.

manages the Casino Theatre in Marshalltown, Iowa, and apparently he hasn't strayed far from home, because "R.D." was born in Marshalltown, educated there and entered showbusiness at the tender age of fifteen, peddling handbills and ushering at the Strand. Later he went to the Rialto and Princess in Sioux City as Chief of Service, a few more changes and he wound up at the Casino, an independent house.

manages the Fox Belmont Theatre out in Los Angeles, Cal., and he certainly has the right idea so far as the Club is concerned, because he says he wants to join because of the wonderful spirit of cooperation for which he is glad to do his share. Well, we're going to make you live up to that promise, Cardas, so expect a letter from us if we don't hear from you pretty soon.

is a welcome addition to the Club. He assists an old time and active member, Ralph E. Phillips at the Paramount Theatre in Mitchell, S. Dakota. Roy has acted as billposter, usher and doorman having been made assistant manager last November. Well, you have a great superior and one from whom you can learn plenty. Let's hear from the two of you.

THE CODE QUESTION BOX

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Immediate reply is being made direct to the many letters which Motion Picture Herald is receiving from exhibitors and distributors in the field, and from others, in which various questions are asked concerning certain doubtful phases of the Motion Picture Code. In addition, such code questions and the answers submitted are published as a regular service.

For obvious reasons, the letters will appear anonymously. However, the originals will remain on file.

Answers to questions about the Code are submitted only after consultation with authorities familiar with the technicalities of the document.

No. 46—DISPUTE OVER WAGES FOR PROJECTIONISTS

QUESTION—I am employed as a projectionist with an independent theatre which is non-union. There are three chain theatres in this community that are union houses. They are employing union projectionists of the IATSE exclusively, and have been for six or seven years, but they do not have a contract with the union, either written or oral. The chain theatres are paying $35 per week for the same class house as the independent theatre which is paying $18.

On January 1 I filed a complaint with the NRA Compliance Board, asking for the union scale, salary, and hours as of August 23, 1933. The secretary of the state exhibitor organization informed the manager of the independent theatre that he does not have to pay the union scale, as there is no existing contract between the chain theatres and the IATSE.

The chairman of the NRA Compliance Board seems to think that as long as the chain theatres are employing members of an organization that is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and are paying a living wage, then the independent should have to pay the scale also, contract or no contract, and as a matter of fair competition. Should I receive back salary to December 7?

What is the answer?—TEXAS.

ANSWER—The question of a contract is not involved. Nor is the payment of the proper scale a matter of fair competition. It is purely a labor provision of the code.

The code says that all projectionists regularly employed shall receive not less than the minimum wage and work no longer than the maximum number of hours per week which were in force in a locality as of August 23, 1933, which wages and hours were the prevailing wages and hours of projectionists in that locality of an organization that is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

In the event that any dispute should arise as to what was the minimum scale of wages and maximum number of weekly working hours as of August 23, 1933, then the code specifically says that such a dispute shall be arbitrated by the exhibitor employer and his employees.

If the question at issue arises with non-union projectionists, as in this case, the code says that the procedure for arbitration shall be as follows: The non-union employees shall appoint one representative, the Local IATSE Union shall appoint one representative, and the exhibitor shall appoint one, and this committee of three shall constitute the arbitration board for the purpose of settling this single dispute. The committee shall examine the facts and shall unanimously determine the existing scale of wages and the maximum number of hours for the projectionists involved, and, in the event that they cannot unanimously agree, then they shall mutually appoint an impartial person who shall be empowered to sit with the board, review the facts, and officially determine such dispute, with the proviso, however, that in the event the three representatives cannot mutually agree upon the impartial person, then the Division Administrator (Sol Rosenblatt), or the Administrator, shall designate such impartial person.

Pending the determination of any such dispute, the rate of wages then paid by the exhibitor and the maximum number of hours then in force (if not more than 40 hours weekly), shall not be changed so as to decrease wages or increase hours.

In order to effectuate the foregoing provisions, and pending the determination of the dispute, the employees agree that they shall not strike, and the exhibitors agree that they shall not lock out such employees.

The scale of wages and the schedule of hours which were in effect at the three union houses in this locality as of August 23, 1933, apparently would prevail.

If the exhibitor will not abide by the decision of the arbitration board mentioned above (he has the right to appeal to the Code Authority, or to the Division Administrator), or if he refuses to abide by a decision of the NRA Regional Board, then the Regional Labor Board is empowered to refer the matter to the NRA National Labor Board at Washington, to force compliance.

No. 47—WAGES, HOURS FOR PORTER AND USHER

QUESTION—I am employed in a theatre and work the following hours: 8 A. M. to 12 Noon, as porter, 7 days a week; 6 P. M. to 10 P. M. as usher—total 52 hours. Salary is $15 per week.

Please let me know what hours I should work, and what my salary should be under the code.—NEW YORK.

ANSWER—The motion picture code does not specifically mention combination duties such as porter-usher, but it does mention each separately.

The code says that the maximum number of working hours weekly for a porter and/or usher shall not exceed 40.

With respect to employees regularly employed as porters in large cities (as in this case), the code says that they shall not receive less than 35 cents per hour, and with respect to employees regularly employed as ushers in large cities, their wage shall not be less than 25 cents per hour.

The weekly wage for the combination job of porter-usher may be computed on the basis of 25 cents per hour for the number of hours during which the employee works as usher, and 35 cents per hour for the number of hours which he works as porter—but the total number of hours shall not exceed 40 weekly.

No. 48—SCALE FOR REGULAR AND RELIEF OPERATOR

QUESTION—Would you please give me the wage scale for both regular and relief operators in this town of 11,300 population? This is a non-union town.—SOUTH CAROLINA.

ANSWER—The motion picture code says that the wage scale for projectionists regularly employed shall be no less than the minimum scale which was in effect in a locality as of August 23, 1933. The code does not mention relief operators, but it is assumed that the same scale would also affect them.

No. 49—HOURS AND WAGES FOR USHER-DOORMAN

QUESTION—I am working as doorman 25 hours and as usher 22 hours per week—total 47 hours—and I am receiving $7.50 per week. What wages should I receive? If I file a complaint with the Regional Labor Board, have I any protection of my position?—NEW YORK.

ANSWER—The motion picture code does not specifically mention combination duties such as doorman-usher, but it does mention each separately.

The code says that the maximum number of working hours for doormen and ushers shall not exceed 40 weekly.

With respect to employees regularly employed as doormen in large cities (as in this case), the code says that they shall not receive less than 35 cents per hour, and employees regularly employed as ushers shall not receive less than 25 cents per hour.

The weekly wage for the combination duties of doorman-usher may be computed on the basis of 25 cents per hour for the number of hours during which the employee works as usher, and 35 cents per hour for the number of hours during which he works as doorman—but the total number of hours shall not exceed 40 weekly.

The President recently issued an Executive Order giving complete protection to an employee making a complaint or giving information concerning code violations on the part of his employer.

EASTMAN Super-sensitive Panchromatic Negative has a three-fold distinction. Its introduction has led to more significant advances than any other film ...excepting only Eastman's original motion picture negative. Under the expert hands of the cameraman it has in the last three years photographed a great majority of the biggest screen hits. And...because of this record of accomplishment...it now enjoys by far the widest preference among all motion picture negative films. Eastman Kodak Co. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)
